The presence of the deleterious chemical in the garment was a hidden & latent defect, & could not be detected by any examination that could reasonably be made; nothing happened between the making of the garment & its being worn to change its condition; & the garment was made by the manufacturers for the purpose of being worn exactly as it was worn in fact by applt.:—Held: those facts established a duty to take care as between the manufacturers & applt. for the breach of which the manufacturers were liable in tort. 364e. —— —— —— Onus of proof.]—Pltf. bought a motor car fitted with a "Triplex Toughened Safety Glass" windscreen of defts.' manufacture. When the car was being used, about a year after the date of purchase, the windscreen suddenly & for no apparent reason broke into many fragments & injured the occupants of the car:—Held: in these circumstances the manufacturers were not liable in damages, for the following reasons: the lapse of time between the purchase of the car & the occurrence of the accident; the possibility that the glass might have been strained when screwed into its frame; the opportunity for examination by the intermediate seller; & the breaking of the glass might have been caused by something other than a defect in manufacture.—EVANS v. TRIPLEX SAFETY GLASS CO., LTD., [1936] 1 All E. — Goods not tested by retailer.]—A schoolgirl was carrying out a chemical experiment with chemicals supplied by the teacher of the chemistry class, when an explosion occurred whereby she was severely injured. The experiment was one for the making of oxygen by heating a mixture of potassium chlorate & manganese dioxide, a perfectly harmless experiment. The teacher had purchased the chemicals from the second defts., receiving as manganese dioxide a black powder so labelled in a packet. In fact the black powder was a mixture of antimony sulphide & manganese dioxide, indistinguishable from manganese dioxide to the eye, but dangerous when heated with potassium chlorate. The second defts. had purchased this powder as manganese dioxide from the third party, whose invoice stated: "The above goods are accurate as described on leaving our works but they must be examined & tested by user before use. The above goods are not invoiced as suitable for any purpose but they are of the nature & quality described." The second defts. had carried out no test on the powder & had not advised the teacher that an examination or test would be advisable. The second defts. knew that the powder would be used for the purpose of school experiments, but they had not told the third party that the powder might be so used. The schoolgirl recovered damages, in an action for negligence, from the second defts., who sought an indemnity or contribution from the third party:—Held: (1) as the third party had no notice of the intended user of the powder, which might have been resold for a variety of purposes or in innocuous compounds or mixtures, & as the second defts. had not carried out a test, as the invoice prescribed, & which the second defts. had ample opportunity for doing, the third party was not liable to indemnify the second defts.; (2) as the third party could not have been successfully sued by the schoolgirl, the third party was not liable to contribute as a joint tortfeasor.—KUBACH v. HOLLANDS, [1937] 3 All E. 364g. —— —— —— Hair dye.]—Pltf. had been in the habit of having her hair dyed with henna at the second deft.'s shop. The second deft. suggested that pltf.'s hair should be dyed with Oloxo, a dye which she described as harmless, & which was prepared by & bought by the second deft. from the first deft. Pltf. raised objections to the use of such a dye but was assured it was safe to use. Pltf. as the result of the use of the dye had an acute attack of dermatitis & nervous trouble. The first deft. by its agent had warranted the dye as safe, but for trade reasons it had supplied the second deft. through a wholesale hairdressers' sundriesman. A booklet was issued with the dye which stated it was dangerous if used without a skin test; but no warning was given to the second deft. as to the danger. A certain quantity of the dye being purchased by the second deft., she was entitled to & did attend certain lectures & demonstrations given on behalf of the first deft. & the lecturer upon behalf of the co. stated that the co. would indemnify hairdressers using this dye against claims arising out of its use:—Held: (1) pltf. was entitled to recover against the second deft. in contract: (2) pltf. was entitled to recover against the first deft. in tort; (3) the second deft. was entitled to recover from the first deft. damages for breach of contract & those damages were the damages the second deft. had to pay to pltf. in this action & her costs of the action; (4) the indemnity given at the lectures was not made at such a time that it could be considered a part of the contract with the second deft.—PARKER v. OLOXO, LTD. & SENIOR, [1937] 3 All E. Both the male pltf., & the female pltf. who was a passenger in the sidecar, sustained personal injuries. In an action for damages:—Held: defts. were guilty of negligence in fitting the sidecar to the motor cycle, that they were liable to the male pltf. in contract & in tort, & to the female pltf. in tort.—MALFROOT v. NOXAL, LTD. 364l. ——.]—Pltf. was working as an electric welder in a boiler of a steamship when an explosion occurred & steam came in through the furnace door. After one vain attempt he succeeded in making his way through the door. He was badly scalded but suffered far more from shock & was rendered neurasthenic. The escape of steam was due to the fact that in a valve chest a bridge, in which a brass bush fitted, had been put in upside down. The valve had been assembled & fitted by the second defts. Pltf. alleged that both defts. were negligent in that the valve chest was made of cast iron. Against the first defts. he alleged negligence in not taking sufficient precautions against water hammer by securing effective drainage of the steam pipes, & that having brought the steam upon the ship they were liable under the principle of Rylands v. Fletcher for not keeping it under control. Against the second defts. he alleged negligence in wrongly assembling & fitting the valve chest, contending that though there was no privity of contract they were liable in tort for supplying a dangerous article:—Held: there was no negligence in using a valve chest made of cast iron; there was no negligence in the shipowners in not having an improved system of drainage of the steam pipes to exclude the possibility of water hammer; the doctrine of Rylands v. Fletcher was not applicable because there was no escape of the steam off the premises & the steamship owners were not making an unnatural user of their premises; the defective bridge was not a source of danger which the first defts. knew or ought to have known, & they were not liable to pltf. as invitee or licensee; in reassembling the valve with the bridge upside down the second defts. by negligent repair converted an article not dangerous in itself into a dangerous article & they knew of the danger which they were so creating. This imposed upon them a liability for injuries caused to pltf., altogether apart from their liability arising out of their contract with the first defts.—HOWARD v. FURNESS HOULDER ARGENTINE LINES, LTD., & BROWN, LTD., [1936] 2 All E. 389a. Inability to pull up within limits of vision.]—It seems to me that when a man drives a motor car along the road he is bound to anticipate that there may be things & people or animals in the way at any moment, & he is bound to go not faster than will permit of his stopping, or deflecting his course, at any time to avoid anything he sees, after he has seen it. If there is any difficulty in the way of his seeing, like a fog for instance, he must go slower in consequence. In a case like this, where a man is struck without the driver seeing him, the driver, the deft., is in this dilemma; either he was not keeping a sufficient look out, or, if he was keeping the best look out possible, then he was going too fast for the look out that could be kept. I really do not see how it can be said that there was no negligence in running into the back of a man. If he had had better lights or had kept a better look out, the probability is that the accident would never have happened (ROWLATT, J.).—PAGE v. RICHARDS & DRAPER (1920), cited in 149 L. A motor car proceeding over the footpath, which at this point was asphalted as a track for motor cars, & into the parking place, ran down pltf. from behind. Pltf. did not see or hear deft.'s car, but before approaching the asphalted track he looked into the motor park & also on to the roadway, but along the direction opposite to which pltf. was approaching. On approaching the gate, he stopped momentarily facing the motor park. The driver of the car gave no sufficient warning, & came from such a direction that the pltf. was entitled to expect a warning. The car was accelerated just before it struck pltf.:—Held: deft. was guilty of negligence in driving at an excessive speed, & had disabled himself from avoiding the consequences of pltf.'s default in not keeping a more careful look out.—RANKIN v. RICHARDS (1929), S. (2) Too much weight should not be placed upon an admission of fault made by a motorist immediately after a collision in which he was injured.—BROCKIE v. MCKAY, [1934] 1 W. W. R. 725; 2 D. L. R. 690; 42 Man. L. R. 39.—CAN.

A motor car proceeding at a speed of twenty to twenty-five miles an hour along the road, with its headlights on but "dipped," collided with the float:—Held: the evidence led for pursuer as to the invisibility of the float was credible, & accordingly it was not a necessary inference that pursuer was in fault in not avoiding the accident; also, the accident was due solely to the fault of the driver of the float in leaving his vehicle unlighted so as to be a dangerous obstruction on the road.—SCOTT v. M'INTOSH, [1935] S. The driver of pltf.'s lorry said that he was unable to see defts.' lorry owing to a beam of light thrown by a third lorry, which was in the draw-up across the road. On these facts, in an action brought by the motor cyclist against the owners of the wagon, the county ct. judge found that defts.' servants were negligent, but that defts. had not shown that pltf. was negligent:—Held: there was no evidence upon which a judgment could be founded that pltf. was not guilty of contributory negligence. Either pltf. was not keeping a proper look out or he was travelling at such a speed that he was unable to stop his motor cycle or to swerve so as to avoid the collision.—TART v. CHITTY (G. 389d. ——.]—A person driving a motor vehicle at night must drive at such a pace that he can pull up within his limits of vision; accordingly, if he collides with something, either he was riding unduly fast or he was not keeping a good look out; that is, in the absence of some other factor causative of the collision.

Pltf., motor cycling at night, ran into a horse tip-cart proceeding in the same direction in front of him on its near side of the road. The cart was without a light. Pltf. in his evidence said that his speed was 15-20 m.p.h., & he could stop easily within 10 yds. The beam of his lamp showed 30 yds. ahead. He said that he never actually saw it was a cart. He saw a dark object loom up & swerved to avoid it:—Held: as on pltf.'s evidence, when proving the negligence of defts., contributory negligence was established, there was no contest of fact & judgment must be entered for defts.—BAKER v. LONGHURST (E.) & SONS, LTD., [1933] 2 K. 389e. ——.]—Deft.'s motor lorry was drawn across the road running from Chichester to Arundel at 7.45 p.m. on Feb. 23, 1932, in such a position as to be an unlighted obstruction. A motor car had stopped behind the lorry about ten yards away on the near side, when pltfs.' son, who had been following the car on his motor cycle, drew out from behind, dashed into the lorry, & was killed. Pltfs. brought an action in the county ct. under Lord Campbell's Act for compensation for loss as a result of the negligence of deft. or his servant. The defence was that the accident was caused by the contributory negligence of deceased. The county ct. judge left the case to the jury, who found that deft. was negligent, & that deceased could not by the exercise of ordinary care have avoided the consequences of that negligence. Shortly after dark it was run into by pltfs.' car coming from behind. The evidence as to the time of the accident was too uncertain to justify a finding that the deft. violated the statutory provision requiring motor-car lights to be turned on within one hour after sundown:—Held: in so leaving the truck deft. was guilty of negligence for which he was liable to pltfs.; the pltf. driver being found not guilty of any contributory negligence.—ELLIS v. ZIMMERMAN, MORGAN v. ZIMMERMAN, [1933] 1 W. sm. ——.]—In an action for injuries to a passenger on a motor truck which collided about six o'clock of an Oct. morning with an oil tank truck which, owing to a broken axle, had been left on the highway over night:—Held: the negligence of both defts. or their servants contributed jointly to the accident & could not be so separated that it could be said that the negligence of either was the sole cause thereof; therefore, both were liable to pltf. Under all the circumstances, it was negligence to leave the oil truck on the highway for such a length of time without taking reasonable precautions to prevent such an accident, even if the statutory duty as to reflectors was complied with. The negligence of the driver of the other truck was in not keeping a proper lookout, in driving too fast under the circumstances, in not having his car under sufficient control, & in the fact that his headlights did not comply with sect. 36a of said Act.—WANDELEER v. DAWSON, [1936] 3 W. There was a continuing act of negligence on the part of the two drivers up to the point of impact, & neither had the opportunity of avoiding the other:—Held: although the unlighted condition of the vehicles was the causa sine qua non of the collision, in order to ascertain the causa proxima it was necessary to ascertain where the vehicles were & on what side of the road the collision took place, for, even as between the drivers of the two vehicles, a collision could have been avoided, despite the want of lights, if each had kept to his own side of the road, & therefore the driver of the cycle would be entitled to succeed if the real cause of the collision was that the car, owing to the negligence of its driver, was on the wrong side of the road.—BOURKE v. JESSOP, [1933] N. He fell off a swing & was injured by the swing in motion hitting him twice before he could get away. In an action against defts. he was awarded damages for these personal injuries on the ground that there being approximately two hundred children in the recreation ground & but one attendant provided by defts., pltf.'s injuries were the result of lack of adequate supervision on the part of defts., & judgment was entered for him. Defts. did not contend that pltf. was a trespasser in the recreation ground. On appeal, judgment was entered for defts. on the ground that pltf.'s fall from the swing, as appeared from the evidence, was due to his sickness & fainting & that there was no evidence on which the jury could find that pltf.'s injuries were due to lack of supervision on the part of defts.—PURKIS v. WALTHAMSTOW BOROUGH COUNCIL (1934), 151 L. Nearby they erected a flag pole which was supported only by four guy ropes. A man was left in charge of the tent, & it was his duty to prevent interference with the flag pole. Children who came to play round the pole & to swing on the rope, were repeatedly warned by the attendant to keep away. While the attendant was assisting a casualty inside the tent, the pole fell & injured pltf. No warning had been given to pltf. & to other people near the pole :—Held : the accident was due to defts.' negligence in the erection of the pole & the insufficient means taken to protect it from interference by children, having regard to the fact that it was an allurement to them.

Another boy, pltf., had jumped on to the lorry immediately behind the driver's cab, & when the tipping part of the lorry was suddenly released it came down on pltf. & crushed his leg. The headmaster of the school had left the boys to play in the playground & had returned into the school premises before the arrival of the lorry. He did not know of the arrival of the lorry. In an action for damages against the managers of the school, the headmaster & the owners of the lorry :—Held : (1) the headmaster was not negligent in leaving the boys in the playground without supervision, nor ought he to have taken steps to stop the lorry from coming during playtime. The headmaster & the managers were accordingly not liable; (2) the owners of the lorry had sent the lorry in the charge of a reasonable adult, & ought not reasonably to have anticipated interference; (3) the driver was not negligent in not looking to see if the boys had jumped on to the lorry, & he could not have anticipated sufficient weight to tip the lorry. The owners of the lorry were, therefore, not liable; (4) a lorry as such is not an allurement to children.—RAWSTHORNE v. [1937] 3 All E. R. 902.

sg. Breach of scaffolding regulations—Contributory negligence.]—Contributory negligence prevents a workman from recovering damages for injuries received, notwithstanding a continuing breach, on the part of the employer, of statutory regulations up to the time of the accident.

Pltf. was a carpenter employed by deft. He was working on a scaffold fixing boxing for ferro-concrete supports when the plank on which he was standing broke & pltf. fell to the floor & was seriously injured. He alleged breaches of the provisions of Regs. 8 & 14 made under Scaffolding & Excavation Act, 1922; inadequate supervision of the erection of the scaffold; & that the scaffold was erected without sufficient support & with unsuitable material :—Held : (1) the building operations were carried out under a definite & well-planned system, & whatever departures from that system were made in particular instances were either inseparable from the carrying on of the work or from the wrongful or improper conduct of those engaged in the work; (2) assuming, but not deciding, that the alleged breach of the regulations had been established, pltf.'s conduct in forcing struts or props from the plank on which he was standing to the bottom of the boxing, & persisting in this against the definite warning & orders of his supervisor, amounted to wilful misconduct & negligence which substantially contributed to the breaking of the plank, & pltf. was therefore not entitled to recover damages.—DUNNE v. NEW ZEALAND REFRIGERATING CO., LTD., [1932] N. ——.]—A co. having works near a railway, under a licence from an adjoining landowner, constructed a siding on his land & erected thereon a post to which a pulley block was attached called a sheave. To move a truck along the siding, a wire rope passed through the sheave & round a winch worked by a dynamo, & one end of the rope was fastened to the front of the truck & the other to the back. The siding adjoined some fields which were let to the local authority as a playground. A boundary fence between the siding & the fields had disappeared, &, to the knowledge of the co., children frequented the siding & played round the sheave without interruption except when the haulage machinery was about to be put in motion, which occurred about three times a week. On one occasion when a truck had to be moved two of the co.'s employees, in accordance with their usual practice, walked to the sheave for the purpose of seeing that the rope was properly adjusted & of driving children away. After the men went back to start the machine a little girl, aged five, was seen swinging on the rope, & the movement of the rope caused her hands to be caught in the pulley & crushed, & her brother, aged nine, was similarly injured in coming to her rescue. The father, for himself & as next friend of the children, claimed damages against the co. for the injuries sustained by the children :—Held : it being well known to the co. that when the machine was going to start it was extremely likely that children would be near the sheave, the duty owed by the co. when they set the machine in motion was to see that no child was in such a position as to be exposed to danger by the occasional use to which the machine was put, & that they had failed in that duty. The infant pltf., aged 3¼, & a boy aged 14, while sliding on the chute, collided with a chain, which had improperly been fixed across the chute by another child, pltf. receiving serious injuries. The chain was used, with others, to prevent the use of the chute on Sundays, & was kept padlocked to a pole at the recreation ground. It was found that the recreation ground attendant had negligently failed to secure the chain to the pole, whereby a child had been able to remove it. In an action for damages, deft. council contended that the recreation ground was provided for children of school age only, & that pltf. was a trespasser :—Held : (1) pltf. was accompanied by a competent guardian, & was, therefore, a licensee; (2) the injuries were caused by a danger which was known to deft. council; (3) the damages in the present case ought to be increased from £1,300 to £3,000.—Coates v. Rawtenstall Borough Council, [1937] 3 All E. This heap of soil formed a slope giving easy access to the top of the wall. There was evidence that the children of the neighbourhood played about the works, but were always warned off when workmen were there. On a Saturday afternoon, after the workmen had left, two boys were sitting on the new wall, & seeing them there the pltf., a boy of seven years of age, who also had been previously warned off, climbed up the heap & sat on the wall between the other two, & in trying to show them how bees flew he waved his arms &, losing his balance, fell backwards & sustained injuries in respect of which he sued deft. council:—Held: (1) in climbing up the heap of soil & in sitting on the wall pltf. was a trespasser to whom defts. owed no duty, not having constructed or placed the heap where it was with a view of causing him an injury, or, indeed, in contemplation of him at all; (2) the temporary heap of soil placed as it was on undedicated land did not constitute a nuisance.

Per SCRUTTON, L.J.: To make a landowner liable for injury to children on his land, it must be proved that he expressly or impliedly invited them on to his land, & either did an act which caused damage with knowledge that it might injure them, or knowingly permitted the existence on his land of a hidden danger or trap. An invitation may be implied from knowledge that children frequented the land without interference. For obvious dangers, such as unguarded water, natural or artificial, the landowner is not liable. The decision in Cooke v. Midland Great Western Railway of Ireland, No. 450, must be treated as dealing with a child who was impliedly licensed to use the turntable which for a child constituted a trap.—[illegible] v. NORTH RIDING OF YORKSHIRE COUNCIL, [1934] 2 K. sp. Judgment entered for defendant—Power of Court of Appeal.]—After the third trial of an action for damages resulting from a collision, motions for judgment on the jury's answers to questions were made by both parties & referred by the judge to the Ct. of Appeal. In their view the findings for pltf. were against the weight of evidence, &, therefore, judgment for pltf. was out of the question. It appeared from their opinions that, but for the fact that the action had been tried already before three juries, they would have ordered a new trial only ; but deeming it impossible to conclude, on the then undisputed facts of the case, that any verdict for pltf. by any subsequent jury could be other than perverse, the ct. directed judgment to be entered at once for deft. Pltf. appealed :—Held : after reviewing the facts & the findings of the jury, the Ct. of Appeal had in so directing judgment usurped the functions of the jury ; & pltf.-applt. was in accordance with the verdict of the jury entitled to judgment as a matter of right.—BENSON v. KWONG CHONG, [1932] 3 W. 620a. ——.]—A horse belonging to defts. & attached to one of their vans was seen by pltf. running past his house without the driver. It entered a field immediately adjoining, & separated by a hedge from, pltf.'s garden, & the driver, who had followed it, was trying to pacify it, but as it continued very restive, the driver, who was excited, shouted "Help, help," whereupon pltf. went over the hedge & attempted to hold the horse, but it suddenly reared & threw him to the ground causing him serious injuries, in respect of which he sued defts. There was evidence that the horse had bolted once, if not twice, before. The jury found (a) that pltf. did not freely & voluntarily, with full knowledge of the nature of the risk he ran, impliedly agree to incur it; (b) that the defts. were guilty of negligence in employing the horse to draw the van; & (c) that that negligence was the cause of the accident: —Held : the negligence (if any) of defts. in employing the horse could not be said to be the cause of the accident, inasmuch as there was a novus actus interveniens—namely, pltf.'s attempt to hold the horse, which he must have known was attended with risk, & therefore that the principle of volenti non fit injuria applied & precluded pltf. from recovering.

Per SCRUTTON, L.J.: If a horse bolts in a highway & a bystander tries to stop it & is injured, the owner of the horse is under no legal liability to the injured person.

Per SLESSER, L.J.: If a man sees his child in great peril in the street from a runaway horse, &, moved by paternal affection, dashes out & is injured in attempting to stop the horse, it may in those circumstances well be said that there is in law no novus actus interveniens.—CUTLER v. UNITED DAIRIES (LONDON), LTD., [1933] 2 K. The meat, when placed in the room, was in good condition, but shortly after it was taken out it was unfit for consumption. The plaint, after alleging the agreement between pltf. & deft., alleged that deft. did not keep the meat with sufficient care, but allowed the temperature of the room in which it was stored to rise so that the meat afterwards became unfit for human consumption. No evidence was given that in fact the temperature of the room had risen, & deft. called no evidence, contending that pltf.'s evidence did not establish any cause of action. 636a. —— ——.]—Pltfs., stevedores at the port of Tampico, in Mexico, undertook to load a steamship of defts.', the Essex Isles, with kerosine & gasoline. The cargo being of a dangerous character, pltfs., who had had much experience in handling such cargoes, stipulated that they should have entire control of the loading. While the loading was in progress an explosion occurred, which killed & injured many of the workmen engaged & destroyed the ship. There was no direct evidence as to the cause of the explosion. Pltfs. brought an action against defts. for damages, & it was found as a fact that the explosion was caused by a spark made by a beam which fell into the hold, the fall of the beam being caused by a blow from a tray which was being hoisted by pltfs.' men from the hold. Pltfs. contended that if the beam had been properly secured by bolts it would not have fallen, & they said that defts. had been negligent in leaving the beam unbolted. Defts. contended that the proximate cause of the explosion was the negligence of pltfs. in not hoisting the tray with proper care, & they counter-claimed for the loss of their ship:—Held: on the facts the shipowners had not been guilty of negligence in leaving the beam unbolted, or that if they had been guilty of negligence in so leaving it pltf. stevedores knew, or ought to have known, that the beam was unbolted, & took the risk; & the stevedores themselves had been negligent in failing to use proper care in hoisting the tray.—COMPANIA MEXICANA DE PETRÓLEO EL AGUILA v. ESSEX TRANSPORT & TRADING CO., LTD. Suddenly he was knocked off the stack by one of the others who had intentionally or unintentionally pushed against him, & falling on his head was severely injured. He brought an action against his companion who had knocked him over:—Held: as the pursuer had not been engaged in the play, he had been injured through the fault of the defender & was entitled to damages.

ar. Failure of master to provide protection.]—An employer must take something more than a passive concern for his servant's safety so far as machinery is concerned in order to protect himself from liability on the ground of negligence for injuries sustained by the servant in the course of his employment. With respect to the defence of volenti non fit injuria to an action for personal injuries brought by a servant against his employer the distinction must be observed between the case where a servant undertakes to do work which is inherently dangerous & the case where the work is rendered dangerous by the employer's neglect to provide the servant with an appliance which would protect him against a preventable danger.

Once the employer's neglect of said duty has been established in a case where the defence of volenti non fit injuria has been raised, then the burden falls upon him of proving to the satisfaction of the tribunal trying the case that the servant had voluntarily undertaken & contracted to accept the risk for himself: this is a question of fact.—HILL v. BAADE, [1933] 3 W. 650a. —— ——.]—Defts. installed in their factory as part of the plant with the intention that it should be used by their employees a dangerous machine which was not fenced or guarded as required by Factory & Workshop Act, 1901 (c. 22). Owing to the condition of the machine, pltf., a workman in the employment of defts., was injured by it in the course of his work. It was found that it was not by the negligence of defts. but of their foreman that the machine had been allowed to be used in the condition in which it was at the time of the accident:—Held: the defence of volenti non fit injuria had no validity against an action based on breach of statutory duty; further, pltf.'s injury was caused by the "wilful act" of defts. within Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 29 (1), & defts. were therefore not protected by that sect. from liability to pltf. independent of the Act.

Defts. appealed, & contended that the maxim volenti non fit injuria was a defence to the action:—Held: the defence of volenti non fit injuria was no answer to a claim made by a workman against his employer for injury caused through a breach by the employer of a duty imposed upon him by statute. Baddeley v. Granville (Earl), which had so decided in 1887, had been the law for nearly fifty years, & it was now too late for that ct. to interfere with the decision.—WHEELER v. NEW MERTON BOARD MILLS, LTD., [1933] 2 K. 662a. —— ——.]—A firm of stevedores employed by a shipowner & a porterage co. employed by the consignee of the ship's cargo were engaged in unloading a ship. The cargo consisted of bags of maize, which were made up into loads by the stevedores & held together by rope slings provided by the stevedores, & the bags were then raised by the stevedores from the hold to a steelyard on the deck. The stevedores' duty ended with the deposit of the bags on the steelyard, from which they were transported to the dock by the porterage co. by means of a dock crane. The stevedores gratuitously permitted the porterage co. to use their slings, which were already round the bags, for the transport of the bags to the dock, & it was a matter of mutual convenience that the same slings should be used throughout. The stevedores employed a servant specially charged with the duty of inspecting the slings, &, as the stevedores knew, the porters relied on the care of the stevedores for the safety of the slings. A sling broke while the bags were being transported from the steelyard to the dock, & the bags fell & killed a servant of the porterage co. In an action of damages brought by his dependants against the stevedores:—Held: in the special circumstances of the case the firm of stevedores owed a duty to the porters to see that the sling was in a fit condition to take the weight of the load entrusted to it, & on the facts, the finding of the Lord Ordinary that they had failed to discharge that duty ought not to be disturbed.—CHAPMAN OR OLIVER v. SADDLER & Co., [1929] A. The jury found for deft. The Ct. of Appeal directed a new trial, holding that the jury should have been directed that if the deceased man was guilty of negligence, but deft. could by exercising reasonable care have avoided the collision, they were still entitled to find for pltf. :—Held : since, on the facts of the case, from the moment when the parties became aware of their respective positions there could have been no time for deft. to do anything to avoid the impact, & therefore the negligence of each party contributed to the collision, the judge's directions to the jury were sufficient, & there must be judgment for deft.—SWADLING v. COOPER, [1931] A. sl. Action by infant—Injury while en ventre sa mere.]—Resp.'s wife, being seven months pregnant, was descending from a tram car belonging to applt. co. when, by reason of the negligence of the motorman, she fell, or was thrown, from the car & was injured. Two months later she gave birth to a female child who was born with club feet. Resp., as tutor to his child, brought an action against applt. co. claiming that the deformity of the child was the direct consequence of the negligence of applt. co. by which the mother was injured. The action was tried with a jury who found in favour of resp. & judgment was rendered accordingly, which was affirmed by a majority of the appellate ct. :—Held : the judgment appealed from should be affirmed & the appeal dismissed. There was sufficient evidence adduced at the trial to produce in the jury's minds a conviction that it was reasonably probable that the deformity of the child resulted as a consequence of the mother's injury, &, consequently, their verdict should not be disturbed. The fact that applt.'s fault caused the deformity of the child cannot, from the nature of things, be established by direct evidence. It may, however, be established by a presumption or inference drawn from facts proved to the satisfaction of the jury.

The administratrix of deceased brought an action against deft. under (inter alia) Law Reform (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act, 1934 (c. 41), s. 1, alleging that causes of action against deft. had vested in deceased & survived for the benefit of his estate for damages in respect of pain & suffering caused to him by his physical injuries & by apprehension of shortening of his life, & claiming damages for his estate in respect of these causes of action:—Held: deceased having been unconscious & incapable of experiencing physical or mental pain from the time of the accident until his death, no cause of action in respect thereof had vested in him or survived for the benefit of his estate; but semble: if after the accident deceased had for a time been conscious & endured such pain & suffering, pltf. could have recovered damages in respect thereof in so far as it arose from his physical injuries, & possibly also in so far as it arose from his anticipation of a shortening of his life.—SLATER v. SPREAG, [1936] 1 K. The Act does not make the pleading of his appointment as exor. one of the constituent elements of his right of action nor prescribe that such a plea shall be made; it does no more than make it a condition precedent to the action being maintainable within the first six months after the death of the injured person that it shall be brought by his exor., if there be an exor.—MILLER v. CANADIAN PACIFIC RY. B. C., 1924, as well as to those brought under the Administration Act & amendments thereto.

Compensation Act does not in itself give a right of action against the exor. of the estate of a person who has wrongfully or negligently caused the death of another but said Act & Administration Act Amendment Act, 1934, combined do give such a right of action for the benefit of the relatives mentioned in the first-named Act.

Administration Act Amendment Act, 1934, does not alter the law in respect to damages for nervious shock.

9a. Nuisance distinguished from negligence.]—We think that "nuisance" (we are speaking of private nuisance only) is correctly confined to injuries to property, whether to easements, such as the obstruction of light or of rights of way, or the diversion of watercourses, or the withdrawal of support from a house; or to other kinds of property, as by noise, noxious vapours, smoke, or the like. In all such cases the pltf. in order to maintain an action must show some title to the thing to which the nuisance is alleged to be. No doubt a nuisance may be caused by negligence, & there may be cases in which the same act or omission would support an action of either kind, but, generally speaking, these two classes of actions on the case are distinct, & the evidence necessary to support them is different (per CUR.).—CUNARD v. ANTIFYRE, LTD., [1933] 1 K. —— ——.]—Pltf. purchased a house in a partly rural, but largely residential district. Adjoining this house was a poultry farm, & about 100 yards from pltf.'s house was an orchard in which the poultry farmer kept large numbers of cockerels. Ptf. complained of the noise made by the cockerels in the early mornings, & threatened proceedings unless they were removed. The cockerels were removed, but after some months numbers of cockerels reappeared & the farmer made no attempt to rearrange his farm so as to keep the cockerels further from pltf.'s property. Pltf. brought an action for an injunction:—Held: a nuisance had been proved & an injunction should be granted.—LEEMAN v. MONTAGU, [1936] 2 All E. R. 1677; 80 Sol. Jo. 691.

se. "Unfit for human habitation"—Absence of plumbing.]—Although under sect. 35 of Public Health Act, 1924, the determination of the question whether a particular building or part of a building is unfit for human habitation depends upon the opinion of the medical health officer or other official mentioned therein, nevertheless, it was not intended that such opinion should be made arbitrarily but only upon reasonable grounds. Where it is based upon "absence of plumbing," a proper opinion would seem to predicate at least a personal examination of the building by the officer, & an exposition of conditions arising from the absence of plumbing which would justify a reasonable conclusion that they rendered it unfit for human occupation because they created a situation which "was or might become injurious or dangerous to health or which prevented or hindered in any manner the suppression of disease." The absence of plumbing does not in itself render a house "unfit for human habitation."—R. (WILSON) v. HOLMES, [1931] 2 W. W. R. 41; 3 D. L. R. 218.—CAN.

315a. ——— ———.]—Pltf. was working as an electric welder in a boiler of a steamship when an explosion occurred & steam came in through the furnace door. After one vain attempt he succeeded in making his way through the door. He was badly scalded but suffered far more from shock & was rendered neurasthenic. The escape of steam was due to the fact that in a valve chest a bridge, in which a brass bush fitted, had been put in upside down. The valve had been assembled & fitted by the second defts. Pltf. alleged that both defts. were negligent in that the valve chest was made of cast iron. Against the first defts. he alleged negligence in not taking sufficient precautions against water hammer by securing effective drainage of the steam pipes, & that having brought the steam upon the ship they were liable under the principle of Rylands v. Fletcher for not keeping it under control. Against the second defts. he alleged negligence in wrongly assembling & fitting the valve chest, contending that though there was no privity of contract they were liable in tort for supplying a dangerous article :—Held : the doctrine of Rylands v. Fletcher was not applicable because there was no escape of the steam off the premises & the steamship owners were not making an unnatural user of their premises.—HOWARD v. FURNESS HOULDER ARGENTINE LINES, LTD. & BROWN, LTD., [1936] 2 All E. 330a. Tapping springs.]—Before the year 1919 the land of pltf. & of deft. was in the same ownership. On Mar. 25, 1919, the common owners conveyed a cottage & garden to C., & on Aug. 25, 1919, part of the land. On July 19, 1921, C. conveyed the whole of the land to pltf. On Dec. 20, 1929, the common owners conveyed other part of their land to deft. In about 1888 a tank Y. had been constructed by the common owners, mainly on what became the land of pltf., but which projected partly on to the land which became the land of deft. The water from that tank was led by a pipe to another tank Z. wholly situate on deft.'s land. The tank Z. was tilted so that the water overflowed on to land which became pltf.'s. The overflow was diminished by the cattle using the tank as a drinking trough; what overflowed was conveyed by a stone drain to a point where it discharged into an open watercourse which was also fed by an underground spring on pltf.'s land. The open watercourse became a natural stream along the southern boundary of pltf.'s land, where there were two dipping places used by pltf. for watering his cattle & by some cottagers. Pltf.'s land was always boggy in places, & was now overgrown with rank vegetation. In Feb. 1930, deft. replaced tank Z. by another, which had two outlet holes, one only of which acted as an overflow outlet on to pltf.'s land. The overflow from the other outlet, which was on the west side, was led to a ram on deft.'s land. These alterations diminished the overflow on to pltf.'s land, who alleged that it affected the supply at the dipping places. He also alleged deft., in the alternative, had tapped springs the water from which escaped on to pltf.'s land, rendering part of it waterlogged. Pltf. claimed the right to a continuance of the overflow by grant as successor in title to C. or by prescription:—Held: the fact that owing to the natural & proper user by deft. of her own land some of the water in the water-bearing stratum below the surface had, to a small extent, been diverted, did not entitle pltf. to damages for any alleged injury arising from such diversion, & deft. not having diverted any defined watercourse nor altered the level of her land nor erected any structure upon it so as to cause rain water which would ordinarily soak into her ground to pass on to pltf.'s land, pltf. was not entitled to the relief claimed in paras. 3 & 4 of the prayer of the statement of claim.—BARTLETT v. TOTTENHAM, [1932] 1 Ch. 114; 101 L. J. Ch. 160; 145 L. T. 686.

330b. Escape from factory premises.]—Defts., the occupiers of factory premises on the second floor of a building, on several occasions allowed water to escape into the factory premises of pltfs. on the floor below, whereby damage was caused to pltfs.' property. Defts.' business included the washing of cinematograph film, for which purpose an extraordinarily large quantity of circulating water was necessary, also a boiler, & carboys for storing water:—Held: as the water was brought by defts. on to their premises for their own special purposes, & not for the common benefit of defts. & pltfs., & defts.' user was not a normal user for the purposes for which both pltfs. & defts. were occupying the premises, the principle of the decision in Rylands v. Fletcher, applied, & defts. were liable to pltfs. in damages & need not prove specific acts of negligence by pltfs. on each occasion.—WESTERN ENGRAVING CO. v. FILM LABORATORIES, LTD., [1936] 1 All E. R. 106; 80 Sol. Jo. 165, C. A.

331a. Overflow from boiler used for manufacturing purposes.]—Pltfs. were tenants, & in occupation of the ground floor of commercial premises. Defts. were tenants & occupiers of the first & second floors of the premises. For the purpose of their business defts. had installed a boiler on the second floor connected with the main water supply of the building; an overflow of water occurred from the boiler, &, flowing down to the ground floor, damaged pltfs.' stock of paper goods. At the time of the overflow defts., although carrying on their business elsewhere, were still tenants of the premises, & it was their custom to send employees over to the premises. The boiler apparatus was fitted with two stop-cocks or safety wheel-valves, but not with a trough or overflow waste pipe. Pltfs. claimed damages for breach of a duty of absolute care, or for negligence, or for nuisance:—Held: (1) the introduction of a boiler into the upper floor of a building of this kind was an ordinary & proper use of the building; & that, therefore, the defts. were under no absolute duty of care in respect of water used for the boiler, the principles laid down in Rylands v. Fletcher not applying; (2) there was no negligence on the part of defts. in the construction of the boiler or in the condition in which it was left. Accordingly, pltfs. were not entitled to claim damages.—MARCHANT MANUFACTURING CO., LTD. v. LEONARD D. FORD & TELLER, LTD. (1936), 154 L. T. 430.

to its land with the result that, when rain fell, rain water poured from deft.'s land on to pltf.'s council's streets in a more concentrated form & carried with it more sand & silt than would be the case in the ordinary course of nature:—Held: pltf. was entitled to an injunction restraining deft. from permitting its land to remain in such a condition that these results ensued, & an inquiry as to what damage had accrued to pltf.'s streets arose from the operations of deft.—NEWCASTLE COUNCIL v. AUSTRALIAN AGRICULTURAL CO., LTD. sg. Melted snow.]—In an action for damage to property which was alleged to have been caused by deft. city bringing on to its own land large quantities of snow which on melting caused a flow of water to pltf.'s land & injured her building:—Held: the water from the one scraperful of snow which had been shown to have been banked on to the city's land by the city was so negligible that the damage must have been caused by what fell naturally or was brought on to the land by parties other than the city; & also the fact that the city after constructing a drain to remove the water lying on the land had, some years later, obstructed the drain when building a concrete side-walk did not render it liable.—GRAHAM v. ST. In an action by the A.-G. at the suit of the local district council for an injunction to restrain deft. from permitting the brickfield to be occupied in such a way as to be a nuisance :—Held : as deft. was putting his land to an abnormal use he was responsible for the nuisance which existed in the vicinity, & he must be restrained from permitting the occupiers of the land to do the acts constituting the nuisance.—A.-G. v. CORKE, [1933] Ch. 89 ; 148 L. 349a. —— —— No knowledge of danger or defect.]—Pltfs. were the owners of an ancient inn, one side of which was bounded by the ancient city wall of Exeter, part of which was the property of defts. On either side of the fireplace in the kitchen of the inn recesses had a retaining wall some seventy feet long & thirteen feet high. The adjoining land beyond & above the wall was left unbuilt on until 1925, when a house was erected & was afterwards purchased by deft. A. L. Early in 1930 the retaining wall collapsed almost entirely, causing pressure against & damage to an outside wall of a room which had been on to "A. Hall." Pltf. alleged & the ct. found as a fact that the collapse of the wall was due to the additional pressure upon it caused by the weight of the new house built in 1925, & he claimed a mandatory order to restore the wall & to take such further steps as might be necessary to prevent any further damage to his property, & an injunction & damages :—Held : (1) deft. A. L. as the owner of the house was under no liability to pltf. based on the doctrine of Rylands v. Fletcher, as her predecessor in title had only used the land for the natural & normal purpose of building a house on it ; (2) the claim as based on nuisance failed, as there was no evidence that deft. knew or could have known that her house constituted a nuisance or hidden danger to pltf.'s property, or that any such nuisance in fact existed.—WILKINS v. LEIGHTON, [1932] 2 Ch. 106 ; 101 L. J. Ch. 385 ; 147 L. T. 495 ; 76 Sol. Jo. 232.

a considerable portion of the wall belonging to defts. collapsed & completely demolished pltfs.' inn :—Held : (1) inasmuch as the damage caused to pltfs.' premises did not arise from an abnormal or unnatural user of defts.' property, & defts. were not occupiers of the wall at the time the damage took place, the doctrine of Rylands v. Fletcher did not apply, & (2) it had not been proved that defts. had knowledge of the defect which ultimately resulted in the fall of the wall or that there had been a failure on their part by due diligence to ascertain that knowledge.—ST. sg. Overloading floor of warehouse.]—Pltf., an automobile dealer, was the tenant of part of the ground floor of a warehouse. Deft., a dealer in seed grain, was the tenant of part of the third floor directly above pltf.'s premises. About three months after deft. had stored a large quantity of oats on his floor it collapsed, the oats fell through & brought the second floor down upon pltf.'s cars. In an action for the resulting damage, the immediate cause for the collapse could not be definitely assigned, but it was shown that the floors of a building constructed for general warehousing purposes should have a carrying capacity far in excess of the load under which deft.'s floor collapsed. There was no evidence that the building in question was ever held out to the public, or prospective tenants, as a general warehouse, although parts of it had been leased from time to time to various tenants for miscellaneous storage purposes :—Held : deft. was guilty of negligence, not only in overloading, but in disregarding the duty which, under the circumstances including the general flimsiness of the building, was upon him to inquire & inspect ; & also his liability could be based on the principle of Rylands v. Fletcher.—MADDER v. MCKENZIE (A. During the breeding season the vixens are very nervous, & liable if disturbed either to refuse to breed, to miscarry, or to kill their young. Appeal to quarter sessions—Objection to original notice & order—Jurisdiction of quarter sessions.]—On failure by an owner of premises to abate a nuisance thereon when required by notice to do so, the sanitary inspector caused a complaint to be preferred to a ct. of summary jurisdiction. The ct. made an order requiring the owner to abate the nuisance, & the owner did not appeal against that order. On the failure of the owner to comply with the order the sanitary inspector caused a further complaint to be preferred to the same ct., which ultimately made an order imposing penalties on the owner. Against that order the owner appealed to quarter sessions, & on the hearing of the appeal for the first time took objection to the original notice & order. The ct. of quarter sessions allowed the appeal on the ground that the original notice & order were bad :—Held : the ct. of quarter sessions on appeal against the order imposing penalties had no jurisdiction to inquire into the validity of the original notice & order, inasmuch as no objection had been made to the original complaint & no appeal brought against the original order.—AGER v. GATES (1934), 151 L. 41a. —— —— ——.]—A local authority acquired land in fee simple to be used as an open space & covenanted to preserve the land as an open space & take all necessary steps to maintain the land as such. By a private Act the corpn. was permitted to erect on the land so conveyed bathing & other huts & similar structures, tents, booths, & stalls & construct & maintain bathing pools, baths, shelters, pavilions & conveniences ; but by a later sect. it was not to exercise these powers except within an area not exceeding 4 acres, & no erection was to be more than 14 ft. in height. The corpn. executed extensive works upon the land including a promenade lavatories, pavilion, café, car park, putting green, & enclosed a portion of the land & laid it out as a garden. The extent of all these works was in fact more than 4 acres. The corpn. then desired to build a bungalow for the occupation of a resident caretaker. The building did not infringe any of the restrictions other than the extent of the land upon which structures might be placed under the Act. It was contended, on the one hand, that the corpn. had by these acts withdrawn more than 4 acres from public use &, on the other hand, that as the land actually covered with buildings was approximately ½ acre, the corpn., if acting under the powers given by the private Act, was acting well within its powers; but it was contended that the bungalow was not being erected under or in pursuance of any power given by the private Act. The covenantee, party to the conveyance of the land, raised no objection to the proposed use, & it was found as a fact that the corpn. was acting honestly in the best interests of the public in requiring a bungalow for a resident caretaker:—Held: (1) the conveyance in fee simple being a deed inter partes, the covenant therein could only be enforced by the covenantee, & as the covenantee was not a party to the action, no question on the covenant could arise; (2) the corpn. had power under Open Spaces Act, 1906 (c. 25), to erect a caretaker's house if it thought it necessary for the proper maintenance of the open space, provided that not more than $\frac{1}{20}$ of the open space was covered with buildings, which would not be the case here; (3) as the powers given by the private Act were in addition to & not in derogation of those given by the public Acts, & there was no express prohibition in the private Act of what was intended to be done, the proposed erection was in order.—A.-G. v. Poole Corpn., [1937] 3 All E. 466a. Internal affairs of House—Sale of intoxicating liquor.]—The House of Commons has the privilege of regulating its own internal affairs & procedure, including the sale, within the precincts of the House, of intoxicating liquor without a licence, through its employees in the Refreshment Department of the House.

Appct. applied in the police ct. for summonses against certain members of the Kitchen Committee of the House of Commons & the manager of the Refreshment Department of the House on the ground that they had on two occasions unlawfully sold by retail intoxicating liquor for the sale of which they did not hold a justices' licence as required by Licensing (Consolidation) Act, 1910 (c. 24), s. 65. The magistrate held that, assuming that there had been a sale of liquor without a licence, his jurisdiction was excluded by the privileges of the House & he declined jurisdiction. Rules nisi having been obtained by appct. for orders in the nature of mandamus calling on the magistrate, the members of the Kitchen Committee affected & the manager of the Refreshment Department to show cause why the magistrate should not proceed to hear & determine the application for the summonses:—Held: in the sale of liquor in the precincts of the House without a licence, the House was acting, through its Kitchen Committee & its employee, the manager of the Refreshment Department, in a matter which fell within the scope of the internal affairs of the House &, therefore, within the privileges of the House so that no ct. of law had jurisdiction to interfere.—R. v. GRAHAM-CAMPBELL, Ex p. HERBERT, [1935] 1 K. The lands being sold under the partition order, her claim for dower would be upon the money which would stand in the place of the lands.—Re STROUD & MANDELL, [1930] 2 D. L. R. 135 ; 65 O. L. R. 4.—CAN.

aaa (p. 300) i. —— ——]—Apart from such discretion as is given by Partition Act, 1868, as to sale in lieu of partition, a decree or judgment of partition is a matter of right & not dependent upon the discretion of the ct., except where certain acts may be required to be performed as a condition precedent by the doctrine that he who seeks equity must do equity. For example, a party seeking partition may be required to reimburse his co-tenants for his share of money expended for the benefit of the property. The right to partition may, however, be limited, modified or waived by agreement express or implied. Where there is no specific agreement as to the duration of the joint ownership, the purpose or idea which the owners may have had in acquiring property does not preclude either of them from determining it by an action for partition ; but if the implication of an agreement to postpone partition is to be gathered from the circumstances & purpose of such acquisition it may be given effect to, but only by way of contract.—WIKSTRAND & MANNIX v. CAVANAUGH & DILLON, [1936] 1 W. 129a. —— —— ——.]—Applt. having agreed to purchase a medical practice, a deed of assignment was executed on July 15, 1929, whereby the vendor, on payment at the date of execution of a specified part of the purchase price, assigned the practice & goodwill thereof to applt. The vendor covenanted (inter alia) to continue, from July 15, 1929, until Sept. 30, 1929, to reside at the house from which the practice was being carried on &, during that period, to introduce applt. to his patients, with a view to maintaining the connections of the practice, including National Health Insurance works, & generally to aid & assist him in the practice. It was also agreed that the earnings & expenses of the practice from the commencement of the period of introduction until Sept. 30, 1929, should belong to & be borne by the vendor & purchaser in equal shares. On July 15, 1929, applt. took up residence with the vendor &, until Sept. 30, 1929, they carried on the practice in conjunction, the earnings & expenses of the practice being divided equally between them. On appeal against an assessment to income tax under Sched. D. made upon him for the year 1930–31 in respect of his professional profits, applt. contended that the practice was sold outright to him on July 15, 1929, & that his income tax liability should be computed on the footing that the practice was commenced anew by him on that date. The General Comrs. decided that the deed of July 15 constituted articles of partnership between applt. & the retiring doctor, & that, in the absence of notices under the proviso to r. 11 (1) of the Rules applicable to Cases I. & II. of Sched. D., the practice must be treated as a continuing one throughout :—Held : there was an out-and-out sale of the practice on July 15, 1929, & there had been no partnership.—Pratt v. Strick (1932), 17 Tax Cas. 459.

572a. —— Liability of retired partner—After proof by holder in bankruptcy of firm.]—In 1927 pltf. became a partner in a firm carrying on business under the title of Samuel Dobree & Sons. While he was a partner the firm accepted a number of bills payable at various dates, & those bills eventually passed into the possession of defts. as holders for value. In Dec. 1928, before the majority of the bills had become due, pltf. retired from the partnership & a new partner was admitted in his place, the new firm so constituted taking over all the liabilities of the old firm. Before the outstanding bills had been paid the new firm became bkpt. Defts. as holders of the bills proved in the bkpcy. & received a small dividend, & they then brought an action against pltf. to recover from him the balance owing on the bills after credit had been given for the amount recovered in the bkpcy. proceedings. As pltf. was residing in France the action was begun in a French Ct., & judgment was obtained against him on the first of the outstanding bills, with the right to claim payment on the later bills when considered appropriate. Pltf. then brought this action in England, alleging that he had been induced to enter into the partnership by fraud, & claiming a declaration (a) that he had never become liable to defts. on the bills, or (b) that, if he ever was liable, he had been discharged from liability owing to the fact that defts. had elected to treat the new firm as their debtors in respect of the bills. An order was made that a preliminary issue should be tried to dispose of certain points raised in the pleadings, the issue in effect being whether the fact that defts. had proved in the bkpcy. of the new firm prevented them from now claiming against pltf. as a retired partner. The preliminary issue was tried by MACKINNON, J., who gave judgment for defts. :—Held : as there had not been an Defts. were the Australian Press Assocn., who carried on business in London, & the firm of W. & M., proprietors of the Argus, who, as stated in the paper itself, were a Melbourne firm, but who had a branch office in London & carried on business there. W. & M., who were British subjects, were sued in the firm name. Pltf., in ignorance that W. & M. had a London branch, applied under R. S. C., Ord. 11, for leave to serve the writ on the firm of W. & M. out of the jurisdiction, which HUMPHREYS, J., granted, & the writ was served in Melbourne. W. & M. applied to CHARLES, J., to discharge the order, on the grounds that they had a place of business in this country, &, further, that the right allowed by R. S. C., Ord. 48a, r. 1, of suing two or more partners in the firm's name, did not apply to cases of service of a writ outside the jurisdiction under R. S. C., Ord. 11. CHARLES, J., made the order as prayed :—Held : there being an inter-relation between the various Orders of the Supreme Ct., & so between R. S. Testator was a member of three Lloyd's underwriting syndicates. It was not possible to ascertain what profits were made or what loss was suffered by a syndicate in any particular year until two further years had passed. Judgment creditors then obtained a charging order on the fund in ct. & any moneys in the hands of the receiver in the form made in v. Attrill (1886), 34 Ch. D. 345. Subsequently the parties agreed to refer the matter to arbn., & the arbitrator found that a partnership had existed between them, but that it had been dissolved. By his award the arbitrator directed that the goodwill, stock in trade, & all other assets of the business should belong to the pltf. absolutely, & that deft. was entitled to a certain sum of money for his share of the goodwill, stock in trade, & other assets of the business. The trade that had been carried on during the partnership was that of wholesale dealers supplying the retail trade with sweets, confectionery, etc. Deft. used to travel through the country soliciting orders from retail dealers for these goods. After the arbitrator had made his award deft. continued to travel through the country soliciting orders from retailers who had been customers of the firm before it was dissolved. 49a. —— ——.]—Deft. was a leading draughtsman in the employ of pltfs. In 1924 deft. was instructed by pltfs. to design an unlubricated crane brake, a branch of work upon which deft. had not been directly engaged. The design he produced was tested but was unsatisfactory. In 1926 deft. was again instructed to design such a brake, & did in fact design a brake incorporating a resilient disc which proved to be satisfactory. This design was patented in deft.'s name. Pltfs. claimed that deft. was a trustee for them of his interest in the patent & claimed a declaration to this effect. Deft. alleged that the successful feature of the resilient disc had been evolved solely by him in 1918 outside the scope of his duties, & claimed to be entitled to the beneficial interest in the patent :—Held : it is the duty of a draughtsman when instructed by his employer to prepare a design to use such skill & inventive faculty as he may possess in order to produce the best possible design within his ability, & in this case deft. evolved the invention which was the subject of the patent as a result of instructions given to him by pltfs. & in the discharge of his duty. The declarations & injunction asked for were granted, & an order upon deft. to assign the patent to pltfs. was made with costs.—ADAMSON v. KENWORTHY (1931), 49 R. P. C. 57.

49b. —— ——.]—Deft., M., was employed by pltf. co. as chief draughtsman for the purpose (inter alia) of developing a gyroscopic turn indicator for use on aeroplanes. The terms of his employment contained a specific covenant, namely, " that all work done whilst in the service of said co. was to be secret & confidential & the property of said co." In the course of developing the instrument certain problems arose & discussions took place as to proposed solutions of them, in which deft., M., took part. Before an instrument embodying features of design & construction, made possible as a result of the solution of the various problems, was put into production by pltf. co. deft., M., left the service of said co. Deft., M., together with one Pierce, an ex-employee of pltf. co., promoted deft. co., which began to incorporate the said features of design & construction in a gyroscopic turn indicator which was offered for sale & sold in competition with the instruments made & sold by pltf. co. Deft., M , also applied for letters patent, & he filed provisional specifications describing said features of design & construction. Deft., M., alleged that the features of design were not novel, that they had not been evolved by pltf. co., & that knowledge of them had not been acquired by him in the course of his employment by pltf. co. Deft., M., also stated that he had not disclosed or made any wrongful use of any confidential information acquired by him in the course of his employment by pltf. co. :—Held : letters patent granted in accordance with the first provisional specification filed by deft., M., would, if valid, enable M. to prevent pltf. co. from making gyroscopic turn indicators in accordance with their present design ; the second provisional specification filed by deft., M., included matters discussed with him while he was in pltf. co.'s employ, & letters patent granted in accordance with this provisional specification would, if valid, enable M. to prevent pltf. co. from making use of one at least of the matters discussed with him while he was in their employ ; deft., M., must be assumed to know what he was claiming as his invention, & that he could only claim what he sought to protect on the ground that it was secret & confidential ; it was not unfair to treat deft. M.'s provisional specifications as an admission by him of such fact; further, the gyroscopic turn indicators made by deft. co. were made substantially in accordance with information & knowledge acquired by deft., M., while he was in pltf. co.'s employ; the designing of a gyroscopic turn indicator by deft., M., with assistance, suggestions, & advice from pltf. co., was, from the start of M.'s employment by pltf. co., a confidential matter; deft., M. was not at liberty, while he remained in the employ of pltf. co., to disclose to any one difficulties which had arisen in the manufacture of gyroscopic turn indicators nor the methods discussed, used, or proposed to be used for overcoming such difficulties; deft., M., was not at liberty to make drawings embracing matters discussed with him while he was in pltf. co.'s employ, & while still in their employ to disclose such drawings to any third party; & deft., M., could not better his position by terminating his employment with pltf. co. An injunction was granted; & delivery up of all turn indicators which would constitute a breach of the injunction was ordered. A declaration was made that pltfs. were entitled to the benefit of the applications for grant of letters patent covered by the provisional specifications filed by deft., M., subject to certain limitations, together with costs.—REID & SIGRIST, LTD. v. MOSS & MECHANISM, LTD. The ct. found that, at best, if pltf. had added to the prior art it was merely the product of that mechanical skill which normally results from habitual & intelligent practice, & was not invention:—Held: it is not enough that a thing should be new in the sense that in the shape or form in which it is produced it shall not have been known before, & that it shall be useful, but it must, under the Patent Act, amount to an invention or discovery. si. Application of principle.]—The patents in suit, infringement of which was claimed by pltfs., were for methods of severing package wrappers. The ct. found that there was no subject-matter in the patents & dismissed the action:—Held: when a principle is not new, a patent for a method of applying it only secures to the patentee protection in respect of the particular method specified, & the use of different methods of carrying the same principle into effect cannot be restrained.—IMPERIAL TOBACCO CO. 292 iv. ——.]—Patent for a loud speaker. Previous to this patent the best loud speakers had a frequency range of somewhere from 300 cycles to about 2,500 cycles, which meant that the overtones were not reproduced & the tones of high & low pitch were distorted or not faithfully reproduced. By certain structural changes in the sound box, the present invention overcomes these defects. With it a frequency response as low as 60 cycles & good response as high as 4,000 cycles can be obtained. Between 4,000 & 6,000 cycles there is slightly reduced response, & a useful response as high as 8,000 cycles, thus permitting the overtones to be reproduced, giving a faithful reproduction of the tones of high pitch and a more uniform amplitude:—Held: the invention in question being for a new & valuable loud speaker, structurally & operatively different from anything which preceded it, & giving much more satisfactory results, such invention disclosed ingenuity & was patentable. Even if all elements in a combination are old, where the combination produces an old result or object in a more convenient, cheaper, or more useful way, it is proper subject matter for a patent assuming there is evidence of ingenuity or skill in the production of such combination.—BALDWIN INTERNATIONAL RADIO CO. In 1935 pltfs. commenced an action for infringement of the patent, claiming the usual relief. Defts. denied infringement & alleged that the patent was invalid by reason of anticipation & lack of subject-matter & counterclaimed for revocation of the patent:—Held: though none of elements of the invention taken singly was new, there was no anticipation of the combination, & the evidence of the inventor himself as to how he evolved the invention, & the evidence of commercial utility established the fact that the invention was not obvious, & the patent was accordingly valid & infringed. 436 xvii. —— ——.]—Novelty & utility, without something more requiring the exercise of inventive ingenuity, is not sufficient to make an article a good subject-matter of a patent. The patentee must show an inventive step. Commercial success is nothing more than a question of fact depending upon several factors; & although it may assist in determining whether there is invention, it cannot afford a basis for controverting the conclusion that the alleged improvements of a known article are not of such a character as to show invention in a pertinent sense. 1924 letters patent were granted in respect of "improvements in record strips for autographic registers," Claim 1 being as follows: "A record strip for autographic registers adapted to be fed by said register, said strip being provided with filing or folding apertures arranged in series therein & adapted to co-operate with strip folding mechanism to fold the strip into a zig-zag pad, all of the said filing apertures being so disposed as to assume positions at the same end of the said zig-zag pad." It was stated in the specification that the invention related to improvements in record strips employed in autographic registers & more especially to an improved zig-zag supply pad for autographic registers as described in specification No. 229,616, which was a specification of the same patentees & of the same date. Pltfs. commenced an action for infringement of this patent & of two other patents in respect of which they discontinued the action at the trial. Defts. denied infringement & alleged that the patents were invalid by reason of want of novelty, subject-matter & utility:—Held: although the strip was novel, the patent was invalid for want of subject-matter, since any invention that may have been exercised was in the machine which was the subject of Patent No. 229,616, & not in the strip. The action was dismissed with costs. A certificate for the particulars of objections was granted in respect of the patent proceeded upon, the costs in connection with the other two patents being left to the absolute discretion of the taxing master.—LAMSON PARAGON SUPPLY CO., LTD. v. CARTER-DAVIS, LTD. 459f. —— ——.]—Letters patent were granted to A. for "improvements in or relating to means or apparatus for use in combined cinematograph & phonograph productions." The specification claimed a method of inserting into a cinematograph film blank pieces of film marked with letters or numbers which, when flashed upon the screen, indicated to the operator when he was to start or stop a mechanical sound-producing apparatus. Defts. showed a "talking picture" in which the operator was provided with a "cue sheet" which told him at what points in showing the film, indicated by sub-titles appearing upon the screen which were part of the film, he was to operate or change over the sound-producing apparatus. Pltf. claimed that this was an infringement of his patent:—Held: there could be no novelty in using an incident, such as a sub-title, in the film as a cue for the operator, what defts. were doing was no infringement, & the invention as disclosed in pltf.'s specification was not novel.—JOHNSON v. WARNER BROS. PICTURES LTD. (1930), 48 R. P. C. 343.

.]—In 1914 Letters Patent were granted in respect of "An improved process & apparatus for sterilising water & making it aseptic." Claim 1 was as follows:—"A process for sterilising flowing water which consists in a minor body of running water being brought as a film or in a state of fine distribution into contact with chlorine gas which is thus quantitatively absorbed, this minor body of water being led continuously to the main body of flowing water through which it becomes immediately & uniformly distributed." In 1929 pltfs. commenced an action for infringement of the patent, claiming a declaration that defts. had infringed the patent, & other relief. Defts. denied infringement, & alleged that the patent was invalid by reason of novelty, subject-matter & utility. At the trial it was held that there was no subject-matter to support the patent, & the action was dismissed with costs. Pltfs. appealed:—Held: the invention provided for the continuous introduction into the water to be sterilised of chlorinated water of the desired strength immediately after its chlorination & that it was novel & possessed subject-matter. It was further held, after argument, that defts. at the trial had unreservedly admitted infringement. The appeal was allowed, with costs, an order for a declaration that defts. had infringed the patent & for an inquiry as to damages was made & a certificate that the validity of the patent came in question was granted.—PATERSON ENGINEERING CO., LTD. v. CANDY FILTER CO., LTD. 459h. —— ——.]—A patent (hereinafter referred to as the first patent) was granted in 1920, the first claim whereof was: "Process of manufacturing artificial silk & like threads or filaments from solutions of cellulose acetate, nitrocellulose or other cellulose derivatives containing volatile liquids such as acetone, alcohol-benzene, ether-alcohol & the like, characterised in that the artificial silk of filaments are spun downwards in an enclosing casing, & the travelling threads or filaments, solidified by the evaporation of the volatile solvent by an atmosphere of warm air, are led out continuously & wound up mechanically on apparatus located outside the casing." The second claim related to apparatus & concluded: "devices located outside the casing, for winding up the threads or filaments & means serving to feed or convey the threads or filaments to the winding-up devices with or without the interposition of twisting or other devices . . .":—Held: (1) there was no inter-related working between the integers, but each performed an independent part, & therefore there was no subject-matter in the combination: the evidence of commercial success resulting from the invention was insufficient: the adoption of the various integers was obvious in the light of common general knowledge: the patent was invalid for want of subject-matter & was also anticipated by certain publications, which disclosed the combination as a whole. (2) The second patent was granted in 1922 & related to the twisting & winding up of the filaments by means of a known device, the cap spinning apparatus:—Held: this was an analogous, if not an identical, user of the device. (3) The function of expert witnesses & the nature of the questions that might be put was considered, &:—Held: such a witness is entitled to give evidence as to the state of the art, the meaning of technical terms, to give an opinion whether, on a hypothetical construction of a specification, a skilled worker could carry it into effect, to say what such construction or a given piece of apparatus would have taught or suggested, & generally to explain scientific facts. But he may not be asked (even as engineer or chemist) what a specification means, nor whether any step is obvious. Numerous examples of inadmissible questions & answers were given.

The appeal was dismissed with costs.—BRITISH CELANESE, LTD. v. COURTAULDS, LTD. (1935), 152 L. T. 537; 79 Sol. Jo. 126; 52 R. P. C. 171, H. L.

459j. —— ——.]—Letters patent were granted for "improvements in frames & covers for manholes & the like." The claim of the specification (as amended) was as follows: "A frame & cover with the cover made in substantially rectilinear triangular sections, & the frame made with suitable bearing blocks or seatings to support the sections of the cover at their corners, substantially as set forth." In an action for infringement of the patent it was held that the patent was invalid on the ground that the principle of three point support, applied to covers, was known having been so applied to a cover substantially triangular in form & used before the date of the patent & known as the Seamac cover, & that there was no subject-matter in splitting a cover into triangular sections in order to apply the principle. Pltf. appealed: —Held: the claim was too wide, & would include modifications in which there was no inventive step, namely, dividing the Seamac cover into two triangular sections & laying triangular sections together to form a cover; &, in view of the Seamac cover being known & used before the date of the patent, there was no subject-matter. The appeal was dismissed with costs.

Claim 1 was for "a fish cooker of the coke or like fired type provided with an escape flue for the fumes, such flue leading downwards with a delivery outlet some distance above the base of the flue in which a fan is situated & the delivery outlet leading to beneath the fire grate to deliver the fumes or the like thereto, substantially as described." In 1932 pltf. commenced an action for infringement of the patent, claiming the usual relief. Defts. denied infringement & alleged that the patent was invalid for want of novelty, subject-matter & utility. Defts., who had been licensees under the patent, counterclaimed for the return of moneys paid by them to pltf. & also for damages for breach of warranty of validity of the patent. At the trial defts. abandoned their counterclaim:—Held: the patent was invalid for want of subject-matter; & had the patent been valid, there was no infringement. The action was dismissed with costs. The counterclaim was also dismissed with costs. A set-off was ordered & a certificate was granted in respect of certain of the particulars of objections.—TOMLIN v. ACME ENGINEERING CO., LTD. (1933), 51 R. P. C. 117.

459l. —— ——.]—Letters patent were granted for "Improvements in or relating to circuit arrangements & discharge tubes for amplifying electric oscillations." Claim 1 of the patent was for "a circuit arrangement for amplifying electric oscillations by means of one or more thermionic discharge tubes connected in series or cascade, etc." Claim 2 was for "a discharge tube having at least three auxiliary electrodes between the cathode & the anode, characterised in that the auxiliary electrode nearest to the anode is directly connected to the cathode so as to be maintained continuously at the cathode potential." Claim 5 was for "the discharge tube substantially as described." The present applts., in an action for infringement of the patent, alleged infringement of claims 2 & 5 in respect of the sale of certain wireless valves. No infringement of claim 1 was alleged. The present resps. at first denied, but subsequently did not dispute infringement, & claimed that the letters patent were invalid for want of novelty or patentable subject-matter, & by reason of prior grant & prior publication:—Held: claim 1 was valid as an invention possessing novelty, utility & subject-matter; claim 2 was invalid, as the monopoly claimed was wider than the subject-matter of the invention; & claim 5 was consequently also invalid as it related to subject-matter within claim 2 & was also ambiguous.—MULLARD RADIO VALVE CO., LTD. v. PHILCO RADIO & TELEVISION CORPN. Claim 1 of the specification was as follows: "A thin metal member of girder form comprising two oppositely disposed flanges or booms & one or more connecting webs in which the thin metal both of the booms or flanges & of the webs is stiffened to withstand shear & longitudinal compression stresses by being bent about longitudinal axes so that its cross-section is an arc or a sinuous curve substantially as & according to the principles described." In an action for the infringement of the patent defts. denied infringement & alleged the patent was invalid by reason of prior publication, want of subject matter & ambiguity:—Held: there was insufficient subject-matter for letters patent in corrugating longitudinally the webs & flanges of a thin metal aeroplane spar in view of the common knowledge of corrugating for the purposes of adding resistance to buckling & the patent was invalid. Action was dismissed with costs.—A. T. S., LTD. v. HANDLEY PAGE, LTD. (1936), 53 R. P. C. 99.

459n. —— ——.]—Letters Patent No. 377,330 were granted for "Improvements in packing of invert sugar & like substances for transport." Claim 1 was as follows: "1. An improved method of packing a predetermined quantity (for example, one hundredweight) of invert sugar & like crystallisable substances, comprising the step of pouring the sugar when liquid into a paper bag or like pre-formed & pre-shaped container positioned in a mould of a shape requisite to the form of a package suitable for man-handling & transport, the said sugar container being thereby pressed against the surface of the mould by the weight of the liquid sugar so that it constitutes a closely fitting detachable lining of the mould, a crystallising vessel in the sugar gradually sets to a compact & shaped crystallised sugar block & thereafter serves as a container or wrapper for transport for said sugar block which by reason of it having set by crystallisation, serves as the rigid or firm member of the package." In an action for infringement of the patent defts. denied infringement & validity & counterclaimed for revocation of the patent. It was held at the trial that the patent was valid, but not infringed as defts.' carton was more or less rigid. By agreement between the parties the appeal was limited to the issue of infringement & defts. did not oppose the appeal:—Held: the patent had been infringed by defts., & a declaration to this effect was granted with liberty to apply for an inquiry as to damages. A trawling gear of the type set forth in which the width of opening of the net is maintained by two separating panels or otter boards which are connected on the one side by towing lines or cables to a single boat & on the other side to the net by means of cables of relatively great length which converge towards the net so that the width of opening of the net is directly controlled by the inclination of the cables to each other, substantially as described." Defts., former licensees, denied infringement. E. P. & B. A. P. applied by petition for the revocation of these five patents. An application for leave to amend the first patent (No. 175,824) was made by pltfs. upon which deft. & petitioners & several others appeared as resps.:—Held: (1) all the claims of letters patent No. 175,824 were invalid for want of novelty or subject-matter, & that patent would be invalid even if the specification were amended as asked, & amendment was refused; & patent 209,032 was invalid for want of subject-matter, & patent 211,165 was invalid for want of subject-matter as well as prior publication; & all these three patents & patent 232,914, which was admitted to be invalid, were ordered to be revoked, subject to suspension of the order in the case of an appeal; (2) letters patent No. 210,396 (patent of addition to No. 209,032) fell with the parent patent but of itself had subject-matter & should become an independent patent, but that it had not been infringed. No certificate of validity as to it was given. The infringement action & the application to amend were dismissed with costs; (3) the deposit of a document on the shelves in the library of the Ministry of Agriculture & Fisheries in London held to be publication; (4) a patent does not run at sea outside the three-mile limit & user outside such limit could not constitute either a prior user or an infringement; (5) pltfs.' conduct in knowingly allowing an invalid claim in a specification of letters patent to remain unamended might be a bar to relief by way of amendment; (6) the question discussed whether the ct. can treat an agreement not to dispute validity as having any legal validity; (7) semble: licensees in respect of specified vessels were not by reason of that fact estopped from setting up invalidity where other vessels were concerned.—V. sv. Private exhibition.]—Australian letters patent No. 21809/25 were granted in 1925 in respect of an invention of "Improvements in paper bags." Claim 1 was as follows:—"1. A paper bag of the kind hereinbefore referred to having its walls composed of a plurality of plies of paper which are relatively movable at the places subjected to bending & having one or both of its ends closed by means of sewing, stapling or the like." A petition for revocation of the patent was presented to the High Ct. of Australia on the grounds of anticipation, want of subject-matter, ambiguity, & want of novelty by reason of an exhibition by the patentee's agent prior to the date of the patent of a bag made in accordance with the specification. The High Ct. & the Full Ct. dismissed the petition & upheld the validity of the patent, holding that the exhibition was private & the patentee was protected by sect. 124 of Australian Patents Act, 1903–1921. Petitioners appealed by leave to the Privy Council:—Held: the appeal should be allowed with costs & the patent be revoked, on the ground that (a) the patent was invalid in that the demonstration of the bags was such as to be outside the protection of sect. 124 of the Australian Patents Act, 1903–1921, & (b) the patent was also invalid for want of subject-matter, commercial success induced by commercial acumen & in the absence of any demand for a substitute for jute bags forming no criterion of the inventive step. The point of law whether sect. 124 forms any defence to revocation proceedings or only operates to take away a ground or grounds upon which a grant of letters patent could be refused was not decided, a decision not being necessary in the circumstances.—Paper Sacks Proprietary, Ltd. v. Cowper (1935), 53 R. 642b. ——.]—Pltfs. were the owners of letters patent relating to a cigarette-making machine, the feature of which was that it had slanting vanes which ensured that the shower of tobacco falling upon the paper should not have a vertical movement, but should have a component of motion in the direction in which the paper was moving. The advantage of the machine was that it avoided an uneven distribution of the tobacco in the cigarettes, & by its use the speed of production was markedly increased. There was, however, a German patent of 1880, in the specification of which there was a drawing of a similar arrangement of vanes, & the arrangement was described, but its purpose was not described, nor was it claimed that such an arrangement had the effect of increasing the speed of production of a perfect cigarette. The machine shown in the 1880 specification worked at a much lower speed than did that of pltfs. An application was made, in an infringement action, to amend the specification by limiting the invention claimed to machines capable of moving at a high speed, thereby excluding the earlier invention:—Held: (1) without the proposed amendment, the patent in suit was invalid by reason of anticipation by the earlier patent; (2) the amendments sought were such as would distinguish the invention from the earlier one without enlarging its scope, & were such as might be allowed within Patents & Designs Acts, 1907–1932, s. 22; (3) the patent as amended was valid; (4) the claim as originally framed had been framed in good faith & with reasonable skill & knowledge. Therefore, although the patent was invalid at the time when it was infringed, damages could be awarded in respect of such infringements.—MOLINS v. INDUSTRIAL MACHINERY CO., LTD., [1937] 4 All E. 659a. —— ——.]—In 1927, a patent was granted in respect of "improvements in or relating to actuating devices for the control of the carburetters of internal combustion engines, but applicable for other purposes." The first claim was as follows: "Actuating provision suitable for use in connection with the control of the carburetters of internal combustion engines but applicable for other purposes having a rotary hand grip or operating member adapted to displace a longitudinally movable member incorporated within or substantially within the overall transverse dimension of said grip or operating member & a front collar for said grip or operating member said front collar being adapted to embrace the handle bar or other supporting member upon which the said actuating member is adapted to be mounted & in which the said grip or operating member is of a character such that power transmission mechanism which it may be adapted to actuate can be disconnected from it at a time at which it is mounted or located upon said handle bar or supporting member with said front collar in its normal position." Pltfs. commenced an action for infringement of the patent. Defts. denied infringement & alleged that the patent was invalid by reason of anticipation by prior specifications & prior users, for want of subject-matter & utility & for insufficiency, & counterclaimed for the revocation of the patent. Pltfs. alleged that the object of the invention was to be able to expose the point of attachment of the power transmission mechanism, for ease of replacement, while keeping all the parts in operative engagement upon the handle bar. One of the prior specifications of A.M.A.C. relied on by defts. described such a device in the letter-press, but showed in the drawings a mechanism which could not be operated so as to fulfil the objects of pltfs.' patent:—Held: assuming that the specification was not ambiguous, & that its object was as alleged by pltfs., the specification of A.M.A.C. disclosed in its drawings a device that could be modified by a skilled mechanic so as to fulfil pltfs.' objects & that accordingly the patent was invalid either by reason of anticipation or want of subject-

N. & G., Ltd. & M. brought an action for infringement against J., to which V. was afterwards joined as co-pltf. Claim 1 of No. 294,972 was as follows: "A process for making diazotypes by exposing under a transparent original a layer containing a diazo-compound decomposable by light, & then developing, wherein there is present in the finished picture a reducing agent." Deft. denied infringement, & alleged that Nos. 317,199 & 320,603 were anticipated by certain prior users, & that No. 294,972 was invalid by reason of want of novelty & subject-matter, insufficiency, inutility, & false suggestion. Deft. counterclaimed for the revocation of all three patents & also for relief in respect of actionable threats. At the trial, in consequence of certain evidence given for pltfs., deft. obtained leave to amend his particulars of objections by adding an allegation of non-disclosure of the best method known to the patentee. Pltfs. did not seek to prove infringement of No. 320,603, & at a later stage did not seek to support the validity of this patent or of No. 317,199:—Held: as to patent No. 294,972 on the evidence (a) some five or six of the very numerous bodies comprised in the preferred classes of reducing agents were effective, (b) others of the same bodies would be incapable of producing the desired result, but would be known to a competent chemist as unsuitable, (c) others of the same bodies would not be so known, but their suitability could be tested by simple experiment; that, assuming in the patentee's favour that claims 1 & 16 covered only the use of reducing agents which he had indicated to be suitable, the fact that many of these bodies were useless rendered the claims bad for want of utility; that it was essential to the success of the process that the print should finish neutral or acid, that this had been known to the patentee, & had not been disclosed, & that consequently the patent was invalid under sect. 25 (2) (j); infringement had not been proved; Nos. 317,199 & 320,603 were invalid for want of novelty; also, deft. had proved actionable threats. Judgment was given for deft., with costs, & he was granted an injunction to restrain threats in respect of the three patents in suit & agreed damages. The costs of the application to amend the particulars of objections at trial were ordered to follow the event, & a certificate was given in respect of certain particulars of objections. The order for revocation of patent No. 294,972 was stayed in the event of an appeal within one month upon terms that the patentee should not seek to amend.—NORTON & GREGORY, LTD. v. JACOBS (1936), 54 R. 724a. Whether prohibition lies.]—On Oct. 26, 1928, W. lodged an application & provisional specification for a patent for improvements in folding spectacles. The complete specification was lodged in July, & accepted in Dec. 1929, as No. 322,297. In Feb. 1930, notice of opposition was given by E. & the T. Optical Co. In Apr. 1930, W. lodged another application with a complete specification, differing only from No. 322,297 in the claims, which were fewer in number, but widened by the omission of certain limiting words. This specification was accepted on Apr. 28, 1930, as No. 328,584. W. then made an application for a division of the patent under r. 13 of the Patents Rules, & the Comptroller allowed it, holding that No. 328,584 should be treated as an application for a patent for an invention excluded by amendment from specification No. 322,297, & should bear date Oct. 26, 1928. The opponents, contending that the Comptroller could not divide or antedate the application, & that his decision, in the circumstances, was ultra vires the Patents & Designs Act & the rules thereunder, moved for a writ of prohibition to restrain the Comptroller & W. from proceeding with application No. 328,584: —Held: (1) the decision of the Comptroller being in a matter of the administration of the Patent Office & the procedure in granting a patent, was final, subject to an appeal to the Law Officer under the Act, & to directions which might be given by the officer under sect. 74, & prohibition would not lie against the Comptroller or the Law Officer in respect of any act or decision so done or made; (2) the division or antedating of an application for a patent provisionally decided by the Comptroller before opponents have been heard is a matter which can be reopened & the decisions thereon reviewed in opposition proceedings, according to long established practice in the Patent Office, notwithstanding that such questions are not specifically included in the grounds of opposition enumerated in sect. 11 of the Act.—Re WINGATE'S PATENT, [1931] 2 Ch. 272; 100 L. Injunction to restrain acceptance — Lawful ground of objection—"Secret processes."]—Where an injunction had been granted to restrain appct. for a patent from disclosing processes derived from pltf. co., or from doing any act which might cause same to become public or commonly known, & the Comptroller-General refused to undertake when he should receive an application for the acceptance of a complete specification to consider such injunction a "lawful ground of objection" to the acceptance of the complete specification within Patents & Designs Act, 1907 (c. 29), s. 7 (3), objecting to his duty prescribed by the Patent Acts being in any way interfered with by the ct., the ct. granted an injunction restraining the Comptroller-General from accepting the complete specification, as under sect. 9, on such acceptance, the matter would be thrown open to public inspection, the specification being concerned with some of the processes which, as between pltf. co. & appct., appct. had been restrained from disclosing, & because the Comptroller-General might accept the complete specification on the footing that the injunction against appct. would not constitute a lawful ground of objection within sect. 7 (3). On appeal the S.-G. on behalf of the Comptroller-General undertook that the injunction granted against appct. would be properly considered in deciding whether the specification should be accepted as being something which might constitute "a lawful ground of objection" to such acceptance, & by consent the order against the Comptroller-General was discharged, notice of discontinuance to be served upon him. Appct. was also further restrained from proceeding with his application in addition to the injunction granted against him in the ct. below.—REX CO. & REX RESEARCH CORPN. v. MUIRHEAD & COMPTROLLER-GENERAL OF PATENTS (1926), 96 L. 796b. ——.]—Pltfs. were owners of letters patent for "improvements in & relating to apparatus for grinding cylindrical bodies." The machine, the subject of the patent, was known as a centreless grinding machine, since the work to be ground was not supported between centres, but was caused to rotate between the grinding wheel & two other points of support. In pltfs.' embodiment of the invention & in the machine illustrated in the specification, the work rotated between a peripherally acting grinding wheel & a peripherally acting regulating wheel & rested upon a work rest placed between the two wheels. The specification described a theory according to which the machine was said to work. Claim 1 of the specification was for "a method of grinding cylindrical bodies, which consists in supporting a substantially cylindrical body in operative relation to a grinding surface having portions progressively more distant from the surface supporting the cylindrical body, rotating said body by means of a driving member, & in moving said rotating body into contact with more distant portions of said grinding surface as said driving member moves said body relative thereto when said member engages projecting irregularities in said body." Centreless grinders using non-peripherally acting wheels either for regulating or grinding were old. Pltfs. brought an action for infringement against defts. who had built a machine with peripherally acting wheels, similar to pltfs.' machine. Defts. disputed the validity of the patent, & also submitted that, as their machine had been sold & supplied in parts & assembled at the works of the purchasers, this did not constitute infringement by them. Defts. counterclaimed for revocation of the patent:—Held: it had not been proved that pltfs.' machine worked according to the theory given in the specification; the claims were not limited to peripheral grinding or regulating wheels, but included machines whose grinding or regulating wheels were discs; the "driving member" claimed was a mechanical equivalent of a fixed back rest which was therefore included in the claim; & therefore the claims were anticipated & were invalid for lack of novelty; also that, on a construction of the specification put forward by pltfs., the invention had not been distinctly stated & that it merely consisted in certain, not novel, adjustments of well-known parts of a well-known machine, &, if the patent had been valid, the infringement would have been committed by the user who operated the machine in the infringing configuration & not by defts., the sellers of the machine alleged to infringe. The action was therefore dismissed & an order was made for revocation under the counterclaim. Pltfs. appealed:—Held: the patent was not limited to the use of peripherally acting wheels & was therefore bad for want of subject-matter & novelty; it was also bad for ambiguity & want of utility; & the specification as drawn was calculated to prevent a workman from using the tools of his trade. The appeal was therefore dismissed.—CINCINNATI GRINDERS (INC.) v. B. S. A. TOOLS, LTD. (1930), 48 R. P. C. 33.

796c. ——.]—In 1919 letters patent were granted in respect of "improvements in the cylinders of internal combustion chambers." Claim 1 was as follows: "In an internal combustion engine in which both the inlet & exhaust valves are disposed in one & the same side space or pocket, the combination with a cylinder whose head is flat & arranged so as to permit only the minimum clearance between it & the piston which is necessary for mechanical reasons, of a valve pocket constituting the combustion chamber or space which is situated at the side of the cylinder & formed with a part which overlaps the cylinder head or bore where is a port whose area is substantially the same as that of the inlet valve port." In 1931 pltfs. commenced an action for infringement of the patent. Defts. denied infringement & alleged that the patent was invalid by reason of lack of novelty, subject-matter, & utility, & by reason of ambiguity & insufficiency of definition:—Held: the invention solved a problem which had existed in 1919 by a means new in 1919; the invention did not relate only to the form of the combustion chamber, but had another feature; the patent was novel & had subject-matter; & there was not sufficient ambiguity in the words "minimum clearance," "port or passage," "substantially the same area," to invalidate the patent; construing the specification as a whole & considering the purpose of the invention the words "area of a port or passage" were sufficiently definite & meant "the minimum cross-sectional area of a passage"; defts.' engine had minimum clearance & the minimum area of its cylinder head port or ——— was, though not equal, substantially equal to the area of the inlet valve port; & the patent was valid & had been infringed.—RICARDO & RICARDO & CO., ENGINEERS (1927), LTD. v. ROOTES, LTD. & HILLMAN MOTOR CAR CO., LTD. (1933), 51 R. P. C. 35, 92.

796d. ———.]—Pltfs. brought an action for infringement of their patent for "Improvements in or relating to apparatus for printing late news in newspaper printing machines." Defts. denied infringement & alleged that the patent was invalid. The words "substantially as hereinbefore described" appeared in the usual way at the end of the claims. The following words also appeared in the specification: "It will be understood that the invention is not limited to the actual construction or to the combination of the features of the construction hereinbefore described as the operations described may be carried out in constructions considerably different without departing from the invention." BENNETT, J., held that the patent was void for ambiguity. Pltfs. appealed:—Held: any ambiguity must be resolved in the favour of pltfs. & the restriction of the invention to a particular type of mechanism; the words "substantially as hereinbefore described" merely refer back to the body of the specification & their scope & meaning vary in each particular case; in this case they referred to the whole specification & to each element in the combination but they had not the effect of making the claim one for a principle; the words set out above beginning "it will be understood . . ." though now common in specifications, are obscure in their meaning, are not a description of anything, cannot be imported into the claim by the words "substantially as hereinbefore described," & are not a proper way of claiming a principle. The use of such words is to be avoided.—CRABTREE & SONS, LTD. v. HOE & CO., LTD., [1936] 2 All E. R. 1639; 53 R. P. C. 443, C. A.

The grounds set up for the application were prior publication & insufficient & unfair description. The Assistant-Comptroller ordered the patent to be revoked. The patentees appealed to the ct. & were allowed to adduce further evidence as to the meaning of technical terms used in the specification & in the art. The patentees offered further amendments at the hearing of the appeal:—Held: the complete specification as filed was bad for insufficiency, such insufficiency could not be cured by any proper amendment, as if the proposed amendments were allowed the patent would be converted into one for an invention substantially different from that claimed. Pltfs. brought an action for infringement of the patents, & defts. counterclaimed for the patents to be revoked. Pltfs. applied under sect. 22 of Patents & Designs Acts, 1907–1932, for leave to amend the specification of the second patent by way of disclaimer, correction or explanation. Leave was given to proceed, the form of the order being similar, with one addition, to that made in N. V. Hollandsche Glas-en-Metaalbank v. Rockware Glass Syndicate, Ltd. (1931), 48 R. P. 1057 i. General rule—Question for judge.]—In an action for infringement of a patent, not only is the construction of the specification exclusively within the province of the ct., & not within that of the jury or expert witnesses, but it is also for the ct. a question of law.—WESTERN ELECTRIC CO., INCORPORATED & NORTHERN ELECTRIC CO. v. BALDWIN INTERNATIONAL RADIO OF CANADA, [1934] S. C. R. 570; 4 D. L. R.

1059 i. —— —— Identity of two inventions.]—Held : the construction of the language of the specification of a patent is a question of law for the ct., & pltf. co.'s specification covered not merely the precise mechanism described, but the attainment of a novel result at which, according to the arbitrator's findings, deft.'s machine was designed to arrive by means of a process substantially equivalent to that disclosed in pltf. co.'s specification, such findings in consequence establishing what is in law an infringement of pltf. co.'s patent.—FARMERS' MILKING MACHINE CO., LTD. v. KNAPP, [1928] N. PART VI. SECT. 6, SUB-SECT. 2.—B.

1090 i. General rule.]—The claims at the end of the specification in a patent must be regarded as definitely determining the scope of the patent monopoly, having regard to the due & proper construction of the expressions they contain. They must be construed in the light of the rest of the specification; that is to say, the specification must be considered in order to assist in comprehending & construing the meaning—& possibly the special meaning—in which the words or the expressions contained in the claims are used; but, on the issue either of validity or of infringement, the criterion must be determined according to the scope of the monopoly as expressed in the claims (though it is not necessary, to justify a holding of infringement, that the infringing article be found identically, or in every respect, the same as the patented article; it is sufficient if the infringer has borrowed the substance or spirit of the invention as it can be ascertained from the claims, except in details which could be varied without detriment to the successful working of it).—SMITH INCUBATOR CO. v. SEILING, [1937] S. sa. To sanction amendment notwithstanding action for infringement or revocation.]—When an application has been made under sect. 71 of Patents Act, 1903–1921, of Australia, to amend a complete specification, & afterwards an action for infringement, or for revocation, is commenced, sects. 80 & 81 of the Act do not preclude the ct. which has seisin of the application from permitting a modification of the amendments proposed & from sanctioning the modified amendments. After the High Ct. of Australia had affirmed an order by which a patentee's application under sect. 71 had been dismissed upon the ground that the amendments, contrary to sect. 78, would make the invention substantially different from that originally claimed, proceedings were commenced for revocation of the patent. Upon appeal to the Privy Council the patentee was allowed to modify the amendments proposed, but the Board, not being satisfied that the amendments even as modified were permissible under sect. 78 except as to certain uncontested items, affirmed the judgment of the High Ct., subject to allowing the uncontested amendments.—COWPER (N. L.) v. PAPER SACKS PROPRIETARY, LTD., [1932] A. C. 709; 101 L. J. P. C. 165; 148 L. T. 27.—AUS.

1213a. —— —— —— ——.]—Letters patent were granted in 1916 for a "method & apparatus for separating quantities of molten glass or like material from mass." Claim 1 was as follows: "The method of delivering charges of viscous glass from a viscous mass thereof which consists in producing by preforming a charge of glass of such form & dimensions & so related to the condition under which it is to be deposited that it will not fold, lap or coil when so deposited, & depositing it in such a manner that it will not fold, lap or coil." After commencing an action for infringement, pltfs. moved for leave to amend the specification pursuant to sect. 22 of Patents & Designs Acts, 1907–28, but deleting some of the claims & certain optional alternatives, & by incorporating other consequential amendments. Defts. contended that the amended form of one claim, which was appendant upon a claim which the amendment sought to delete, was inadmissible:—Held: leave be granted to amend the specification by deleting the claims desired, appendant claim to have the whole of the claim to which it was appendant incorporated in it, & by deleting the optional alternatives as asked for; the costs of the motion & the costs of & occasioned by such amendments of the pleadings as were necessitated by the amendment of the specification to be defts. in any event.—HOLLANDSCHE (N. V.) GLAS-EN METAALBANK v. ROCKWARE GLASS SYNDICATE, LTD. (1931), 48 R. P. C. 425

1213b. —— —— —— ——.]—In 1931 letters patent were granted in respect of "Improvements in & relating to the recording of sound on films." The first claim was as follows (amendments allowed in the present proceedings being included): "A method of producing a photographic sound record of the varying width constant density type, in which a beam of light is passed through a triangular & rectangular slit in that order on to a moving film to form thereon a transversely disposed narrow strip of light & in which the beam of light is caused to vibrate in the direction of movement of the film relatively to the said slit in a manner depending upon both the variations in the form of the sound waves & upon the intensity of the sound so that the mean width of the exposed area of the sound track is reduced as the intensity of the sound decreases." In 1933 pltfs. commenced an action for infringement. Subsequently as a result of amendments of the defence, pltfs. twice gave notice of motion to amend the patent & it was ordered that the amendments proposed in the first motion should be incorporated in the second motion, & that that motion should be heard at the trial of the action. Defts. in their pleadings denied infringement, but at the trial admitted it, if the patent was valid, but alleged that the patent was invalid by reason of want of novelty, want of subject matter & of ambiguity:—Held: (1) the amendments proposed (with certain consequential amendments not advertised) should be allowed, so as to exclude certain alternatives that were not useful. The amendments included certain alterations to the claims which were held to be by way of explanation, & not to alter the scope of the invention on the true construction of the original specification. An objection of want of skill & knowledge not sustained. But observed that, in the majority of cases, it is more convenient to deal with an application to amend pltf.'s specification before the trial of an action for infringement; (2) the amended patent was valid as a combination of items of public knowledge, & (infringement being admitted) an injunction & order for delivery up were granted, but no damages prior to the date of judgment (without prejudice however to the date from which damages might accrue in another pending action); (3) publication in a Journal, even of wide circulation in the art, did not constitute common general knowledge, in the absence of evidence, not merely of reading, but of acceptance generally by those engaged in the art, & such knowledge is difficult to attribute when there has been no user. Defts. were ordered to pay the costs of the action & the counterclaim, pltfs. to pay the costs of the motion to amend with a set off. A certificate of validity of the patent was granted.

A stay of the order for the injunction & delivery up was allowed, pending appeal, in the special commercial circumstances of the case & pltfs. not objecting & defts. undertaking to keep on account.—BRITISH ACOUSTIC FILMS, LTD., POULSEN & PETERSEN v. NETTLEFOLD PRODUCTIONS (1935), 53 R. P. C. 221; on appeal (1937), 54 R. P. C. 267, C. A.

1213c. —— —— —— Effect of delay.]—Letters patent No. 303,690 were granted in 1928 in respect of "improvements in or relating to boxes or containers for electrical accumulators." Claim 1 was as follows: "An electric cell having a liquid electrolyte & a gas-venting device adapted to prevent the escape of electrolyte, wherein a space sufficient to receive all the electrolyte is provided between the plates & one of the outer walls of the cell, the arrangement being such that the internal opening to the venting device is above the level of the electrolyte when in the space when said outer wall is lowermost, & wherein the plates can be entirely covered with electrolyte when said outer wall is either uppermost or on one side of the cell." Pltfs. were the proprietors of the patent, & also of patent No. 295,516, of earlier date & being a concurrent grant, in respect of "improvements in or connected with galvanic "batteries." After commencing an action for infringement of the patents, pltfs., moved for leave to amend the specification of patent No. 303,690 under sect. 22 of Patents & Designs Acts, 1907–1932, by deleting Claim 1 & inserting a disclaimer of the construction the subject of the earlier patent, & making other consequential amendments. Defts. contended that Claim 2 was substantially the same as Claim 1 & ought, therefore, to be deleted if Claim 1 were dropped, & that the proposed amendments would result in ambiguity:—Held: leave be granted to amend the specification in the manner proposed, with some modification of the form of the disclaimer, but that having regard to the delay of pltfs. in making the application they should be precluded from claiming damages from defts. in respect of infringements committed prior to the date of the order; the costs of the motion & the costs of all necessary amendments of the pleadings & the costs thrown away to be paid by pltfs. in any event.—ROWLAND EDWARDS & CO., LTD. v. THREE STAR ACCUMULATORS, LTD. (1934), 51 R. P. C. 370.

1219a. Extension of time—Appeal to wrong court]. —An application was made to the Comptroller-General of Patents under sect. 21 to amend a patent specification. That application was opposed & the opponents applied to the Comptroller-General for an order for discovery of certain documents. The Comptroller-General by his decision dismissed that application & made no order. Thereupon the opponents gave notice of appeal from that decision to the Patents Appeal Tribunal. It was held that the Patents Appeal Tribunal had no jurisdiction to hear the appeal. The opponents then filed a petition to the High Ct. under R. S. C., Ord. 53A, r. 5 (a), & they sought leave to present the petition out of time:—Held: time for presenting such a petition could only be extended in "special circumstances," that the circumstances were not "special" & the leave sought was refused.—Re WESTERN ELECTRIC CO., LTD. 1242a. ——.]—In 1927, letters patent were granted in respect of "Improvements in radio receiving systems." Claim 1 was as follows: "A high frequency signal receiving system, including an amplifying valve & a detector, in which the direct current passing through the detector controls the mean potential between two of the electrodes of the amplifying valve, so as to regulate the sensitivity of the amplifier in accordance with the strength of the high frequency input oscillations." In 1934, M. W. T. Co., Ltd. & E. M. I., Ltd. applied for leave to amend the specifications by (inter alia) correcting a misdirection concerning the substitution of an electrical circuit shown in Figure 3 for a part of the electrical circuit shown in Figure 1. The application was opposed by M. R. V. Co., Ltd. The Superintending Examiner, acting for the Comptroller, disallowed the principal amendments sought & M. W. T. Co., Ltd. & E. M. I., Ltd. petitioned the ct. by way of appeal:—Held: the mistake sought to be corrected by amendment was a clear misdescription; the correction of a misdescription was not necessarily unallowable, but each case must depend upon its own facts; the specification must be read as addressed to persons reasonably skilled in the art; here the proposed amendments would not make the invention substantially different from that originally claimed & described & they were not objectionable. Further evidence having been admitted it was held, that the origin of the mistake had been properly explained & that the delay in discovering it had been properly accounted for. The amendments sought were allowed, but in the circumstances petitioners were ordered to pay the HOUSTON CO., LTD.'S PATENT (No. 283,120) (1935), 53 R. P. C. 255.

1257a. ——.]—Letters patent were granted in 1927 for "an improved reflector & advertising sign for window, shop, & general display purposes." Claim 1 was as follows: "A combined lighting unit & advertising sign of the kind hereinbefore referred to wherein the means for carrying the lamp or lamps is formed integral with the portion of the body of the sign which acts wholly as a reflector." After commencing an action for infringement, pltf. moved for leave to amend the specification pursuant to sect. 22 of the Patents & Designs Acts, 1907–1928, by limiting the construction covered by the claims to one embodying a particular means of suspension:—Held: the desired amendment limited the claim, but would result in a claim for protection for an invention which had not been foreshadowed in the original specification & was a different invention from that claimed by the original specification. The motion was dismissed with costs.—WALSH v. ALBERT BAKER & CO. (1898), LTD. (1930), 47 R. P. C. 283; 47 R. P. C. 458, C. A.

1261b. Addition of feature of later claim.]—In 1927, letters patent were granted in respect of "improvements in & relating to frictional gearing & the like mechanism." Claim 1 was as follows: "A friction gear of the type indicated, in which the transmission of power through the gear is divided between friction members interconnected as regards power transmission & arranged co-axial with, & on opposite sides of, another friction member having friction surfaces on its opposite sides, while intermediate members are interposed between each of such interconnected friction members & said other friction member for transmitting the power there between, said interconnected friction members acting as driving members & said other friction member as a driven member, or vice versâ, substantially as described." In 1932, G. M. C. applied for leave to amend the specification by (inter alia), limiting Claim 1 by introducing one feature the subject of a later claim & another feature, that of connecting by a casing or its equivalent the central friction member of the gear to a shaft aligned with the shaft carrying the outer friction members. This feature of coaxiality of the driving & driven members was not described in the specification but was illustrated in the drawings of the preferred embodiment. The Superintending Examiner, acting for the Comptoller-General, disallowed these amendments, & G. M. C. petitioned the ct. by way of appeal:—Held: if it can be shown that in the invention as disclosed in the specification there is a proper ground for differentiating it from the prior art, then although that ground has not been emphasised in the original specification, an amendment directed to the insertion in the description of that ground ought to be allowed; in this case the feature sought to be emphasised by the amendments was in fact to be found in the drawings, & the amendments were directed, not to claiming a different invention, but to embodying a proper description of the difference distinguishing the invention from the prior art, & should be allowed. Liberty was given to petitioners to amend the specification.—Re THOMSON'S PATENT (1934), 51 R. P. C. 241.

1261c. Disclaimer & explanation.]—In 1924, Letters Patent were granted in respect of "Improvements in or relating to dust collectors or separators & the like." Claim 1 was as follows: "Improved apparatus for the separation & removal of dust & grit from dust laden air or from the gaseous products of combustion of furnaces of the kind referred to comprising in combination a vortex or separating chamber, an admission opening therein for the current of dust laden air or gases, means for setting up the necessary whirling motion of the said current in the vortex chamber, an exhaust passage for the purified air or gas connected to the side of the vortex chamber, a draught inducing device connected so as to draw or force the said current into the vortex chamber & the purified air or gas from thence through the said exhaust passage, a tangential dust outlet arranged at any desired point of the periphery of the vortex chamber, & a connection from the said outlet to a suitable dust receptacle, or to a settling chamber." In 1935, D. & Co., Ltd., applied for leave to amend the specification by (inter alia) limiting the invention to separators in which the air stream was induced by a suction fan as opposed to those in which such stream was induced by a pusher fan. D. & Co., Ltd., also sought to limit the invention to apparatus in which there were two separators. The amendments sought were opposed by the G. E., Co., Ltd., & by J. H. & Co. (L.), Ltd. The Comptroller-General allowed the first set of amendments sought, namely, those limiting the invention to separators in which the air stream was induced by a suction fan, but he disallowed the second set of amendments sought & so far as that part of his decision was concerned D. & Co., Ltd., petitioned the ct. by way of appeal:—Held: the amendments sought were by way of disclaimer & of explanation that they came within the provisions of sect. 21 of Patents & Designs Acts, 1907–1932, & they ought to be allowed with certain variations. Liberty was given to petitioners to amend the specification & resps. were directed to pay one-half of the costs of the petitioners.—Re DAVIDSON'S PATENT (1936), 53 R. P. C. 453.

1342a. —— When granted.]—Two applications by L. for inventions having been made, & a complete specification in respect of them having been filed, an application was made by W. requesting that in the case of the earlier application a patent should be granted to him & L. jointly, W. claiming under an agreement with L. that L. would on certain conditions assign to him one-half share of the patent when granted. L. did not consent, & he applied to the Comptroller to settle a dispute between him & W. It was held by the Comptroller that sect. 12 (1) (b) & sect. 12 (2) were not applicable & that he had no jurisdiction to deal with the matters in issue. W. appealed to the Patents Appeal Tribunal. The appeal was dismissed with costs.

1424a. ——.]—Letters patent were granted for "Improvements in apparatus for breaking up, untwisting, & teasing the fibres in the form of ropes & the like." Claim 1 of the specification was as follows: "In a rope untwisting, breaking up, & teasing machine, the combination with a rotary right-angled nozzle having a guide passage adapted to receive a rope through its axial arm & discharge it through the radial one, of stationary teasing spikes fixed in the plane of rotation of the rope end, & a hood or casing so shaped as to form a guide for the end of the rope whirled round by the said radial arm so as to direct it against the spikes." In an action for infringement of the patent pltfs. alleged infringement of Claims 1 & 2. Defts. denied infringement & alleged that the patent was invalid by reason of want of novelty & subject-matter, inutility, insufficiency & ambiguity :—Held : the patent was confined to, or at any rate included, lateral guidance by the casing; on a proper construction of the specification the passages in the rotating fan in defts.' machine could not be described as a rotating right-angled nozzle & there was no infringement of Claims 1 or 2; the patent was, on this construction, admittedly not anticipated by any of the prior specifications, but there was no inventive step between certain of the latter & pltfs.' patent, & the patent was also invalid on the grounds of insufficiency & ambiguity. When renewal fees became due upon the original patent, the patentees decided to allow that patent to lapse, not appreciating that this would also make the patent of addition void. The patentees applied to restore both patents, so that the original could then be surrendered & the patent of addition be made an independent patent :—Held : restoration could not be granted.—Re RUTH-ALDO CO. sg. Abandonment.]—Held : (1) the abandonment of his invention by an inventor can only be inferred from such conduct as clearly denotes the voluntary surrender to the public of his rights in some form or other; (2) non-user of a patented invention is not fatal to a patent; (3) the Comr. of Patents in the exercise of his discretion, having granted a patent under Patent Act of 1923, the ct. will not now hold that the filing date given to appct. should be changed to another date & thus render the application subject to certain provisions of the Patent Act of 1906; (4) the Patent Act of 1923 does not affect the operation of the Act of 1906 in respect of applications for patents made under that Act or to affect any right or privilege acquired by an appct. for a patent under that Act; (5) sect. 50 of the Patent Act means, that if a person has acquired in some way or other, something which was the subject of an application for a patent by another who is presumably the first inventor, but for which a patent had not yet issued, he, the former, should have a continuing right to use & vend the same notwithstanding the issue of the patent to the other person.—SCHWEYER ELECTRIC & MANUFACTURING CO. v. NEW YORK CENTRAL RAILROAD CO., [1934] Ex. 1585a. Assignment of benefits from licence.]—A patentee granted a licence, one term of which was that the licensee should communicate further improvements. A further improvement was made & patented. The patentee assigned his patents to pltfs. who commenced an action against defts., assignees of the licensee, & claimed a declaration that defts. should communicate the improvements to them. 1587a. Agreement by parties to use each other's invention—Whether royalties payable on use of own invention.]—Pltf. & defts., who were the respective owners of patents for conveying apparatus, entered into an agreement whereby each was granted a licence to use the invention of the other. The agreement contained a clause whereby defts. undertook to pay a royalty upon conveyors made by them which were made in accordance with pltf.'s letters patent. Pltf. alleged that defts. had made such conveyors & had refused to pay the royalties due thereon. Defts. denied that such conveyors were an infringement of pltf.'s letters patent & stated alternatively that, even if they were, no royalties were due since the conveyors were in fact made in accordance with defts.' own letters patent & it was an implied term of the agreement that neither party was to pay royalties upon conveyors made in accordance with his own letters patent :—Held : (1) the agreement covered all conveyors made wholly or in part in accordance with either of the patents ; if it was intended to qualify the obligation to pay royalty by excluding conveyors made in accordance with the particular invention of the manufacturer notwithstanding that they were made wholly or in part in accordance with the invention of the other patentee, the intention ought to have been expressed in clear & unambiguous language ; also defts.' conveyors complained of were made in part in accordance with pltf.'s invention. Defts. appealed :—Held : the agreement must be looked at as a whole, & bearing in mind that it had been entered into with a view to terminating the dispute between the parties, it should not be read as imposing a liability on applts. to pay a royalty on conveyors manufactured in accordance with their own patent. The appeal was allowed with costs in the Ct. of Appeal & below.

(2) During the cross-examination of a witness for pltf. a prior specification was sought to be put to him to show the state of the art at the date of the patent in suit : —Held : the only object of such evidence was really to impugn validity &, since this could not be disputed, the evidence was disallowed.—CAMPBELL v. HOPKINS (G.) & SONS (CLERKENWELL), LTD. 1602a. Condition limiting price—Notice—Expiration of patent.]—In Sept. 1917, letters patent were granted in respect of "improvements in tobacco-pipes, cigar-holders & the like." In Mar. 1933, pltfs. commenced an action against defts. to restrain them from selling bruyère pipes manufactured by pltfs. in accordance with the patent at a price less than that authorised by pltfs. in breach of the terms of a limited licence under which alone the pipes might be sold. Defts. denied (inter alia) that the limited licence had been brought to their notice. The restrictive conditions were on a wrapper & the pipe, the sale of which was complained of, passed through several hands & defts. suggested that the outer cover had never been removed whilst the article was in their possession, In Sept. 1933, before the hearing of the action, the patent expired :—Held : the suggested defence had not been proved & defts. must be taken to have knowledge of the limited licence, & the patent in respect of which the action had been brought having expired, the ct. did not think fit to make any order, except that pltf.'s costs should be taxed & paid by defts.—ALFRED DUNHILL, LTD. v. GRIFFITHS BROS. (2) Another condition in the licence provided that the patentee should at his own cost, at the request of the licencees, commence & prosecute all legal proceedings in respect of infringement or suspected infringement of the patent :—Held : in the circumstances of the case a refusal to take proceedings when requested to do so by the licencees was not Defts. failed to deliver a defence, & at the trial the ct. made an order (inter alia) restraining defts. from selling records made in accordance with the letters patent in suit & sold by pltfs. subject to a limited licence governing the retail price at prices lower than those fixed by pltfs. in force at the date of such retail sale.—COLUMBIA GRAPHOPHONE Co., LTD. v. OXFORD CAMERA & TRADING Co., LTD. 1619a. After expiration of licence.]—A patentee brought an action for damages for infringement against a certain firm who gave judgment by consent before declaration filed, & immediately took a licence to use the patent for a term. On a bill being filed by the patentee, after the expiration of the licence, to restrain an alleged further infringement of his patent, by defts. in the action & certain other persons who had joined the firm after the date of the judgment at law:—Held: upon motion for decree, defts. in the suit were not estopped either by the licence or by the judgment at law from denying the validity of pltf.'s patent.—GOUCHER v. CLAYTON (1865), 5 New Rep. 360; 34 L. J. Ch. 239; 11 L. T. 732; 11 Jur. N. S. 107; 13 W. R. 336.

1619b. Executed agreements.]—Pltf., who exploited patents, in 1930 acquired from one S. the sole rights of exploitation of letters patent No. 267,795 for a three-wheel motor delivery carrier. On Oct. 29, 1930, he entered into an agreement with defts. that they should take over the sole manufacturing rights for Great Britain & export to any part of the world except Germany, in which it was (inter alia) agreed that the manufacture of the vehicle was to commence forthwith on the understanding that the patent rights were sound & that defts. were kept safeguarded & indemnified against infringement. Defts. were to provide the necessary facilities to enable the manufacture to be accomplished & to make an original payment, part of which was payable on signing the agreement & to pay certain royalties. In Sept. 1931, pltf. commenced an action against defts., claiming a certain sum under the agreement. Defts. by their defence denied that the agreement was binding on them, alleging (inter alia) fraud & misrepresentation, & that the agreement was entered into upon the understanding that the patent rights were sound, & that they were not sound, & that the patent was on various grounds invalid; they also denied the title of pltf. to grant the rights granted under the agreement. Defts. counter-claimed for money paid to pltf. & for expenses incurred by them:—Held: the defences of fraud & misrepresentation failed & the agreement did not contain any guarantee of the validity of the patent by pltf., but it meant that both parties had agreed that manufacture should begin forthwith on the assumption that the patent was valid & that they should co-operate to prevent infringement; the agreement had been executed & therefore, even if there had been a guarantee of validity by pltf., defts. could not set up a plea of invalidity whilst continuing to manufacture under the agreement; the doctrine of estoppel applied & defts. were not entitled to deny pltf.'s title. Judgment was given for pltf. with costs & the counter-claim was dismissed with costs.—SUHR (R. F. H.) v. CROFTS (ENGINEERS), LTD. (1932), 49 R. P. C. 359.

1638a. —— Failure of patentee to stop infringement after notice.]—Letters patent were granted in 1926, for "improvements in incandescent electric lamps, & like sealed envelopes." Claim 1 was as follows: "An envelope of the kind set forth in which the exhaust tube is provided with a bulbous closed end before insertion into the stem tube." Pltfs., the registered proprietors of the patent, granted defts. a licence to make & sell electric lamps & bulbs in accordance with patent, on payment of a royalty by defts. The licence further provided that defts. were to notify pltfs. of any infringement of the patent whereupon the pltfs. were within six weeks to take steps to prevent such infringement. Pltfs. brought an action for royalties. An infringement had been reported by defts. to pltfs., & defts. alleged that pltfs. had not taken proper steps as required by the licence. Pltfs. contended that the patent had not been infringed:—Held: the patent had been infringed; under the clause in the licence pltfs. were bound to take such steps as a reasonable 1658a. Abuse of monopoly rights—What amounts to.]—Letters patent No. 225,523 were granted to a German Co. in respect of improvements in the manufacture of lithopone. The I. G. Farbenindustrie Aktiengesellschaft, the assignees of the patent, & their licensees Orr's Zinc White, Ltd., appealed by way of a joint petition against the decision of the Comptroller allowing McKechnies' application for a compulsory licence on the grounds of abuse of monopoly under all three heads of sect. 27 (2) (a), (b), (d) of Patents & Designs Acts, 1907–1932, & ordering the grant of a non-exclusive licence to appcts., the form of which the Comptroller settled, owing to the parties not agreeing as to the form :—Held : on a true construction sect. 27 (2) (a) provides that the actual facts at the date of hearing as well as those at the date of application may be considered in determining whether the invention is being worked on a commercial scale & the scale must by the definition in sect. 93 be adequate to meet the demand for the patented article in the United Kingdom ; there was an abuse of monopoly under sect. 27 (2) (a) in that there was not at the date of hearing working on a commercial scale, the licence to Orr's not having been shown to have been granted bonâ fide ; & accordingly it was unnecessary to consider whether a case had been made out under para. (b) or para. (d), & a licence ought to be granted to appcts. ; although the licence to Orr's was not bonâ fide from the point of view of securing working in the United Kingdom, the royalty reserved must be taken to have been fixed on a fair commercial basis ; but amendments were ordered to be made in the form of compulsory licence. 1687f. Person entitled to apply for Convention patent.]—A co. became entitled in 1914 to apply for a patent in this country for an invention protected by letters patent in America dated May 18, 1914, & was therefore in a position to apply under sect. 91 of Consolidated Patents & Designs Acts, 1907 & 1919, for a Convention patent, the date of which when granted would be the same as that of the American letters patent. Owing to the war the co. made no application for any grant of letters patent until Mar. 1920, when by virtue of powers of extension vested in the Comptroller under temporary rules made by the Board of Trade & having statutory force, a grant was made to the co. of letters patent in respect of the invention. Shortly before the expiration of this grant the co. in 1929 applied by originating summons for an extension of the term of the letters patent on the ground of losses which they alleged they had suffered by reason of the war:—Held: the patentees having been entitled to apply for a Convention patent were within the description of "patentee as such" in sect. 18 (6) of Consolidated Patents & Designs Acts, 1907 & 1919, the application for a grant had been properly postponed, & they had suffered loss or damage owing to the war. They were therefore entitled to the extension they sought. 1690a. Government Departments—Represented by Comptroller.]—Western Electric Co., Ltd., applied by originating summons for the extension of the term of two patents granted in respect of "improvements in Cores for Pupin Loading Coils, electromagnets, & the like." One of the patents expired prior to the hearing of the summons. The application was opposed by the Postmaster-General, who alleged that there had been a postponed demand owing to the War & arising out of the non-installation of older types of apparatus:—Held: (1) in the preliminary proceedings Govt. Depts. were sufficiently represented by the Comptroller, & should not be otherwise represented; (2) at the hearing there had been loss of opportunity owing to the war, but this had been counterbalanced in part by a postponed demand. An extension of eighteen months was granted.—Re WESTERN ELECTRIC CO., LTD., LETTERS PATENT NO. 103,188 & 107,007 (1932), 49 R. P. C. 342.

1724a. —— ——.]—T. was the grantee of a patent for an invention for an improved pipe joint. A co. which had bought the patent applied by petition for an extension of the term of the patent. On the "return day" of the petition the Comptroller raised a question regarding disclosure of documents to be disclosed by petitioners:—Held: (1) petitioners must make an affidavit of documents & must give discovery of any document in such affidavit, the said affidavit to be filed within three weeks from the "return day" & discovery to take place within ten days from such date of filing; (2) after further hearing, "patentee" included the original inventor, those associated with him, & successive owners of the patent during its life; the remuneration of all such persons must be considered; where the original inventor & his associates had been adequately remunerated & were not parties to the petition brought by an assignee, it was no part of the duty of the ct. to grant an extension of the term of the patent to enable such assignee to remedy what had proved to be an unremunerative commercial speculation; the invention was undoubtedly meritorious, but the accounts were unsatisfactory, & the costs of maintaining subsidiary patents & trade marks ought not to be included in the accounts of loss under the patent. The application was dismissed with costs. Petitioners were ordered to pay the costs of the Comptroller, including costs incurred by him in obtaining expert examination of the accounts.—Re TRIBE'S PATENT (1936), 53 R. P. C. 131.

The second patent was granted for another invention for "improvements in or relating to gyro-compasses." P. died on Aug. 4, 1920, & under his will the patents became vested in B. On June 17, 1930, leave was granted to present the petition out of time: —Held: the inventions were of exceptional merit & utility; the patentees had made a substantial loss & in the circumstances no objection should be taken to the accounts; & each patent should be extended for ten years from the date of expiry in each case.—Re PERRY & BROWN'S PATENTS (1930), 48 R. H., Ltd., & T. were the grantees of a later patent granted in respect of improved process & apparatus for finishing lenses. The patentees applied for extensions of the terms of the patents:—Held: the inventions were of very exceptional merit & utility; the patentees had been inadequately remunerated; possible purchasers of the patented apparatus were few & commercial development of the patents must necessarily be slow; taking all these matters into consideration the first patent must be extended for ten years, & the second patent extended for such a term as to expire contemporaneously with the first patent.—Re ADAM HILGER, LTD., TWYMAN & GREEN PATENTS (1931), 49 R. Assignees of the patentee applied for an extension of the term of the patent:—Held: the invention was an exceptional one meriting five years' extension of the patent, but that it was not an "extra-exceptional" one; also petitioner must pay the costs of the Comptroller-General of Patents.—Re WYLIE'S PATENT (1934), 51 R. 1825a. Effect of later improvements.]—M. was the grantee of a patent in respect of an invention by which new & improved fabrics were made by applying an adhesive to yarn, then untwisting the yarn, & using the twistless yarn for weaving. M. & a co. applied by petition for an extension of the terms of the patent. On the "appointed day" when application was made to fix a day, the Comptroller objected that patents for certain later improvements were not disclosed. Leave was given to amend the petition. The petition was opposed by one D. & the Comptroller, on the grounds (inter alia) that there was insufficient invention or benefit to the public, that any success achieved was due to later improvements, that the accounts were incomplete, & that insufficient efforts had been made by the patentee to exploit the invention. At the hearing it appeared that there was a quantity of undisclosed correspondence relevant to the latter ground:—Held: there had been no mala fides, & the hearing was adjourned for further discovery; the opponent D. was allowed to withdraw & received his costs; there was sufficient merit to justify extension, the fact that later improvements contributed to success did not destroy that merit, & the insufficiency of accounts could be excused where there were not profits; also Claim 1 should not be extended, but any amendments made should be purely consequential. As the patent had expired, a new grant limited to the remaining claims was necessary & this was ordered to be for five years subject to an undertaking to register licences, & to submission of the amendments to the Comptroller.—Re MEYER'S PATENT (1933), 50 R. The channel irons were provided with slots through which movable thouhg self-locking thwarts were passed. The invention was proved to be of considerable utility. The remuneration received by the patentee in respect of his invention amounted to £2,147 drawn from royalties of £1 payable for each upright. The patentee had been prevented from receiving further remuneration because of the prolo period of depression in the building industry. The patentee tioned for an extension of the of the patent. 1842a. ——.]—In 1920 Letters Patent No. 149,233 were granted to E. entitled "Improved method & means for storing, transporting & delivering for use gas under pressure from liquefield gas" on a communication from abroad by the Heylandt Gesellschaft für Appartebau m.b.H. for an invention relating to the construction of insulated tanks or vessels for the transport of liquefied gases & mechanism, consisting of valves & the like, for delivery of the gas. In the exploitation of the patent various cos. had at various times acquired an interest therein. These cos. & the inventor Christian Wilhelm Paul Heylandt joined in a petition for extension. The grounds of the application were difficulties in the way of the development of the patent & inadequacy of remuneration. The opposition was based chiefly on the grounds that petitioners had failed to show that the remuneration received was inadequate:—Held: though it was impossible to ascertain the precise remuneration obtained by the various interested parties, some considerable remuneration had in fact been received, &, where a patent is purchased as a commercial transaction in the last years of its life, special considerations must apply; where a patentee is also a manufacturer, the profits which he makes as manufacturer must also be taken into consideration; further, the accounts kept were inadequate.—Re EVANS' PATENT (1937), 54 R. The patent expired prior to the hearing of the summons. The application was opposed by Radio Manufactures Assocn., Columbia Graphophone Co., Ltd., Mullard Radio Valve Co., Ltd., Mitcham Works, Ltd., & Philips Lamps, Ltd. The opponents denied that any loss was suffered by reason of the war, & alleged that by the earlier development by reason of the war of various uses to which the patent could be applied, the use of the patent had been accelerated & not retarded by the war. They further contended that the ct. must not consider the mere length of time lost, but its relative value compared with a similar period of time at the end of the life of the patent:—Held: the opponents failed to show that appcts. had been compensated by reason of the war for loss of opportunity for the period during which they were prevented by the war from dealing with the patent, & that the patent should be extended for four years.—Re WESTERN ELECTRIC CO., LTD.'S PATENT (No. 275 OF 1915) (1931), 48 R. 2171a. —— Razor blades.]—In 1925 letters patent were granted for "Improvements in Safety Razors." The patentee claimed to have discovered that each time a razor is used for shaving, the cutting edge is upturned or bent back by reason of the resistance offered by the hair of the face; that honing the blade returned the bent back portions of the blade to their original position in the line of the cutting edge, & that, if the upturning or bending back always takes place in the same direction, greatly increased life is obtained from the cutting edge. In order to ensure that the upturning always takes place in the same direction, the patentee provided that the blade should be non-reversible in the holder. This was done by means of cut out portions in the blade asymmetrically disposed relatively to the longitudinal & transverse axes of symmetry of the blade & positioning studs similarly mounted on the holder adapted to engage the cut out parts of the blade. Claim 1 was as follows: "In a safety razor, the combination of a thin cutting blade, a holder for said blade, cut out parts provided in said blade asymmetrically disposed relatively to the longitudinal & transverse axes of the said blade & positioning studs similarly mounted on said holder & adapted to engage said cut out parts in the blade." Claim 5 was as follows: "Safety razor blades substantially as described & illustrated in the accompanying drawing." The Valet Auto Strop Co., Ltd., petitioned to revoke the patent on the ground that it was invalid by reason of prior publication, that it lacked subject-matter & utility, & that the patent had been obtained by false suggestion:—Held: the theory upon which the patent was founded was erroneous; there was no subject-matter or utility in the invention, & the patent was anticipated by at least one of the prior specifications cited & was invalid. The Assistant-Comptroller ordered the specification to be amended. I. B. E., Ltd., appealed to the ct. It was contended (inter alia) for applts. that the letters patent ought to be revoked on the ground of (1) insufficient description, & (2) ambiguity. It was contended (inter alia) for resps. that the ct., on an appeal under sect. 26, had no power to order an amendment:—Held: by virtue of sect. 92 (2) of Patents & Designs Acts, 1907–1928, & of R. S. C., Ord. 53a, r. 6, the ct. has jurisdiction to order an amendment; & the ground of ambiguity, unless it be identical with the ground of insufficiency of description covered by sect. 11 (1) (c), is not open to a petitioner under sect. 26. The order of the Assistant-Comptroller was varied, & further amendments ordered.—Re International Bitumen Emulsions, Ltd., Petition for the Revocation of Dehn's Patent (1932), 49 R. P. C. 368.

2261b. —— —— Extent of power.]—In proceedings for the revocation of a patent under sect. 26 of Patents & Designs Acts, 1907 & 1919, the power of the Comptroller to require the specification to be amended by disclaimer, correction, or explanation does not enable him to accept an amendment put forward by the patentee covering a wider claim or a different claim from that made in the unamended specification. Sect. 26 does not widen or enlarge the powers of amendment conferred on the Comptroller under sect. 21 or on the ct. under sect. 22.

The procedure of amendment by way of disclaimer cannot be used so as to extract from the specification some feature or features not claimed or suggested as constituting the original invention, & to claim them as being the invention.—Re PATENT, [1932] 2 Ch. 167; 101 L. Part XIV.—Infringement.

2268a. ——.]—Letters patent were granted for "improvements in or relating to bag corner sewing & like operations." Claim 1 of the specification was as follows: "A machine as hereinbefore characterised in which a work-engaging portion of the internal work-support has movement of accommodation to either side of the sewing point in a direction substantially parallel to the stitching line." In an action for infringement of the patent, defts. denied infringement & alleged that the patent was invalid by reason of prior publication, prior user, want of subject-matter, & inutility, & they counterclaimed for the revocation of the patent:—Held: the first feature of the invention described & claimed in the specification was for the work-engaging member or tablet at the tip of the horn & consisted in its shape & method of attachment, the tablet used in defts.' machine differed wholly in form & method of attachment from the tablet described in the specification of the patent, defts.' machine did not embody any invention described in & claimed by the specification, & therefore there was no infringement; further, on that interpretation of the specification there had been no prior publication or user of the invention described, which possessed utility, & defts. had failed to establish any ground of revocation. The action & counterclaim were dismissed with costs, with the usual set-off, & a certificate with respect to certain of the particulars of objections & a certificate of validity were granted.—BRITISH UNITED SHOE MACHINERY CO., LTD. v. ISAACSON & RALPHS (NORWICH), LTD. (1934), 51 R. P. C. 289.

2268b. ——.]—Letters Patent No. 403,952 were granted for "improvements in or relating to reflecting signs for roads & streets." Pltfs. commenced an action for infringement. Defts. denied infringement & alleged that the patent was invalid & counterclaimed for its revocation. Claim 1 of the patent was as follows: "A reflector sign illuminated by an external source of light, comprising in combination with the matter to be displayed a light-condensing plate of clear glass or other transparent material, one face of which is provided with a plurality of small lenses of convex external surface, the foci of which are at the plane face of the plate, & a dispersively reflecting surface at said plane face." It was held at the trial that the patent had not been infringed & was invalid for want of subject-matter & the patent was ordered to be revoked. Pltfs. appealed. The parties settled the appeal, after argument, upon terms that the appeal in the action should be allowed subject to pltfs. (applts.) abandoning their claim that defts. had infringed. Resps. thereupon took no part in the appeal against revocation of the patent:—Held: the patent was not wanting in subject-matter & was valid; & that the appeal against the order for revocation should be allowed & that order be discharged; & a certificate of validity was granted; also that the method of dissecting a combination into its constituent elements, & then examining each element to see whether it was obvious or not, is to be applied with great caution as tending to obscure the fact that the selection of the elements presupposes the conception of the combination & the result to be obtained.—ALBERT WOOD & AMCOLITE, LTD. v. GOWSHALL, LTD. (1936), 54 R. P. C. 37, C. A.

2270a. Ownership without user.]—In 1934 pltf. commenced an action for infringement of three patents, the date of acceptance of the earliest of which was Nov. 1932. By his particulars of breaches, pltf. alleged infringement by reason of the ownership of a machine purchased from pltf. in 1930 & subsequent to Jan. 1932, & prior to the issue of the writ modified so as to be in accordance with the specifications of the patents & in infringement of each of the claims of the same. Defts. moved to strike out the statement of claim on the grounds that it disclosed no cause of action & that it was embarrassing:—Held: the statement of claim did not necessarily disclose any cause of action, as the particulars of breaches merely stated that defts. owned a machine which they had modified, possibly at a time when they were entitled to do so. The statement of claim was struck out. Pltf. appealed to the Ct. of Appeal:—Held: on appeal, the statement of claim did not allege infringement of the patents after the date of acceptance of the complete specifications, & therefore it did not disclose a good cause of action; mere ownership without possession was not sufficient to raise a presumption of an intention to use & the commission of an act which did not give rise to a cause of action was no evidence of an intention to commit an act that was unlawful. The appeal was dismissed with costs.—SCHUSTER v. HINE PARKER & CO., LTD. 2 R. P. C. 345, C. A.

2344a. —— —— Attached to article.]—The owners of letters patent relating to electrical batteries brought an action for infringement against defts. claiming damages & an injunction restraining them from infringing by selling certain batteries of the D. T. G. type manufactured by pltfs. below authorised prices. It was alleged by pltfs. that each of the said batteries had a label pasted upon it that it must not be sold below the catalogue price fixed by the patentee, & was enclosed in a carton on which was printed a notice in the same terms. P. J. S., trading as deft. firm which carried on business at a shop in L., admitted in evidence & in his answers to interrogations that he had knowledge of the restrictions, but denied (a) that all of the batteries sold by pltfs. bore the alleged label ; (b) that all of such batteries were enclosed in the alleged cartons ; (c) that deft. firm had ever sold any of such batteries below the price fixed by pltfs. as alleged :—Held : defts. having had knowledge of the restrictions upon the evidence sold batteries at prices lower than that fixed by pltfs. as patentees. Judgment was given for pltfs. & an injunction was granted with costs.—CHLORIDE ELECTRICAL STORAGE CO., LTD. v. SILVIA WIRELESS STORES (1931), 48 R. P. C. 468.

2358a. ——.]—Letters patent were granted in 1916 for "Improvements in ironing machines & apparatus." One of the claims was as follows : "In an ironing machine of the type specified, mounting the device employed to control the movements of the iron on the mechanism by which reciprocating motion is imparted to the iron in such a manner that said device partakes of both the horizontal & the vertical movements of the element which carries the iron." Pltfs. alleged that defts. had infringed the patent. Defts. denied infringement, & alleged that the patent was invalid for want of novelty, by reason of prior publication & prior public general knowledge, & for want of subject-matter :—Held : there was novelty & subject-matter & the patent was valid, but that the claims were limited to machines "of the type in which a flat iron of such a weight as will give the necessary pressure is employed," & defts.' machine was not of this type & consequently there was no infringement. The action was dismissed. Pltfs. & defts. were directed to tax their respective costs of the action, pltfs. to have one-fifth & defts. four-fifths of such costs.—LISTER BROS. v. THORP, MEDLEY & Co. 2358b. ——.]—In 1924 letters patent were granted for "Improvements in electric couplings, terminals, & the like." Claim 14 was as follows : "An electric coupling substantially as described with reference to figs. 11 & 12 of the accompanying drawing." Pltfs. brought an action for infringement of this claim. Defts. denied infringement & alleged that the patent was invalid by reason of prior publication & for want of utility :—Held : Claim 14 was for a combination of a & socket & that, as defts. sold a plug was not combined with a socket, they did not infringe.—CHAPMAN & COOK & LECTRO LINX, LTD. v. DELTAVIS, LTD. 2358c. ——.]—Letters patent dated Aug. 13. 1923, were granted to pltf. entitled "improvements in or relating to apparatus for tipping & discharging railway wagons." Claim 1 was as follows : "Apparatus of the type herein referred to, for tipping & discharging railway wagons, wherein the carrier is pivoted to & carried by the lower short arms of a pair of levers carried by stationary standards or supports arranged at the opposite ends of the carrier, the longer & upwardly extending arms of the levers being connected together by a sustaining beam that serves to hold a wagon on the carrier during the tipping operation but which is normally in an inoperative position clear of the wagon, the pivotal connections between the levers & the carrier & between the levers & the standard being so arranged that the centre of gravity of the carrier & a wagon thereon will in all working positions of the carrier be to that side of the vertical plane passing through the pivotal connections between the levers & stationary standards or supports that is opposite to that side to which the carrier & wagon are moved for tipping the wagon substantially as described." In 1931 pltf. commenced an action for infringement of the patent claiming the usual relief. Defts. denied infringement & alleged that the patent was invalid:—Held: the letters patent were valid; the words "short" & "longer" in relation to the arms of levers referred to in the specification were words limiting the monopoly claimed & not describing the best way known to the patentee of working his invention, & upon this construction there was no infringement. The action was dismissed with costs.—MITCHELL v. WEST'S GAS IMPROVEMENT CO., LTD. (1934), 51 R. P. C. 177.

2358d. ——.]—Letters patent were granted for "improvements in & relating to sound recording apparatus." The invention related to the reduction of background noise, by reducing the transparent area of the photographic sound track during periods of low sound intensity, but utilising a rectified component of the microphone current. Claims 1, 2 & 6 were as follows: "1. In the method of making a photographic sound record consisting in varying the amount of light falling upon an elementary transverse strip of a moving film in accordance with the wave form of the sound to be recorded, producing automatically in accordance with the volume of the sound to be recorded a superimposed variation either of the mean intensity of the recording light beam (in variable density recording) or of the mean position of the light beam with reference to the sound track (in variable width recording).

2. The method of making a photographic sound record in which the clear area varies with the volume of the sound being recorded which comprises exposing a sensitive film to a light beam, vibrating the beam laterally of the film in accordance with the wave form of the sound being recorded, & producing an additional lateral displacement of the beam in accordance with the volume of the sound. . . . 6. Apparatus for photographically recording sound on a moving sensitive film comprising a light source, an oscillograph galvanometer arranged to reflect a light beam therefrom on to the film & adapted to be vibrated by an alternating current corresponding to the wave form of the sound to be recorded thereby forming a variable width sound record, & means for superimposing on the alternating current a rectified component thereof which varies in accordance with the volume of the sound being recorded":—Held: on the true construction of the specification the patentee had limited his claims to a lateral displacement of the light beam, whereas defts. had obtained their result by a longitudinal displacement of a triangular beam intersecting a slot; also the patentee had limited his claims to the use of a component of the microphone current, whereas defts. used that component to control another current in inverse phase to the first; defts. had not infringed the patent.—R. 2389a. ——.]—Letters patent were granted in 1931 for "A new or improved rowing machine or rowing exercise apparatus." The first claim was as follows: "A rowing machine or rowing exercise apparatus, of the type herein referred to, which comprises an open rectangular or like frame or base of metallic tubular construction, a tubular footrest raised integrally from said frame or base, a stool or seat slidably supported on rollers or runners upon the side tubes of said frame or base & having spiral tension spring attachments to the forward part thereof, & a pair of handles or hand grips mounted on the forward part of said frame or base & having spiral tension spring attachments to the rearward part thereof." Pltfs. alleged infringement by the sale of a "Spenby Sculling Machine." Defts. alleged that the patent was invalid on the grounds of want of novelty, by reason of prior publication in a number of prior specifications, & common general knowledge, want of subject-matter, insufficiency of description & lack of utility:—Held: defts.' machine did not infringe pltfs.' claim, since the machine did not contain all the integers of that claim. In the circumstances it was unnecessary for the issue of validity to be decided. The action was dismissed. Pltfs. were ordered to pay defts.' costs, except in so far as they had been increased by the issue of validity.—TERRY & ROWLEY v. SPENCER & BEATTIE (1935), 52 R. P. C. 154.

2389b. ——.]—In 1928 letters patent were granted in respect of "Improvements in rams & like devices." Claim 1 was as follows: "A ram of the type set forth in which the supporting rod engages with the piston in other than a rigid manner to allow of relative displacement, the distance between both elements when at their limiting positions in the internal combustion engine cylinder away from the ram proper being equal to the suction stroke of the piston." In 1935 pltfs. commenced an action for infringement of the patent. In the alleged infringement the working piston was rigidly attached to the supporting rod, but there was a second piston which was not attached thereto. Defts. denied infringement & alleged that the patent was invalid by reason of lack of novelty & subject-matter & insufficiency:—Held: the patent was valid, but the claims were limited to cases in which the working piston was not rigidly attached to the supporting rod, in this case the doctrine of "pith & marrow" or mechanical equivalents had no application & there was no infringement. The action was dismissed & pltfs. were ordered to pay nine-tenths of defts.' costs. A certificate of

In 1930 pltfs. commenced an action against defts. for infringement of the patent. Defts. denied infringement & alleged that the patent was invalid by reason of lack of novelty, subject-matter & utility, & because the specification was ambiguous :—Held : the patent was valid, but it did not claim a principle of construction but an apparatus of particular construction & method of working, & defts. had not infringed. The action was dismissed, defts. being given four-fifths of their costs, & pltfs. one-fifth of their costs, a direction being given to the taxing master to include in defts.' costs the reasonable costs of putting in evidence certain matters referred to in the particulars of objections. inventor of the subject-matter of the patents & an injunction restraining deft. from representing that he had any claim or interest in the patents. By his statement of claim pltf. alleged (inter alia) that he was the first & true inventor of the subject-matter of the patents & that deft. had falsely represented that he was the co-inventor, together with pltf., of the inventions & that he had a claim to or interest in the patents. Deft. moved to strike out the statement of claim on the grounds that it disclosed no cause of action & tended to prejudice, embarrass or delay the trial of the action :—Held : the discretion of the ct. was one to be exercised at the trial, having regard to the facts which might then be established, & the motion must be dismissed with costs.—KILLEN v. MACMILLAN (1931), 48 R. 2601a. Application stood over—Where unreasonable & oppressive.]—Pltfs. commenced an action for the infringement of four patents granted in respect of improved manufacture of cathodes for electric discharge valves. By their particulars of breaches pltfs. alleged that defts. had infringed the patents by importing into this country certain wireless valves which had certain specified characteristics, or some of them, & which had been manufactured by a process comprising certain specified steps, or some of them. Defts. issued a summons for further particulars of the aforesaid characteristics & steps :—Held : defts. had full knowledge of the patented processes & of those used for the production of the alleged infringing valves, & their application for particulars was unreasonable & oppressive. 2627a. ——.]—In 1917, letters patent were granted in respect of " improvements relating to electrodes for electric arc soldering." Claim 1 was as follows :—" In a method of coating electrodes for electric arc soldering by an extrusion process, winding the wire with asbestos yarn or other suitable non-conducting material (i.e. a second class conductor) in open spirals, substantially as & for the purposes set forth." In 1932, pltfs. commenced an action for infringement of the patent, claiming the usual relief. Defts. denied infringement & alleged that the patent was invalid. They also pleaded that by reason of an order made in 1924, embodying an undertaking by pltfs. in an action against defts. not to bring any further action in respect of the infringements of the patent complained of in that action, pltfs. were estopped from bringing this action. This plea was ordered to be tried as a separate issue under R. S. C., Ord. 53A, r. 21a :—Held : upon the preliminary issue, pltfs. were not estopped from bringing this action, & defts. must pay the costs of this issue in any event. Upon the trial of the action, the patent was invalid by reason of anticipation & want of subject-matter, & defts. had not infringed. The action was dismissed with costs.—MUREX WELDING PROCESSES, LTD. v. WELDRICS (1922), LTD. (1933), 50 R. P. C. 178.

2629a. Agreements by plaintiff containing illegal condition—Defendant unable to give particulars until after discovery—Printed form issued by plaintiffs.]—In an action for infringement of a patent relating to foam baths, defts. alleged that pltfs. had entered into agreements, in relation to a licence to use or work the process protected by the patent, on a printed form requiring the persons with whom the agreements were made to acquire from pltfs. or their nominees an extract not protected by the patent, & defts. relied on sect. 38 (4) of Patents & Designs Acts, 1907–1932. Defts. were unable until after discovery to give particulars of the persons with whom such agreements had been entered into. Pltfs. issued a summons for further & better particulars, which was adjourned into ct. as a procedure summons :—Held : although the rule was clearly intended to prevent any general fishing allegation having no apparent foundation on any particulars which defts. could give, defts. ought not at the present stage, having regard to the printed form, to be prevented from setting up the defence. Accordingly, the application was ordered to stand over until after discovery, the costs to be costs in the action.—SOAPLESS FOAM, LTD. v. PHYSICAL TREATMENT INSTITUTES, LTD. (1935), 52 R. P. contracts appeared in the particulars of objections, & by their particulars of objections they alleged that among the contracts relied on were a number of specified contracts. An order for discovery was made containing a proviso that discovery should be limited to a specimen copy of each type of contract & a disclosure of the total number of each type. Before discovery was made, pltfs. issued a summons for an order for particulars sufficient to identify each of the contracts relied on in defence other than those set out in the particulars of objections:—Held: the particulars given complied with R. S. C., Ord. 53A, r. 8, & the application must stand over till after discovery. Pltfs. appealed to the Ct. of Appeal:—Held: though there was some obscurity in the exact meaning of the defence, it was not embarrassing to pltfs., & the appeal was dismissed with costs.—GERRARD INDUSTRIES, LTD. v. BOX WIRING CO., LTD. (1933), 50 R. P. C. 125.

2633b. Embarrassing defence.]—Defts. to an action for infringement of letters patent being estopped from denying validity pleaded (a) that the alleged infringement was old, & (b) by an amendment made in the course of the motion to strike out they denied infringement, giving particulars of the prior art relied upon for construing the specifications in suit. Pltfs. applied by motion to strike out the defence as showing no cause of action:—Held: the defence was embarrassing & should be struck out save only the plea denying infringement.—V. D., LTD. v. BOSTON DEEP SEA FISHING & ICE CO., LTD. (1934), 52 R. P. C. 1, C. A.

2641a. Plea by licencee—Sued as stranger.]—The rule that the licencee of a patent is estopped from denying the validity of the novelty of his licencor's patent is limited to proceedings in which the licencee is sued as such, & does not apply in an action for infringement of patent by making & selling the patented article in a manner & to an extent in & to which the licence would be no defence.

Deft. was a licencee of a patent for the making & fitting of boiler joints, the licence being limited to the counties of Northumberland, Durham, Lincoln, & part of Yorkshire, & entitled under the terms of the licence to trade under a certain registered business name within that limited area. He traded in the patented articles & in the said business name outside that area, whereupon pltfs., who were the owners of the patent, brought an action against him for infringement & passing-off. The licence was referred to in the pleadings for the purpose of defining the limited area within which it was available to deft. Deft. by his defence pleaded that the patent was invalid by reason of objections, particulars of which were given, & also for want of novelty. Pltfs. moved to strike out the paragraphs setting up the invalidity of the patent & the particulars of objections, on the ground that deft. as a licencee was estopped from denying the validity of the patent:—Held: the objection failed, as deft. was not sued as licencee, but as a stranger for infringement outside the area for which the licence was available.—FUEL ECONOMY CO., LTD. v. MURRAY, [1930] 2 Ch. 93; 99 L. 2648a. Mutual licence agreement—Covenant not to dispute validity.]—Pltf. & defts., who were respective owners of patents for conveying apparatus, entered into an agreement whereby each was granted a licence to use the invention of the other. The agreement recited the acknowledgment by the parties of the validity of the respective patents of the other, & contained a covenant by defts. not at any time hereafter to dispute the validity of pltf.'s patent. The agreement also contained a clause referring to arbn. any dispute between the parties other than the question of infringement or the recovery of royalties. In an action for royalties under the agreement & damage for infringements committed prior to it defts. pleaded that pltf.'s patent was invalid, & that there was an implied term in the agreement that pltf. should accept the same in satisfaction of all claims in respect of infringements then outstanding. The questions as to whether in view of the covenant in the agreement defts. could put the validity of pltf.'s patent in issue, & whether such a term as pleaded in the defence could be implied, were set down for hearing as preliminary questions of law:—Held: in view of the covenant in the agreement defts. were not entitled to dispute the validity of pltf.'s patent, & such a term as pleaded in the defence must be implied in the agreement in order to give business efficacy to the contract.—CAMPBELL v. HOPKINS (G.) & SONS (CLERKENWELL), LTD. 2664a. —— Objection of want of conformity between provisional & complete specifications.]—Where deft. in a patent action objects to the validity of pltf.'s patent on the ground that there is a want of conformity between the provisional & complete specifications, it is not sufficient for him to state in his particulars of objection that the invention described in the complete specification is not the same as the invention described in the provisional specification: he must state in what the difference consists.—ANGLO-AMERICAN BRUSH ELECTRIC LIGHT CORPN. v. CROMPTON (1886), 34 Ch. 2668a. Ambiguity.]—Pltfs. commenced an action against defts. for infringement of letters patent. Defts. denied infringement & alleged that the patent was invalid by reason of want of novelty, subject-matter, & utility, & because the specification & claims of the patent were ambiguous. Pltfs. issued a summons asking for particulars of what parts & in what respects defts. alleged the specification was ambiguous:—Held: no useful purpose would be served by the particulars, & they might be embarrassing to defts. In the particulars of objections sundry instances of prior public user were given:—Held: resps. are entitled under R. S. 2723a. Defendant relying on manufacture out of United Kingdom.]—In an action for infringement of three patents, defts. revised (inter alia) the defence that the patents were liable to the revoked under sects. 25, 27 of Patents & Designs Act, 1907 (c. 29), on the ground that the patented articles & processes were manufactured & carried on exclusively as mainly outside the United Kingdom. Pltfs. obtained an order in chambers directing certain particulars to be given (inter alia) of whom & by whom such articles have been manufactured as aforesaid, where & by whom the processes had been carried on, & by whom & from whom the impartial commodity had been obtained. The order was appealed against by way of motion to discharge, but this motion was refused with costs. Defts. gave particulars under the order. These particulars alleged (inter alia) manufacture on the continent of Europe by pltfs. as other persons who manufactured for or sold to pltfs. & by named persons, & "by persons who are the manufacturers of the Saccharin referred to" in an official annual statement, the names of such persons & their places of manufacture being unknown to defts. Pltfs. then obtained an order for certain further particulars to be given within fourteen days after service of notice of trial, & defts. moved to discharge this order:—Held: the particulars given amounted to a mere general statement that all the Saccharin imported into the United Kingdom was Saccharin manufactured exclusively on the continent, & was manufactured for & sold to pltfs. Pltfs. thereon moved for an interlocutory injunction:—Held: pltfs.' demands were unreasonable & oppressive, & defts. were not threatening or intending to continue to sell pltfs.' loud speaker units below the authorised price. The motion was dismissed, the costs to be deft.'s costs in any event. Pltfs. subsequently obtained judgment with costs upon motion for judgment in default of defence.—BRITISH BLUE SPOT CO., LTD. v. KEENE (1931), 48 R. P. C. 375.

2829a. ——.]—Where an injunction is asked to restrain the infringement of a patent, the ct. has occasion to consider, first, the validity of the patent; &, secondly, the fact of the infringement. Where those two facts are established, it is within the power, as it is the duty of the ct., to grant the injunction.

There are many cases in which it is not clear either that the patent is legally valid, or that it has been infringed. It depends on the degree of doubt which exists on these questions, whether the ct. will grant the interim injunction. In such cases it will cautiously consider the degree of convenience & inconvenience to the parties by granting or not granting the injunction (LORD LANGDALE, M.R.).—BRIDSON v. MCALPINE (1845), 8 Beav. 229, 230; 50 E. An order for discovery was made by the judge in chambers, which pltfs. moved to discharge. An affidavit was filed on behalf of pltfs., stating that by reason of the extensive nature of their business a general order would be oppressive. Pltfs. contended that, until the summons under R. S. C., Ord. 53A, r. 21A, had been dealt with, the order was premature, & ought in any event to be limited by exclusion of the issues relating to common general knowledge & utility:—Held: a deft. who desires discovery ought not to be made to wait until pltf. is ready to give notice of trial, & the order for discovery was not premature; further the size of pltfs.' business organisation afforded no ground for limiting the order. C., Ord. 53A, r. 21A, for further directions & that they might have inspection of defts.' process, & asked that the time for setting down the action for trial should not run until after the date of inspection, in order that costs of preparing for trial should not be incurred unnecessarily. Defts. were willing to give inspection & also to undertake not to do anything to increase the costs of the action until three weeks after the date of the inspection:—Held: an order for inspection be made to take place before the expert witnesses of both sides at a date to be mutually agreed & upon defts. giving an undertaking as above, the action should be set down in the usual way within six weeks of the close of pleadings.—BUTLER v. ENGLISH STEEL CORPN., LTD. 2944b. —— —— Secret process.]—Pltfs. sued defts. for infringement of two patents No. 212,106 & No. 212,188 relating to the manufacture of asphaltic mastic. Application for directions under R. S. C., Ord. 53A, r. 21a, was made, including (inter alia) an order that pltfs. agree with defts. the analysis, or should disclose their own statement of analysis, of the red mastic complained of & particularised in the particulars of breaches. Defts. objected on the ground that their product was the subject of a secret process. Pltfs. filed evidence for the purpose of making out a primâ facie case for inspection:—Held: a primâ facie case of infringement had been established as regards the Patent No. 212,106 sufficiently to justify an order for inspection. Inspection was ordered of defts.' mastic & process for making same, limited to solr., counsel & an expert, on behalf of pltfs., none of whom should disclose anything appearing at the inspection which was claimed by defts. to be a secret process except by leave of the ct., but should be entitled to report to pltfs., without giving any details, whether or not in the opinion of any of them the mastic infringed the patent. S. issued a summons for an order that the issue of infringement might be tried before the issue of validity. M. issued a summons for an order that B. should (inter alia) give particulars of the matters referred to in the patent which he alleged were prior common general knowledge:—Held: upon S. undertaking to be bound by the decision against B., all further proceedings should be stayed against S. until after the action against B. was determined. Claim 1 was as follows: "Method of feeding molten glass wherein successive masses or gathers are suspended beneath an outlet & mold charges are separated therefrom while suspended, whilst the shape of the masses or gathers is controlled by variation of the movement of a movable controlling member adapted to act as a piston in the outlet, or by the means for separating the mold charges, or by the variation of the location of the controlling member or of the said separating means relatively to the outlet." Pltfs. commenced an action for infringement. Defts. denied infringement & counterclaimed for the revocation of the patent on the grounds that it lacked novelty, subject-matter, & utility, & that the specification was ambiguous & insufficient. It was held that the patent was invalid on the grounds that it had been anticipated & lacked subject-matter in that it merely used an old method for controlling the weight of gathers for the new purpose of controlling their shape; but defences of prior grant, inutility, & insufficiency failed; & that if the patent had been valid, defts. would have infringed it. The action was dismissed & an order for revocation of the patent was made, the order to lie in the office for one month &, if the pltfs. appealed & prosecuted the appeal with due diligence, until after the appeal. Pltfs. were ordered to pay the costs of the action & counterclaim, a certificate for certain of the particulars of objections being granted. Pltfs. appealed to the Ct. of Appeal & moved for an order that the expert witness called on behalf of defts. at the trial might be called before the Ct. of Appeal for further cross-examination, or alternatively that the witness' evidence given in another case might be read as part of the evidence in the case:—Held: the patent was invalid on the grounds that it had been anticipated & lacked subject-matter, & for ambiguity & uncertainty. The appeal was dismissed with costs & a stay of the order for revocation pending an appeal to the House of Lords was refused. The motion for leave to further cross-examine defts.' expert witness was dismissed with costs.—BRITISH HARTFORD-FAIRMONT [illegible] DICATE, LTD. v. JACKSON BROS. (I TINGLEY), LTD. (1932), 49 R. P. On June 21, 1933, pltf. commenced an action against deft. for an injunction to restrain him from infringing pltf.'s patent & by the particulars of breaches alleged that deft. had by a letter threatened to infringe. Deft. denied that the lampholder which he proposed to make would be an infringement of pltf.'s patent & alleged that that patent was invalid:—Held: letters patent No. 341,265 were valid & the letter was a clear statement of intention to make a cap & lampholder in accordance with specification of letters patent No. 389,664, & such a construction would be an infringement of pltf.'s letters patent No. 341.265. An injunction to restrain infringement & a certificate that the validity of the patent came in question were granted, & deft. was ordered to pay pltf.'s costs of the action.—BLOOM v. SHULMAN (1934), 51 R. Defts. applied to the ct. to have the registrar's order varied so as to exclude delivery up, on the ground that the infringement proved was by user only:—Held: as the valve was capable of use without infringement & the set without the valve was not an infringement, no order for delivery up ought to be made.—ELECTRIC & MUSICAL INDUSTRIES, LTD. & BOONTON RESEARCH CORPN. v. LISSEN, LTD., ELECTRIC & MUSICAL INDUSTRIES, LTD. & BOONTON RESEARCH CORPN. v. KALIS, [1936] 3 All E. The patentee commenced an action for infringement of this patent & also one other, but any claim in respect of the latter was abandoned at the trial. guard parts or walls on the base between which the contact bar or bridge moves throughout its range of travel & which thus prevent turning or rotating of the actuating rod or stem in both the 'on' & 'off' positions of the switch." Pltfs. commenced an action for infringement of the patent. Defts. denied infringement & alleged that the patent was invalid by reason of want of novelty, subject-matter, & utility:—Held: in the alleged infringement the contact bar or bridge did not move throughout its range of travel between the outstanding guard parts or walls. & consequently defts. had not infringed the patent; & under the circumstances it was unnecessary to consider or express any opinion upon the validity of the claims of the patent. 3243a. —— Plaintiff not appearing at trial.]—In 1924, letters patent were granted to J. M. in respect of "Improvements in or relating to electrically operated indicating apparatus for vehicles." In 1931, J. M. commenced an action for infringement of the patent against the Mayor of South Shields & J. A. B. J. A. B. denied infringement & alleged that the patent was invalid for want of novelty, subject-matter & utility. Proceedings against the Mayor of South Shields were stayed to abide the result of the action as against B. When the action was called on against J. A. B., J. M. did not appear:—Held: the action must be dismissed with costs, but, the ct. being of the opinion that the action had not proceeded to trial within R. S. C., Ord. 53A, r. 20, a certificate for the particulars of objections would not be granted.—MCCREATH v. SOUTH SHIELDS CORPN. & BAKER (1933), 50 R. P. C. 119.

3243c. —— Patents revoked before trial.]—An action was brought by pltf. co. against defts. for infringement of five patents, of which one only (No. 300,998) is material for the present purpose. The patent was held to be invalid by CLAUSON, J., on the grounds of prior user, prior publication & want of subject-matter, & was ordered to be revoked, & the action on that patent was dismissed. Pltfs. appealed. The patent was for "Improvements in or relating to processes & apparatus for the production of artificial filaments or threads," the first claim of the specification being "A process of spinning artificial silk or like filaments or threads from solutions of cellulose acetate or other cellulose derivative, comprising spinning the solutions into closed or substantially closed chambers or cells through which passes an evaporative medium, the chambers or cells being provided with collector devices so that substantially the whole of the evaporative medium is constrained to pass through the immediate vicinity of the spinning orifice or orifices." Claim 4 was for a modification of the process in which only a proportion of the evaporative medium was constrained to pass through the immediate vicinity of the orifices:—Held: the idea of rapid removal of solvent was not new & the invention, if any, must lie in the mechanism; that was anticipated by prior user & by prior publication, also the patent was invalid for lack of subject-matter. The appeal was dismissed with costs. Leave to appeal to the House of Lords was refused on the grounds that the case was not difficult, & four judges had been unanimous.—BRITISH CELANESE, LTD. v. BRITISH ACETATE SILK CORPN., LTD., MALONEY & HILLIER, PARKER, MAY & ROWDEN (1936), 53 R. Deft. denied that pltf. was the sole first or true inventor. At the trial pltf. withdrew his claim to an injunction, & deft. admitted that pltf. was the sole first and true inventor:—Held: although it was doubtful whether a declaration could be made that a certain person was a first & true inventor in the absence of the A.-G., upon deft.'s admission at the trial pltf. was to be treated as the successful party so far as the claim was for a declaration. An order was made that, upon deft. admitting that pltf. was the sole first & true inventor, deft. should pay the costs of the action, except so far as they had been increased by the claim for an injunction, & that pltf. should pay deft.'s costs of the action so far as they had been increased by the claim for an injunction, with a set-off.—KILLEN v. MACMILLAN (1932), 49 R. 3317a. ——.]—(1) The amendment of Patents & Designs Act, 1907 (c. 29), s. 36, by Patents & Designs Act, 1919 (c. 80), was not intended to abrogate the rule which had prevailed ever since Challender v. Royle, No. 2273, was decided, that a pltf. in a threats action might, if he so desired, raise the question of the validity of the patent. The obvious reason for the amendment was to widen the scope of the section so as to enable a threats action to be brought not merely against the patentee, but against any person claiming to have an interest in the patent. The alterations in the subsequent part of the section were consequential upon the main alteration & were not intended to, & did not in fact, abrogate the rule which was laid down in Challender v. Royle, No. 2273.

(2) I do not understand how a patent that is invalid can be infringed. The truth of the matter is, that when one talks of the infringement of a patent one does not mean an infringement of the document, but the letters patent itself. You cannot infringe a document. Deft. also caused to be inserted in a trade paper an advertisement in his name in which it was stated that anyone manufacturing or selling a kettle constructed in accordance with the patent was liable to an action for infringement:—Held: a letter written by a solr. in which he stated that in certain circumstances he would advise his client to bring an action did not amount to a threat within sect. 36 of Patents & Designs Acts, 1907–1932, & the advertisement in the trade paper was gratuitous advice by a solr. & not a threat. (TRADING AS MOTOROLA DISTRIBUTING CO.) v. MARCONI'S WIRELESS TELEGRAPH CO., LTD. (1934), 52 R. P. C. 104.

3353c. Primâ facie case of invalidity of patent.]—On a motion for an interlocutory injunction in an action to restrain defts. from threatening pltfs. or their customers with an action for infringement of patent or registered design or other like proceedings, in respect of the sale by pltfs. of ladies' vanity cases, defts. alleged that pltfs.' vanity cases were imitations of their registered design No. 790,245. Pltfs. alleged that the registration was invalid by reason of the prior sale by defts. of vanity cases identical with the registered design:—Held: there was a strong primâ facie case that the registration was invalid, & an injunction was granted.—INTERNATIONAL SALES, LTD. v. TRANS-CONTINENTAL TRADING CO., LTD. & BENNO MAISEL (1934), 52 R. 3355a. —— Motion for interim injunction treated as trial of action.]—This was an action to restrain threats commenced under sect. 36 of Patents & Designs Acts, 1907–1932. Pltf. moved for an interlocutory injunction to restrain threats issued by defts., in respect of an alleged infringement by pltf. of certain letters patent. Defts. consenting to treat the motion as the trial of the action, a final order was made in the form set out. A declaration that the threats were unjustifiable was included in the order.—DESIDERIO v. CURRUS, LTD. (1934), 52 R. P. C. 201.

3384a. —— Interim injunction.]—In 1931, letters patent were granted for "improvements in & relating to end pieces or terminal ends for necklets." In 1932 pltf. commenced an action against defts. to restrain them from threatening under patent & moved for an interim injunction. Defts. did not deny that they had issued threats, but alleged that the patent was valid & that it had been infringed by pltf.:—Held: it was not a case for an interim injunction, & the motion was dismissed, the costs to be costs in the action. —STRINGER v. PLATNAUER (R.), LTD. (1932), 50 R. P. C. 61.

3413a. ——.]—Pltfs., who were the exclusive licencees in this country for the sale of a furnace known as a "Sesci" furnace, in Apr. 1931, brought an action to restrain threats made by defts., who claimed to have a beneficial interest in two patents Nos. 283,381 & 306,141 granted to B. Deft. co.'s legal title to the patents was not completed till Dec. 2, 1931, & the writ issued by them in an action for infringement was not issued until Dec. 3, 1931. Defts. admitted that threats had been made, & at the trial stated that they did not intend to contest the case with regard to the second patent. They submitted to an injunction in terms of the writ as regards that patent. Pltfs. alleged that the first patent was neither valid nor infringed & they relied on prior publication, prior common general knowledge, & lack of utility. Defts. affirmed that the patent was valid & that it had been infringed; & they proposed to rely also on the proviso to sect. 36 of Patents & Designs Acts, 1907–1928:—Held: the proviso had on application to the present case, as the action for infringement had not been commenced & prosecuted with due diligence; the patent was valid but that there was no infringement. An injunction was granted & defts. were ordered to pay the costs of the action except in so far as the costs had been increased by the issue of validity of the first patent, & defts. were given the costs as far as related to the validity of that patent with a set-off; & an inquiry as to damages was ordered.—PITTEVIL & CO. v. BRACKELSBERG MELTING PROCESSES, LTD. 3414a. —— No mala fides or special damage.]—In Apr. 1929, letters patent were granted to W. & H. In Oct. 1930, W. & H. commenced an action against F. for infringement of the patent; F. denied infringement & counterclaimed for revocation of the patent. In Mar. 1931, the patent was revoked by order of the ct. In June, 1931, F. commenced an action against W. & H., alleging that between Aug. & Dec. 1930, W. & H. had falsely & maliciously published statements that machines manufactured by F. were infringements of the patent, whereby he had been injured in his business & lost profits that he otherwise would have made:—Held: the statements published by W. & H. amounted to threats & they were not justifiable, but there was no evidence of mala fides or of special damage. The action was dismissed with costs.—FARR v. WEATHERHEAD & HARDING (1932), 49 R. P. C. 262.

172a. Goods delivered "on appro" by false representation.]—Where the owner of goods is induced, by a false representation made by another with fraudulent intent that he can sell them, to deliver the goods to that other on "appro," for the purpose of his endeavouring to sell them, the case is one not of larceny by a trick but of obtaining by false pretences. If, therefore, the fraudulent person pledges the goods before the contract between him & the true owner is avoided, the pledgee who takes bonâ fide obtains a good title as pledgee.—London Jewellers, Ltd. v. Attenborough, London Jewellers, Ltd. v. Robertsons (London), Ltd., [1934] 2 K. 173a. Revesting of property in stolen goods—Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 24—Who may sue—Owner from whom goods actually stolen.]—Pltfs. were wholesale dealers. They had as clients the S. S. Co., who introduced a customer, a Captain Le M. Captain Le M. was accompanied by a friend, M. Captain Le M. purchased a ring, which he was allowed to take away, & which was immediately pawned by M. with defts. A few days later M., purporting to act on behalf of Captain Le M., took away a diamond bracelet, which he disposed of in the same way to defts. Both the ring & bracelet were invoiced to the S. S. Co. M. was convicted & sentenced for larceny by a trick, but the ct. refused restitution of the property. Pltfs. had been paid the price of the ring by the S. S. Co. as invoiced to them, & now sought to recover the bracelet from defts. :—Held : pltfs. had no title in law to maintain the action. A fundamental point fatal to pltfs.' claim was that the words "owner of the goods" in Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 24 (1), meant the owner of the goods from whom they were actually stolen, & not some previous owner from whom the title had been derived. In the present case the sale was to the S. S. Co., & the property in the goods had passed to them & from them to Captain Le M., by whose authority it had been pledged.—Buller & Co., Ltd. v. Brooks, T. J., Ltd. (1930). 142 L. T. 576 ; 46 T. L. Power given to trustees—Appointment of Public Trustee.]—By his will a testator, who died in 1887, appointed four named persons as the exors. & trustees of his will & gave his real & personal estate to them upon trust that they & the survivors & survivor of them & the heirs, exors. or administrators of such survivor their or his assigns, each & all of whom were intended to be included in the term " my trustees " thereinafter used, should distribute the net residue of his estate to & among such of the descendants of his brothers & sisters in such shares, proportions or amounts & at such proper times as the trustees, in whom he " placed full confidence," in their absolute & uncontrolled discretion should determine. Two of the trustees died in 1902, one retired in 1907, when another was appointed who retired in 1923 in favour of yet another. In 1934 the two remaining trustees retired & the Public Trustee was appointed in their place. In a summons to determine the effect of the will, it was argued by testator's next of kin that: (i) the gift of the residuary estate was void, because there was no longer anybody who, in accordance with the terms of the will, was entitled to exercise the power of selecting the descendants of testator's brothers & sisters who were to take, & (ii) the gift was void as infringing the rule against perpetuities, because the descendants of testator's brothers & sisters might be selected by persons ascertained outside the limit fixed by the rule against perpetuities, & might themselves be persons who took outside that time:—Held: (1) the Public Trustee, as an assign, came within the definition of " my trustees " in the will & was entitled to exercise the power of selection; (2) the gift was void as infringing the rule against perpetuities.—Re SYMM'S WILL TRUSTS, PUBLIC TRUSTEE v. SHAW, [1936] 3 All E. The will further provided : " Subject as aforesaid the special trustees shall stand possessed of the capital & income of the G. fund & of the said accumulations in trust for all or any of the children or child of G., who being male, attain the age of twenty-one years, or being female attain that age or marry, & if more than one in equal shares." Testator died in Oct. 1928, & was survived by G., G.'s wife & three children of G., who were born respectively in 1914, 1917 & Jan. 1928. When G.'s eldest child attained the age of twenty-one a summons was taken out to determine : (i) whether the direction for accumulation was valid ; (ii) whether G's. eldest son became indefeasibly entitled in possession upon attaining the age of twenty-one to one equal third part of the G. fund & the accumulations of the income of such fund, subject to & after the appropriation of a sufficient sum to provide for the annuities to & maintenance of G. & his wife & children, or whether any child of G., who may hereafter be born & attain the age of twenty-one would be entitled to participate in the distribution of the G. fund & the accumulations, & (iii) if G.'s eldest child did not upon attaining the age of twenty-one become indefeasibly entitled in possession to one equal third part of the G. fund, subject as aforesaid, whether under Trustee Act, 1925 (c. 19), s. 31 (1) (ii), G.'s eldest child on attaining the age of twenty-one became entitled to be paid the income of his expectant share of the G. fund & the accumulations of the income thereof, & if so during what period :—Held : (1) the direction for accumulation was valid & effectual so long as any child of G. living at the date of testator's death was under the age of twenty-one ; (2) G.'s eldest child did not become indefeasibly entitled in possession to one equal part of the G. fund & any child of G. born whilst any child of G. living at the death of testator was alive & under the age of twenty-one would if he or she attained the age of twenty-one, be entitled to participate in the distribution of the G. fund & the accumulations ; (3) G.'s eldest child did not on attaining twenty-one become entitled to be paid the income of his expectant share of the G. fund & the accumulations.—Re WATT'S WILL TRUSTS, WATT v. WATT, [1936] 2 All E. 652a. —— Commencement during twenty-one years from testator's death.]—Testator, who died in 1893, gave his net residue, subject to certain life annuities which did not exhaust the income, in trust for a bachelor's children who should attain twenty-one with a gift over in default. On Mar. 11, 1896, the surplus income was ordered to be accumulated for twenty-one years from testator's death, i.e., until Nov. 6, 1914, or until the bachelor's previous death without leaving issue. During this twenty-one years' period the bachelor married & died leaving three children, two of whom were still living. Temporary orders for maintenance were made. On Nov. 12, 1914, it was declared that as from Nov. 6, 1914, the two children then living were entitled to maintenance under Conveyancing Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 43 (1), but that notwithstanding sect. 43 (2) any income not so applied passed as on an intestacy. On July 20, 1927, the elder child attained twenty-one, & her contingent moiety vested in possession. The question having arisen whether, having regard to Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 165, the order of Nov. 12, 1914, ought still to be acted on with regard to the younger child's contingent moiety :—Held : (1) the effect of sect. 165 was that the years of minority accumulation, which commenced during the twenty-one years' period, were not to be reckoned in ascertaining that period, & the income of the younger child's contingent moiety must in the first place be applied for her maintenance under Conveyancing Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 43 (1), & the balance could be validly accumulated under sect. 43 (2) ; (2) quite apart from sect. 165, the moment the elder child attained a vested interest as a member of the contingent class, there could be no question of intestacy as to any part of the capital or income.—Re MABER, WARD v. MABER, [1928] Ch. 88 ; 97 L. "upon trust to sell the same & to stand possessed of the net proceeds thereof & the balance of the income accumulated during the lifetime of [M.] & the interest thereof in trust to divide the same amongst such of the London hospitals situate within the administrative County of London as my trustees for the time being shall in their absolute discretion select & to be paid to or for such hospitals in such proportions as my trustees for the time being may think proper." Upon a summons to determine the effect of the gift of residue, it was sought to show that upon testator's death there was an immediate vested gift to charity, postponed as to time of payment, & that the A.-G. could stop the accumulations :—Held : there was no interest vested in anybody, the gift being to a class of institutions to be ascertained in the future, & the direction in the will for accumulation of the income in excess of that required for meeting the annuity to M. became void twenty-one years after testator's death. There was an intestacy as regards excess income accruing after the expiration of the period of twenty-one years from testator's death until the death of M.—Re Jefferies, Finch v. Martin, [1936] 2 All E. 740b. ——.]—A testator, who died on Jan. 1, 1925, by his will gave & devised all his property both real & personal to his trustees upon trust to pay out of the income thereof a large number of annuities, some being to certain religious institutions, & he directed that these last annuities should determine on the death of the last of the personal annuitants. He also gave certain legacies. He further directed that so long as any of the annuitants were alive the balance of the income of the residuary estate & the income resulting therefrom should be accumulated & invested, & subject as aforesaid he gave the whole of his property after the death of the last personal annuitant to the Congregational Union of England & Wales to be invested as capital. The secretary of that charity asked for an order that the trust for accumulation should be determined, & that either the surplus income in each year should be paid to the charity or that proper provision should be made for the payment of the legacies & annuities, & that subject thereto the residuary estate should be transferred to the charity :—Held : if any of the annuitants survived the period of twenty-one years from testator's death, when the accumulations would cease by virtue of sect. 164 of Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), the surplus income down to the death of the last surviving annuitant would be undisposed of & would pass as on an intestacy; & the ct. ought not to make the order asked for by the residuary legatees, as the effect of such an order would be to prejudice & possibly defeat altogether the possible interests of the persons taking under an intestacy, & the ct. ought never to make such an order if the effect might be to prejudice any interest in any other persons, whether present or future, vested or contingent, without their consent. —Re Blake, Berry v. Geen, [1937] Ch. 325; [1937] 1 All E. 25a. Dismissal—Power of watch committee—Resignation before meeting of committee—Appeal.]—Applt., a sergeant in the Liverpool police force, on July 27, 1933, handed in the statutory month's notice of resignation. On Aug. 8 charges were preferred against him of offences against discipline. On Aug. 14 the Chief Constable, after an inquiry, purported to dismiss him ; & on Aug. 29 the Watch Committee at a meeting, at which the Chief Constable was present during the deliberations, purported to dismiss applt.'s appeal from the Chief Constable's sentence of dismissal. The Watch Committee thereupon refused to repay to applt. the accumulated rateable deductions from his pay to which he claimed to be entitled under sect. 20 (1) of Police Pensions Act, 1921 (c. 31). Applt. then sued the Chief Constable & the Watch Committee claiming declarations that he had duly resigned, & was therefore entitled to be repaid the rateable deductions that had been made from his pay :—Held : (1) in a borough the right to dismiss a police constable is vested solely in the Watch Committee, but in this case that Committee had no power to dismiss applt., who had already terminated his service by due notice of resignation, & it had no power ex post facto to treat him as dismissed as from a date prior to the hearing by them of an application to confirm the purported dismissal by the Chief Constable ; (2) it could not be said that by appearing before the Watch Committee applt. must be taken to have abandoned his notice of resignation ; (3) applt. was not limited to the right of appeal to the Secretary of State given by Police (Appeals) Act, 1927 (c. 19) ; (4) he was entitled to the declarations claimed.
Semble : the proceedings before the Watch Committee were contrary to natural justice owing to the presence of the Chief Constable during the Committee's deliberations on applt.'s appeal.—COOPER v. WILSON, [1937] 2 K. SECT. 4.—OVERSEERS (Vol. XXXVII., p. 204).

24a. Overseer becoming transferred officer—Removal—Powers of rating authority.]—By Local Government Act, 1894 (c. 73), s. 5 (1), the power of appointing & revoking the appointment of an assistant overseer for any rural parish having a parish council is transferred to & vested in the parish council.—An assistant overseer so appointed by a parish council which was subsequently transformed into an urban district council, became a "transferred officer" under the Rating & Valuation Act, 1925 (c. 90). He was summarily dismissed by the urban district council as the rating authority:—Held: the council could dismiss the officer without notice or cause, & without affording him a hearing, provided that in so dismissing him they did not act dishonestly, corruptly, or in bad faith—BROWN v. DAGENHAM URBAN COUNCIL, [1929] 1 K. 34a. Abolition—Local Government Act, 1929 (c. 17), s. 1—Transfer of "parish property"—What included.]—Pltfs., the City of London Corpn., claimed a declaration that a certain capital fund invested in 5 per cent. War Loan Stock in the hands of the City of London Guardians, being the balance of the proceeds of the sale by defts. of a poor law institution as the H. Institution, was "parish property" within Local Government Act, 1929 (c. 17), s. 115, & that it was "property with respect to which special provision is made" within sect. 113 of the 1929 Act, & would on Apr. 1, 1930, by virtue of sect. 115 of the 1929 Act, be transferred to & vest in pltfs. & not in the London County Council. By sect. 1 of 1929 Act, the functions of the City of London Guardians were transferred to the London County Council on Apr. 1, 1930, on which date the Guardians were abolished. Sect. 113 of the 1929 Act transferred to the London County Council all property & liabilities of the City of London Guardians, except those for which special provision was made in the Act. The only special provision which was suggested to apply was that contained in sect. 115. By sect. 115, sub-sect. 1, of all parish property on the appointed day, namely, Apr. 1, 1930, vested in a board of guardians was to be transferred to the appropriate council, in this case the Common Council of the City of London. The H. Institution & Infirmary was acquired by the City of London Guardians in 1871 for the purposes of their functions in the relief of the poor. By an order dated Apr. 6, 1921, the Minister of Health, the successor of the Local Government Board, sanctioned the sale by the City of London Guardians by the H. Institution, &, by a further order, directed that the net proceeds of the sale should be invested in 5 per cent. War Loan Stock, & that the Guardians should stand possessed of the securities so purchased on trust to receive & pay into the common fund of the Union the interest accruing therefrom:—Held: (1) the property in the capital fund in question & the interest thereon was not "parish property" within 1929 Act, s. 115; (2) it was not transferred by that Act to the representative of the City of London; (3) the property in the fund was transferred to & vested in the London County Council for the benefit of the whole area administered by the London County Council; & (4) it was not subject to any condition that the income of the fund should be credited to the City Corpn. in computing the amount of the contributions due from the City Corpn. to the County fund.—LONDON (CITY) CORPN. v. LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL. 38a. Loans to strikers' families—Resolution cancelling repayment—Void.]—Defts., a board of guardians, upon the outbreak of the coal dispute of 1926 resolved to give outdoor relief to the wives & families of miners & other workmen who were unemployed because of the dispute, & that such relief should be given by loan, subject to an undertaking to be given by the head of each household to repay the loan by weekly instalments, or, by arrangement with the employers, deductions from wages to commence five weeks after the resumption of work. In pursuance of this resolution defts. granted relief to miners' families during the continuance of the dispute to the amount of £195,957. Repayment commenced in Jan. 1927, the terms being modified from time to time. On July 11, 1929, the total balance due on the loans was £145,924, & it was then being repaid by about 5,000 miners at the rate of nearly £400 a week, some having already repaid their loans in full, & others having been entirely released from payment. On that day defts. passed a resolution that the whole balance of the loans owing in respect of relief received by miners' wives & families should be excused & cancelled. In an action by pltf. at the relation of the corpn. of a borough situate & owning rateable property within defts.' area:—Held: (1) the resolution to cancel the loans was ultra vires & void & must not be acted upon; (2) even if there was any general discretionary power in defts. to release the debtors, it was not properly or reasonably exercised, as they had considered solely the interest of the debtors, without any inquiry into the ability of all or any of them to continue paying off their loans, there being no evidence of any general inability to repay, or request for the cancellation of the debts.—A.-G. v. TYNEMOUTH UNION, [1930] 1 Ch. 616; 99 L. 63a. Guardians acting in loco parentis—Right to grant of administration.]—By Poor Law Act, 1927 (c. 14), a board of guardians may in certain circumstances as in loco parentis in respect of an orphan child, & in that capacity is entitled to take out letters of administration of the estate of the child's deceased parent for the benefit of the child.—Re PETERS (1929), 142 L. T. 328 ; 46 T. L. R. 119 ; 74 Sol. Jo. 13.

75a. —— To dismiss—Transferred officer.]—The effect of Local Government Act, 1929 (c. 17), s. 121 (1), is that an officer of a poor law authority who has been transferred to the appropriate county council or county borough council under sect. 119 of the Act retains all the incidents of his service & there is no change in the terms of his employment. If, therefore, the poor law authority was entitled to terminate his service by giving him proper notice & to re-engage him on different terms, the council are also entitled to do so.—MOUNTFORD v. LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL, [1935] 2 K. 88a. Officer placed on half-pay—Validity.]—Applt. had been a poor law relieving officer in the service of the Stepney Guardians, who, in 1927, had made a set of regulations governing, inter alia, payment of sick pay to their officers. By Local Govt. Act, 1930, he was automatically transferred to the service of resp. council, & in 1932 entered into a new contract of service with it at a higher scale of pay. The contract included a clause concerning sick pay. In Dec. 1933, applt. became wholly incapacitated through ill-health, & he was superannuated on Sept. 30, 1934. Until July he received full pay, & thereafter sick pay at a half rate scale. Applt. claimed the difference between this half rate & his full rate of salary. He contended that, by virtue of Arts. 172, 173 of General Order of 1847, made under Poor Law Amendment Act, 1834 (c. 76), & also by the Public Assistance Order, 1930, Art. 162, resp. council had no power to decrease his salary without the consent of the Minister of Health, which consent had not been obtained, & therefore any regulation purporting to give the council such power was ultra vires. Resp. council contended that the regulations of 1927 had been imported into applt.'s contract of service :—Held : (1) the sick pay clause in the contract of service enabled resp. council to put applt. upon half-pay in July, 1934 ; (2) placing applt. upon half-pay was not a reduction of remuneration within the meaning of Art. 162, & the consent of the Minister of Health was not required. In deciding this the whole contract made in 1932 had to be considered, & under it applt. received an increase of remuneration & not a decrease.—LITTLEJOHN v. LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL, [1937] 3 All E. 100a. "Regularly employed"—Employment as deputy.]—Pltf. was in the service of defts.' predecessors in their capacity of poor law guardians for fifteen years before his retirement, but during five of those years he was only employed as gate porter to a poor law institution in substitution for its regular gate porter who was away on war service :—Held : in computing the amount of his superannuation allowance under Poor Law Officers' Superannuation Act, 1896 (c. 50), pltf., though only a temporary substitute for the regular gate porter, was entitled to reckon his actual five years' deputy service as regular employment in the capacity of a poor law officer or servant.—HAMMOND v. LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL, [1931] 1 Ch. 540 ; 100 L. 105b. —— ——.]—Pltf. was employed as a cleaner by a board of guardians from 1897 until Apr. 1, 1930, but until Oct. 1929, no deductions in respect of superannuation contributions under Poor Law Officers' Superannuation Act, 1896 (c. 50), ss. 12, 13, were made from the pltf.'s wages. From Oct. 1929, the guardians deducted 6*d.* a week in respect thereof, & on Mar. 27, 1930, an arrangement was made that they should deduct a further 1*s.* 6*d.* a week in part payment of arrears of contributions, & this further deduction was made on Mar. 29, 1930. On Apr. 1, 1930, by the Local Govt. Act, 1929 (c. 17), the guardians were abolished & pltf. was transferred to the service of deft. corpn. Until Feb. 1932, deft. corpn. continued to deduct the 6*d.* & the 1*s.* 6*d.* a week, but then ceased to do so & returned the contributions on the ground that pltf. was not within the superannuation scheme provided by 1896 Act. In an action claiming that pltf. was entitled, under sect. 124 (1) of 1929 Act to the benefit of that scheme & that the arrangement of Mar. 27, 1930, was binding on defts.:—Held: although pltf.'s contributions had not been made exactly as & when they ought to have been made there was no impediment to her receiving her pension.—GISSING v. LIVERPOOL CORPN., [1935] Ch. 1; 104 L. 105c. —— Amount of pension.]—Under the Poor Law Officers' Superannuation Act, 1896, poor law officers became entitled to superannuation allowance, certain deductions to provide therefor being made from their salaries, the amount of superannuation being a defined proportion of the average of the last five years' salary preceding the day when they ceased to hold office.

Pltf. became a clerk under an assessment committee of a union & held the office for twenty-four years, his salary for the last five years averaging £30 per annum. In 1927, under the provisions of the Rating & Valuation Act, 1925 (c. 90), the union ceased to exist, & pltf. was transferred to the new rating authority created by the Act, & held the office for a further seven years, his average salary for the last five years of this service being £165:—Held: Rating & Valuation Act, 1925 (c. 90), s. 51 (1), applied Poor Law Officers' Superannuation Act, 1896 (c. 50), to pltf. after his transfer, & not only down to the time in 1927 when he ceased to be an officer of the dissolved union. He was therefore entitled to superannuation allowance based on £165 & not on £30.—NEWILL v. CLUN ASSESSMENT COMMITTEE (1935), 79 Sol. Jo. 839; 34 L. G. R. 8.

105d. Election to contract out—Cancellation.]—Pltf. entered the service of a board of guardians in 1904 as a probationer nurse & certain annual deductions were made from her salary for superannuation purposes. In 1907 she obtained employment as a charge nurse under the Metropolitan Asylums Board, & gave notice that, as a female nurse within Poor Law Officers' Superannuation Act Amendment Act, 1897 (c. 28), she wished to contract out of superannuation benefits, i.e., did not wish to avail herself of the provisions of the Poor Law Officers' Superannuation Act, 1896 (c. 50). No deductions were therefore made from her salary by way of contribution to superannuation benefit, & the same procedure continued when after leaving the Asylums Board in 1908 she was employed from Feb. 1909 to 1923, as a superintendent nurse by another board of guardians. In that year she obtained employment under a different board of guardians as a charge nurse, but shortly after her appointment requested to be allowed to contribute to the poor law officers' superannuation fund. This request was granted by the board on her paying to them the deductions which would have been made from her salary for superannuation benefit while in the service of her two previous employers if she had not contracted out. This was duly paid by pltf., & the necessary deductions made from her salary down to 1927, when she was appointed by the board to be an assistant matron at an orphanage, & therefore (having ceased to be a female nurse within the 1897 Act) could not contract out of the 1896 Act. The proper deductions were therefore made by the board from her salary down to 1930, when by virtue of Local Govt. Act, 1929 (c. 17), the duties & functions of the board of guardians were transferred to deft. council whose servant pltf. consequently became. Down to 1933 deft. council made deductions from pltf.'s salary at the rate of 3½ per cent., but in 1933 they informed her that her rate of contribution under the superannuation scheme would be reduced to 2½ per cent. as from Apr. 1, 1930, being the rate in respect of employees whose period of service did not on Apr. 1, 1930, exceed ten years. They accordingly repaid her a sum which included (inter alia) the amount paid back by pltf. in 1923 while employed as a charge nurse, & the consequent deductions made from her salary down to 1927. These sums pltf. accepted under protest. She accordingly commenced an action against deft. council for a declaration (inter alia) that her contributions ought to be calculated at 3½ per cent. on the total amount of her salary on the footing that the period of her service to be considered in fixing the amount of these contributions to the superannuation scheme was on Apr. 1, 1930, more than twenty years. This deft. council denied, on the ground that as pltf. had in 1907 contracted out of the 1896 Act, her service with poor law authorities down to 1927 when she became an assistant matron could not be aggregated for superannuation purposes; that the deductions made from her salary when she became a charge nurse in 1923 & down to 1927 were illegal; & that the board of guardians in accepting from pltf. the payment of the deductions from her salary above mentioned had acted ultra vires. They further contended that a contracting-out notice once given could never be withdrawn & that it applied to the whole of her future service as a female nurse:—Held: the board of guardians had not acted illegally in 1923 in permitting the withdrawal of the contracting-out notice & requiring pltf. as a condition of that withdrawal to repay the sums which would in the past years have been deducted from her salary if she had not contracted out of superannuation benefits; pltf. was an officer by whom, on her transfer to deft. council, the annual contributions required by the 1896 Act had been made; & on Apr. 1, 1930, pltf.'s employment extended over the aggregate period covered by her combined periods of service & exceeded twenty years. The deductions to be made by deft. council out of pltf.'s salary should therefore be at the rate of 3½ per cent.—JONES v. LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL, [1936] Ch. 50; 105 L. J. Ch. 53; 154 L. 197a. Whether disability pension disregarded.]—An ex-service man, whose sole income for the maintenance of himself, his wife & five children was a 100 per cent. disability pension of £2 per week, applied for poor relief from the local authority because he was unable adequately to maintain himself & his family. The local authority decided that appct. was not entitled to relief on the ground that his income of £2 per week was sufficient for maintenance, & contended that, as the above sect. of the Act applied only for the purposes of regulating the amount of relief to be afforded to persons who have first of all been found entitled to relief, they were not bound to disregard the first one pound of appct.'s pension when determining whether appct. was entitled to relief:—Held: resps. were bound by the above sect. to disregard the first pound of applt.'s disability pension when considering whether or not he was entitled to relief as well as when calculating the amount of relief payable.—DUNCAN v. ABERDEEN COUNTY COUNCIL, [1936] 2 All E. It was afterwards discovered that the town of X., of which the infants were residents, was a separate municipality, so constituted by Act of Ontario legislature in 1922; & on May 19, 1927, the magistrate amended his order by directing that the maintenance money should be paid by the town corpn. instead of the counties corpn. C. Adopted Children.

504a. Effect of adoption order.]—W. was born an illegitimate child in the county of Leicester & lived with a foster-mother in the county borough of Leicester until he was eleven years of age. He was then, by an order under sect. 1 of the Adoption of Children Act, 1926 (c. 29), s. 1, adopted by one C., & his wife, with whom he lived continuously for four years in the county borough of Leicester, from which place the adopters were irremovable & in which they were settled at the date of the order. A few days after he had reached the age of sixteen years the child became chargeable to the county of Surrey. The justices of Surrey ordered his removal to Coventry, where his mother was then last settled :—Held : the order for removal must be quashed, for the removability & settlement of a poor person are matters relating to his custody, maintenance & education ; therefore the rights, duties, obligations & liabilities of the mother in relation thereto were extinguished & vested in the adopter as though the child was a child born to the adopter in lawful wedlock, in which case the child could not be removed to the place of settlement of his mother.—COVENTRY CORPN. v. SURREY COUNTY COUNCIL, [1935] A. Part VI.—Removal.

1079a. Effect of Local Government Act, 1929 (c. 17), Sched. IX.]—A poor person who was born at C. in the county of L. on Aug. 25, 1878, was a domestic servant from 1894 to 1896, residing in the parish of L. in the said county. From 1896 to May 25, 1900, she resided in the parish of O. in the said county. From May 25, 1900, to Aug. 27, 1900, she was an inmate of O. Union poor law institution. From Aug. 27, 1900, to Oct. 3, 1907, & from Nov. 7, 1907, to Jan. 25, 1911, she resided at various addresses in the parish of O. without receiving relief. From Jan. 25, 1911, to Mar. 12, 1913, she was again an inmate of O. poor law institution. From Mar. 12, 1913, to Mar. 16, 1913, she resided in the county borough of S. without receiving relief. On Mar. 16, 1913, she was admitted into the casual wards at the county borough of S., & on Mar. 17, 1913, she was transferred to O. Union poor law institution, where she remained until Mar. 14, 1931. Before Apr. 1, 1930, the "appointed day" under Local Government Act, 1929 (c. 17), the parish of O. & the area comprised in the county borough of S. were within the O. poor law union. After the "appointed day" the area comprising the county borough of S. became a separate poor law area, & that comprising the parish of O. became part of the poor law area of the county of L. From Mar. 14, 1931, to Nov. 17, 1931, & again from Nov. 17, 1931, to Mar. 3, 1933, the poor person resided in the county borough of S., & was in receipt of outdoor relief. On Oct. 12, 1932, the Minister of Health made an order under Poor Law Act, 1930 (c. 17), s. 161, that the poor person was chargeable to the county borough of S. On Mar. 3, 1933, S. justices made an order that she should be removed to the county of L., but L. Quarter Sessions reversed this order, holding that the poor person was resident in the county borough of S. immediately before the appointed day, & that she had acquired there a status of irremovability by virtue of the Local Government Act, 1929 (c. 17), Sched. IX., Part I., para. 3, sub-paras. 2 & 3. On appeal by the county borough of S. the Divisional Ct. reversed the order of quarter sessions, holding that the poor person had not acquired a status of irremovability in S. On appeal by the L. County Council:—Held: Poor Law Act, 1930 (c. 17), is a complete code dealing with settlement & removability, & it alone applied, unaffected by Local Government Act, 1929 (c. 17), Sched. IX., Part I.; therefore the removal order was rightly made.—LANCASHIRE COUNTY COUNCIL v. SOUTHPORT BOROUGH COUNCIL, [1935] 1 K. B. 216; 104 L. J. K. B. 177; 152 L. T. 242; 99 J. P. 69; 51 T. L. 1123a. —— —— Effect of Mental Treatment Act, 1930 (c. 23), s. 18 (1) (b).]—A married woman, normally residing with her husband, had been during the greater part of the three years next preceding Oct. 4, 1935, in receipt of relief as a rate-aided patient in a mental hospital. No other relief had been granted to her or to her husband. The husband, who was previously settled in the County of L., had resided during those three years in the County Borough of R.; but there had been no period of residence sufficient to give him a settlement or status of irremovability there, if the period of his wife's receipt of relief was to be excluded. The wife having become chargeable to the County of L. an order was made by justices for her removal to R.:—Held: the effect of the second proviso to sect. 18 (1) of Mental Treatment Act, 1930 (c. 23), was that the husband's settlement must be determined by the antecedent law, as though that sect. had not been passed, & consequently that by sect. 93 (1) of Poor Law Act, 1930 (c. 17), the time of his wife's confinement as a rate-aided patient must be excluded from the computation, & that he was not & therefore his wife was not, last settled in R., & the order of removal was bad.—ROCHDALE CORPN. v. LANCASHIRE COUNTY COUNCIL, [1937] 1 K. 1148a. —— Poor Law Act, 1930 (c. 17).]—Quarter sessions made an order for the removal from the city of B. to her county of settlement of a pauper & her child who were not entitled to any of the exceptions from removability contained in Poor Law Act, 1930 (c. 17), s. 93. At the date of the order the husband of the pauper was serving a sentence of six months' imprisonment at B. after conviction of forgery, & by the prison regulations the pauper was permitted to visit her husband in prison at intervals of several weeks. Neither the pauper nor her husband consented to the order:—Held: (1) the order was rightly made, since the common law principle that an order could not be made without consent for the removal of a wife so as to separate her from the husband with whom she was actually or constructively residing had ceased to be of effect since the passing of Poor Law Act, 1930 (c. 17), ss. 93, 94, & 104 of which exclusively governed the matter, & rendered the pauper removable as being a person in receipt of relief within sect. 94 & not rendered irremovable by sect. 93; (2) the order was also right on the ground that in the circumstances the pauper & her husband could not be said to be constructively living together.—GLAMORGAN COUNTY COUNCIL v. BIRMINGHAM CORPN., [1933] 1 K. 1215a. —— ——.]—The last legal settlement of a rate-aided mental patient, & that of her father & mother, was in the county borough of Reading. Her mother had obtained a status of irremovability from the county of London, under the proviso to Poor Law Act, 1930 (c. 17), s. 93 (2), as a wife deserted by her husband:—Held: the patient, during a period when she was residing in the county of London apart from her mother, had taken & was following the settlement of her father in Reading & the mother's status of irremovability from London did not, under the above sub-sect., confer a similar status on her daughter, so as to enable the above period to count towards the three years requisite to secure for the patient a settlement by residence in the county of London.—LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL v. BERKSHIRE COUNTY COUNCIL (1935), 153 L. The false statement in question was made to induce the relieving officer to give to applt. a card entitling him to work on the roads maintainable by the local authority & to be paid for his work a sum of 23*s.* No benefit other than the employment to be provided & the payment to be made was sought or received by applt.:—Held: the provision of work & wages constituted relief within sect. 150 & applt. was rightly convicted.—REEVE v. WALKER, [1932] 1 K. 52a. —— —— ——.]—Deft. was charged before a ct. of summary jurisdiction with stealing a postal packet in course of transmission by post. A test letter containing stamps & notes, & bearing a Saffron Walden postmark, was placed by an official of the Post Office in a post office letter-box at Edgware, but there was no evidence that the letter ever had gone to Saffron Walden. Another official of the Post Office specially collected the letter on the same day, kept it in his possession overnight, & on the following morning placed it with letters to be delivered by deft. The letter was not proper to deft.'s delivery, & should have been thrown out by him as a mis-sort. Deft., as he subsequently admitted, stole the stamps & notes from the letter & burned the cover & letter. The justices held that the letter was not in the ordinary course of transmission by post & dismissed the information:—Held: the letter never ceased to be a postal packet in course of transmission by post from the time when it was put in the post office down to the time when it was stolen by deft.; &, per AVORY, J., if there were any room for doubt on that point, it became in the course of transmission by post when delivered to deft. on the morning following the posting, because by Post Office Act, 1908 (c. 48), s. 90 (b), such delivery was deemed to be delivery to a post office. The case must be remitted to the justices with a direction to find the offence charged proved.—HOOD v. SMITH (1933), 150 L. T. 477; 98 J. P. 73; 32 L. G. R. 30; 30 Cox, C. C. 82, D. C.

The Postmaster-General terminated the agreement at the end of 10 years:—Held: the licence was revocable at the Postmaster-General's discretion. 171a. Appointment "absolutely"—Passes fee simple.]—In exercise of a special power of appointment among her children given by the will of testator to Mrs. C., a married daughter of testator, Mrs. C. appointed that one-third share of certain freehold hereditaments & of the investments for the time being representing the same should be held in trust for her daughter E. N., her heirs, exors., administrators & assigns absolutely. Later, in 1901, in exercise of the same power, Mrs. C. by a deed made supplemental to the former deed of appointment, appointed that the trustees of testator's will should stand possessed of the residue then remaining unappointed of the said hereditaments in trust, as to one-fourth share thereof for the said E. N. & as to three-fourth shares thereof for her son C. absolutely :—Held : applying the principle stated above, that the appointment made in 1901 in favour of E. N. & C. upon its true construction carried the fee simple to those appointees according to their respective appointed shares.—Re ARDEN, SHORT v. CAMM, [1935] Ch. 326 ; 104 L. J. Ch. 141 ; 152 L. By his will, also executed before 1926, the donee exercised the power, in accordance with its terms, in favour of his sons, daughters, & remoter issue, & further declared & appointed that the trustees for the time being of the settlement might at any time, but, with regard to any estate, funds or moneys in which any person or persons might have a prior life or other interest, with the written consent of that person or those persons while having that interest, raise up to one-half of the then expectant, presumptive or vested share of any grandchild or remoter issue of his under the appointments made by the will & pay or apply the amounts raised for their benefit as the trustees should think fit :—Held : the power of appointment was validly exercised by the will, & the trustees could properly exercise the power of advancement.—Re MEWBURN'S SETTLEMENT, PERKS v. WOOD, [1934] Ch. 112 ; 103 L. By a deed, dated in 1913, the settlor, with the consent of her mother, exercised the power of revocation & new appointment in such a manner that after her death in 1928 the question arose whether certain trusts declared by the deed of 1913 were valid, their validity depending upon the decision by the ct. of the qu[illegible] whether the power of revocation & new appointment was a general power or a special power:—Held: it would not be right to hold that, upon the terms of the powers contained in the marriage settlement, the settlor was in substance the owner of the property, & consequently free to deal with it in any way she pleased, & the power was a special power.—Re WATTS, COFFEY v. WATTS, [1931] 2 Ch. 302; 100 L. 269a. —— Exercise by joint will.]—Testator devised & bequeathed the residue of his real & personal estate to his wife for life & after her death to his son & daughter for their sole & separate use during the term of their natural lives & after their decease to such persons & to such ends & purposes as the son & daughter should by will appoint & in default of appointment to his right heirs for ever. The brother & sister executed a joint will. The brother died in Nov. 1917, having by his separate will confirmed the joint will, & the joint will, the separate will, & a codicil thereto were admitted to probate as being his last testamentary disposition. The mother died on Aug. 8, 1931. The question then arose whether the appointment by the joint will was a good exercise of the power of appointment by the brother & sister:—Held: a joint appointment by will could be made by two persons; if the sister did not revoke the joint will, then upon her death & the joint will being admitted to probate as part of her testamentary dispositions it would be an effective exercise of the power of appointment, & would comply with the requirements in the will of the father.—Re DUDDELL, ROUNDWAY v. ROUNDWAY, [1932] 1 Ch. 585; 101 L. E. executed a deed poll appointing a portion to a child, a portion to a grandchild, & a further portion to trustees in trust for the child:—Held: all these appointments were valid executions of the power.—JOB v. JOB (1853), 2 W. The son predeceased him, leaving one child. Testator's widow by her will appointed the estate to the daughter. Upon a summons to determine whether the power was valid at the date of testator's death, & whether the appointment was valid in regard to one-half of the estate:—Held: (1) by reason of the death of the son before testator the widow had power to appoint only one-half of the estate; (2) the appointment, though excessive, was not wholly void, but was valid up to one-half of the estate.—Re TURNER, HUDSON v. TURNER, [1932] 1 Ch. 31; 101 L. 505a. —— —— ——.]—Under the will of a testator who died in 1890, A. had a general testamentary power of appointment over a share of his residuary trust estate. There was a provision that in default of appointment the unappointed share should be held in trust for the persons who at the death of A. would be entitled under Statutes of Distribution. A. by her will appointed her sister I. her executrix & directed that all her debts & funeral expenses should be paid, & after giving certain pecuniary legacies she gave "all the remainder of my property to my sister, I., to be disposed of as she thinks fit at her death." A. died a spinster in Feb. 1929, but, as the husband of I. had witnessed the will, the residuary gift could not take effect. Doubts having arisen whether A. had effectually exercised the general power of appointment given her by the will of testator:—Held: testatrix had shown an intention of taking the property subject to the power of appointment out of the instrument creating the power by treating it as forming one mass with her own property. It passed, therefore, as if she had died intestate in respect of it & went to the persons entitled according to the Administration of Estates Act, 1925 (c. 23).—Re VANDER BYL, FLADGATE v. GORE, [1931] 1 Ch. 216; 100 L. —— Subsequent confirmation by codicil.]—(1) Testatrix in her will expressed an intention to exercise a power to appoint a life interest in certain trust funds or other property to her husband, but at the date of the will no such power had been created.

Subsequently, a power was created whereby she was given a power to appoint a life interest in certain trust funds to her husband, &, subsequently to the creation of such power, the testatrix made a codicil confirming her will in respect inter alia to the exercise of such power:—Held: there was a valid exercise of the power of appointment of such life interest in favour of her husband.

(2) Subsequently to the date of the codicil another power was created, whereby the testatrix was given a power to appoint a life interest in other trust funds to her husband, but before her death she made no other will or codicil nor executed any other instrument whereby she exercised such other power:—Held: there had been no valid appointment of such life interest in such other trust funds in favour of her husband.—Re BOWER, BOWER v. MERCER, [1930] 2 Ch. 82; 99 L. Her will contained no other disposition than the appointment. Her husband having predeceased her & she having died on Mar. 11, 1932, childless:—Held: even assuming testatrix knew that, if she died childless & her husband predeceased her, the settlement funds would in consequence of her illegitimacy pass to the Crown, the prefatory words were ineffectual to appoint the residue of those funds to the exors. of the husband, so as to make it part of his estate, & the appointment failed by lapse.—Re LADD, HENDERSON v. PORTER, [1932] 2 Ch. 219; 101 L. 830a. —— Appointment to trustees of child's marriage settlement — Share settled.] — A daughter being entitled under the marriage settlement of her father & mother to such share & interest in land & money as the surviving mother should appoint, provided by her own marriage settlement that all such share & interest to which she should become entitled, under her mother's settlement, should be vested in trustees to the use of her intended husband for life, remainder to herself for life, remainder to the children of the marriage. Four years after the marriage the mother appointed a sum to be paid to the trustees of the daughter's settlement, upon the uses therein expressed, in satisfaction of the daughter's share & interest under the marriage settlement of the father & mother:—Held: this was substantially an appointment to the daughter, & valid.—LIMBERT v. GROTE (1832), 1 My. & K. 1; 39 E. The contract of sale referred to was for a sum of £100,000, of which £20,000 had already been paid. The contract of sale was subsequently rescinded on the purchaser paying a further sum of £20,000:—Held: in the events which had happened, the principle that, where a person disposing of a sum among different persons acts on the assumption that he is dealing with a fund of specific amount, & gives ... the residue to another, if the fund falls short, all the gifts abate proportionately, would not apply, & the sons would get nothing under the gift of the "remainder."—A'BECKETT v. TRUSTEES, EXECUTORS & AGENCY CO. P. for his life & from & after his death upon trust for (inter alia) such of the following persons as her said husband should by deed or will appoint—namely, any issue (immediate or remote) of her husband's late father subject to the rule against perpetuities. In default of the exercise of the power & subject to any partial exercise thereof testatrix declared that her residuary estate should be held in trust for her four named sons as therein mentioned. Testatrix having died was survived by her husband, who by a deed poll executed shortly afterwards purported to appoint a certain sum of testatrix's residuary estate to himself. He subsequently died, & on his death the question arose what estate duty became payable in respect of the residuary estate of testatrix. The point having arisen whether under the circumstances & having regard to the power of appointment given to the husband by the will of testatrix he was a person "competent to dispose" under Finance Act, 1894 (c. 30), s. 5 (2), of the said residuary real & personal estate; & whether, therefore, this residuary estate & the moneys which he purported to appoint under the deed poll were liable for any & if so what estate duty, an originating summons was taken out by his trustees for the purpose (inter alia) of determining this question :—Held : the husband was himself an object of the power & could, after the death of testatrix, appoint to himself the whole of the fund by deed. Further, he was a person "competent to dispose" within Finance Act, 1894 (c. 30), s. 5 (2), & therefore estate duty became payable on his death in respect of such part of testatrix's residuary estate as then remained subject to the trusts of her will.—Re PENROSE, PENROSE v. PENROSE, [1933] Ch. 793; 102 L. During her contract she was bound to supply a weekly page to the newspaper of her employer. During the time of her contract the journalist ceased to supply this weekly page ; she was offered employment by another newspaper, which published an announcement that the journalist was exclusively engaged by that newspaper. The journalist also informed her previous employer that she would not supply any more matter for its newspaper. An interlocutory injunction was granted prohibiting the journalist from contributing to any newspaper published & printed in Australasia (with the exception mentioned above), & a corresponding injunction was granted against the other newspaper :—Held : it did not clearly appear on the evidence that the clause restricting contributions to other newspapers was void or an injunction was an inappropriate remedy.—GORDON v. SMITH'S NEWSPAPERS, LTD., [1931] S. Pltf.'s books were first published in the year 1887 & went through several editions. The books had been extensively advertised & the last editions of the books were published in Nov. 1929. Defts.' books were first published in Jan. 1930. Notwithstanding the fact that it was proved defts.' books had on one occasion been confused with pltf.'s books it was held not to be established by the evidence that defts. had been passing off their books as the books of pltf.:—Held: the words "How to Appeal against your Rates" which were fairly descriptive of the contents of defts.' book as well as of pltf.'s, had not acquired a secondary or special meaning as meaning pltf.'s books only. SUB-SECT. 2.—ON EARNING REMISSION (Vol. XXXVII., p. 561).

34b. No legal right to discharge.]—M. was convicted in Dec. 1925, of certain misdemeanours & sentenced to two years' imprisonment with hard labour & twelve months' imprisonment, the sentences to run consecutively. An order was made by the ct. directing that he should be detained in prison in conformity with the sentences passed. He was first detained in Portsmouth Prison & afterwards in Pentonville Prison. In Dec. 1927, after M. had been removed to Pentonville Prison, the Governor of Portsmouth Prison indorsed on M.'s stage card the forfeiture of five remission marks, to make it agree with M.'s record. There was a dispute whether or not the Governor of Portsmouth Prison had ordered the forfeiture of those marks on May 10, 1926, & the jury differed with regard to it. As a result of the forfeiture of those five marks M. was released by the Governor of Pentonville Prison on July 21, 1928, instead of on July 20. On Aug. 2, 1928, M. brought an action against the Governors of both prisons to recover damages for his detention in prison during that one day. The jury found that the Governor of Portsmouth Prison had not acted maliciously nor with intention to injure M., & that he had not made a false statement:—Held: the Prison Rules did not confer upon M. any legal right to an earlier discharge by the obtaining of remission marks, & that therefore the action could not succeed against either of the Governors; having regard to the findings of the jury the action could not succeed against the Governor of Portsmouth Prison; that deft. was protected by Public Authorities Protection Act, 1893 (c. 61), as the action was not brought within six months of the act that caused the damage, there being no continuance of the injury or damage, as there was no continuance of the act by that deft. which caused the damage; lastly, the Governor of Pentonville Prison was protected, as he had merely acted in pursuance of the order of the ct.—MORRISS v. WINTER, [1930] 1 K. 1103a. —— —— Enemy country annexed to Allied country by treaty—"Property rights & interests" of nationals transferred to Allied Powers.]—In 1930 applts., then & since an Italian corpn., brought an action in the Prize Ct. claiming damages against the Crown on the ground that in Sept. 1914, a British cruiser had sunk their steamship while she was proceeding from Havre to Vigo under a safe conduct issued by the French authorities & confirmed by the British. The ship flew the Austro-Hungarian mercantile flag, & throughout the war applts. were nationals of Hungary. They contended, however, that the treaty of peace with Hungary (the Treaty of Trianon) was not binding upon them, because before it came into effect they had ceased to be nationals of Hungary, as Fiume, where they were domiciled, had been recognised as an independent state; further, that the treaty, upon its true construction, did not adversely affect their claim. The Treaty of Trianon provided by sect. IV., art. 232: "the question of private property, rights & interests in an enemy country shall be settled according to the principles laid down in this sect. & to the provisions of the annex hereto"; & by the annex: "No claim or action shall be made or brought against any Allied or Associated Power . . . by any Hungarian national, or by or on behalf of any national of the former Kingdom of Hungary, wherever resident, in respect of any act or omission with regard to his property, rights or interests during the war. . . ." An Order in Council declared that the above provisions of the treaty should have full force & effect as law. The Order was made under the Treaty of Peace (Hungary) Act, 1921 (c. 11), & by sect. 1 (2) of that Act was to have "effect as if enacted in this Act":—Held: applts.' right, if any, to claim before an English Prize Ct. would be property in England, & the above provision of the annex defeated it. That provision was clearly intended to cover applts., & having regard to the terms of the 1921 Act any English Ct., whether in prize or not, was precluded from considering whether in international law the treaty bound those who at its effective date were no longer Hungarian nationals.—THE BATHORI, [1934] A. 48a. ——.]—By Treaty of Versailles (Art. 232), Germany undertook to make compensation for all damage done to the civilian population of the Allied & Associated Powers & to their property during the period of the belligerency of each as an Allied or Associated Power against Germany by the aggression of Germany & her allies, & moneys were received by the Crown under this Article. By a petition of right the suppliants, as assignees of civilian claimants who had suffered loss or damage by German aggression during the War, claimed on their behalf payment of compensation out of the moneys paid or payable as reparations under the above Article. The case made by the petition was that the claimants had sent particulars of their claims, first, to Foreign Claims Office &, afterwards, to Reparation Claims Department in accordance with the instructions of His Majesty's Govt., that these claims had been duly verified by the Govt., & were included in the agreed total of claims for reparations which Germany was required to pay under the treaty, & that the Crown in inviting the claimants to submit their claims had constituted itself an agent or a trustee for claimants in respect of any money received by it from Germany on account of reparations, & that any such money was money had & received by the Crown to the use of claimants:—Held: on demurrer by the Crown, the petition afforded no ground for the contention that the money received under the treaty was received by the Crown as an agent or a trustee for claimants, or as money had & received to their use, & was bad as disclosing no ground of claim cognizable by the ct.—CIVILIAN WAR CLAIMANTS ASSOCN., LTD. v. R., [1932] A. 291a. Construction of dam — Flooding — Contributory negligence.]—A power co. constructed a dam across the St. Francis River. Upon the occasion of exceptional floods in the spring of 1928, a railway embankment was severely damaged & a serious accident occurred to a passenger train. The dam was constructed under statutory authority which provided that the owner or lessee of the work should be liable for all damages resulting therefrom whether from excessive elevation or otherwise. The railway was the property of the Dominion of Canada, & the ownership had never been conveyed to the Canadian National Railways Co., although the co. had been entrusted with its management & operation by statute, & also by statute given a right to bring an action of this kind. It was proved at the trial that the flood was being watched by the inhabitants generally for some time before the accident, but it was not until a short time before the accident that the disintegration of the embankment was apparent. The power co. contended that the action should have been brought by the railway co. & not by the Crown, & that the railway co. was guilty of contributory negligence :—Held : (1) the Crown was the proper party to bring the action; (2) the statute imposed an absolute duty on the power co., & contributory negligence could not be pleaded except as to foolish & irrational acts of the claimants; (3) upon the facts the railway co. had no opportunity of warning & stopping the train, & damages for injury & loss of the locomotive & carriages were recoverable.—R. v. SOUTHERN CANADA POWER CO., LTD., SOUTHERN CANADA POWER CO., LTD. v. R., [1937] 3 All E. sc. —— ——.]—The Public Utilities Act, 1923, Amendment Act, 1927, provides for an appeal from an order of the Board upon a question of jurisdiction or upon a question of law, but upon no other ground. In fixing a base for rates to be charged by applt. co. the Board took into account the act that the co. had earned undistributed profits beyond the return rate fixed for the preceding period & the Board, as a consequence of treating such earnings as excessive profits & available for the amortisation fund, had reduced the base on which the rates for the ensuing period were fixed. Pltf. having failed to comply with the order, his wife made complaint to a magistrate at D., which was within the county of Chester, that £19 12*s.* 6*d.* was then in arrear under the order, & thereupon the magistrate issued a warrant, addressed to each & all of the constables of the county of Chester, commanding them to apprehend pltf. & convey him before a ct. of summary jurisdiction at D. to be dealt with according to law. The warrant showed on its face that £19 17*s.* was payable by pltf. & was in the form prescribed by the Bastardy (Forms) Order, 1915, but it did not contain the words " unless said sum & all costs & charges be sooner paid " which were directed to be inserted in such warrants by Bastardy (Forms) Amendment Order, 1921. The warrant was delivered to deft., the superintendent of police at D., & some time later pltf. was arrested by a constable acting under deft.'s orders. Pltf. was taken in custody through the streets & placed in a cell by deft.'s order. At the time the arrest was effected the warrant was in deft.'s possession at the police station, & was not in the possession of the constable who made the arrest. Pltf.'s father immediately after the arrest tendered £19 17*s.* to deft. & asked for his son's release, but deft. refused to accept the money. Pltf.'s solr. then sent a letter to deft. enclosing £19 17*s.* & demanding pltf.'s release, but deft. did not open the letter & pltf. was kept overnight in the cell. Pltf. was brought on the following morning before a ct. of summary jurisdiction at D., when the solr.'s letter was produced & found to contain £19 17*s.*, whereupon the magistrates ordered pltf.'s immediate release. Pltf. brought an action against deft. for false imprisonment, & the jury returned a verdict in pltf.'s favour & awarded £175 as damages for arrest, & £175 as damages for unlawful detention at the police station after the tender of the money : —Held : deft. was not protected by Constables Protection Act, 1750 (c. 44), s. 6, in respect of the arrest, but he was protected by that Act in respect of the unlawful detention at the police station after the tender of the money, inasmuch as deft. in detaining pltf. was merely acting in obedience to the warrant.—HORSFIELD v. BROWN, [1932] 1 K. 777b. Stolen goods handed over to alleged owner by Receiver for Metropolitan Police.]—In the end of 1924 the Metropolitan Police found at the house of pltf. & took into their possession a quantity of goods including certain cloth. Pltf. was brought before the police ct. on charges of receiving, & some of the evidence there given tended to show, but did not prove, the identity of the cloth with cloth which had been stolen from a firm of carriers. Pltf. was committed for trial at the London sessions on indictments charging him with having received certain of the goods other than the cloth knowing them to have been stolen, & on an indictment charging him with a similar offence in respect of the cloth, & in Feb. 1925, he was convicted on the first-mentioned indictments & sentenced to five years' penal servitude. He was never tried on the indictment relating to the cloth, but it was allowed to remain upon the record. On Apr. 2, 1925, pltf. not having as yet made any credible claim to the cloth, the Receiver for the Metropolitan Police District handed it over to the firm of carriers, who claimed it, taking from them a written indemnity. On Jan. 16, 1931, pltf. having less than six months before made an unsuccessful demand for the cloth as his property, brought an action against the Receiver & the firm of carriers claiming damages for detinue & conversion of the cloth. The first-named deft. relied, among other defences, upon Public Authorities Protection Act, 1893 (c. 61). The jury, having heard the evidence, found that it did not establish the identity of the cloth with that stolen from the carriers, & they returned a verdict for pltf. against both defts. :—Held : (1) the first deft. in handing over the cloth to the second defts. in Apr. 1925, had acted in "intended execution" of a "public duty" within Public Authorities Protection Act, 1893 (c. 61), s. 1, & as the action in respect of the act of conversion so effected had not been commenced within six months after that act, it was not maintainable in respect thereof; (2) pltf. could not elect to rely only on his claim in detinue, so as to make the time run from his demand & to bring the date of the action within six months after the cause of action. Therefore, judgment should be entered for the first deft. against pltf., & for pltf. against the second deft.—BETTS v. METROPOLITAN POLICE DISTRICT RECEIVER & CARTER PATERSON & Co., LTD., [1932] 2 K. 940a. Detention after receipt of remission marks—Continuance by successive prison Governors.]—M. was convicted in Dec. 1925, of certain misdemeanours & sentenced to two years' imprisonment with hard labour & twelve months' imprisonment, the sentences to run consecutively. An order was made by the ct. directing that he should be detained in prison in conformity with the sentences passed. He was first detained in Portsmouth Prison & afterwards in Pentonville Prison. In Dec. 1927, after M. had been removed to Pentonville Prison, the Governor of Portsmouth Prison indorsed on M.'s stage card the forfeiture of five remission marks, to make it agree with M.'s record. There was a dispute whether or not the Governor of Portsmouth Prison had ordered the forfeiture of those marks on May 10, 1926, & the jury differed with regard to it. As a result of the forfeiture of those five marks M. was released by the Governor of Pentonville Prison on July 21, 1928, instead of on July 20. On Aug. 2, 1928, M. brought an action against the Governors of both prisons to recover damages for his detention in prison during that one day. The jury found that the Governor of Portsmouth Prison had not acted maliciously nor with intention to injure M., & that he had not made a false statement :—Held : the Prison Rules did not confer upon M. any legal right to an earlier discharge by the obtaining of remission marks, & that therefore the action could not succeed against either of the Governors; having regard to the findings of the jury the action could not succeed against the Governor of Portsmouth Prison; & that deft. was protected by the Public Authorities Protection Act, 1893 (c. 61), as the action was not brought within six months of the act that caused the damage, there being no continuance of the injury or damage, as there was no continuance of the act by that deft.

A ship caught fire & partially sank in their dock. In Feb. 1930 the dock co. repaired the ship, but on taking her out of the dockyard it was found that the repairs were useless, & in June, 1931, she was sold to shipbreakers, & a statement was then prepared & issued by the dock co. showing the amount available for division amongst the cargo owners. In July, 1931, the cargo owners issued a writ claiming damages from the dock co. by reason of their having acted negligently in having tried to repair the ship, whereby the sum available for division amongst the owners was diminished. The dock co. relied on the Public Authorities Protection Act, 1893 (c. 61), s. 1 (a), but the cargo owners contended that the action was in time, as their rights were not ascertainable until the preparation of the adjustment statement, & as part of their complaint was the rendering to them of a statement showing too small a balance :—Held : the act or default complained of was in substance the alleged negligence of the dock co. in repairing the ship, this had taken place more than six months before action brought, & therefore the action was barred by the operation of the Public Authorities Protection Act, 1893 (c. 61), s. 1 (a).—COPPER EXPORT ASSOCN. 1049a. London Passenger Transport Act, 1933—Lump sum or annuity.]—In assessing compensation for loss of office under London Passenger Transport Act, 1933, s. 73 (6), the Standing Arbitrator may award compensation either in the form of a lump sum or an annuity. The recipient of the compensation has no option & cannot insist upon the award in either form. If a lump sum is awarded, the arbitrator may apply any actuarial tables that he thinks fit, provided that the total sum awarded does not exceed the sum which could have been awarded to a civil servant under the provisions of the Acts & regulations in force on Aug. 13, 1888, i.e., the regulations made by the Treasury on July 27, 1871.—RICH v. LONDON PASSENGER TRANSPORT BOARD, [1936] 1 All E. The question of what are the interests of the city is certainly, at least primâ facie, one for the city council to pass upon without undue interference from the cts. The mere fact that a bye-law benefits one individual or class at the expense of another does not necessarily indicate that it is not in the "interests of the city." The city claimed from resp. payment of a tax, in accordance with the bye-law, of a percentage on the amount of resp.'s contract for regulating the conduct of the drivers thereof reasonably. A bye-law was accordingly made which provided: "Every driver of a hackney carriage shall when working or plying for hire . . . conduct himself in a proper civil & decorous manner at all times." Subsequently, by agreement, defts. appointed a sub-committee to settle all outstanding matters, & an agreement was arrived at between pltfs. & the sub-committee. One of the terms of that agreement was that pltfs.' drainage scheme should remain, although it was contrary to defts.' bye-laws. Defts. having repudiated the agreement to which their sub-committee was a party, pltfs. brought an action claiming specific performance:—Held: as it had not been established that the building of the houses by pltfs. was, or formed part of, a housing scheme to which Housing Act, 1925 (c. 14), s. 99, applied, the verbal contract made by the sub-committee was not binding on defts., for the reason that defts. could not confer upon the sub-committee a power of entering into any such contract. 204a. —— Validity.]—By the proviso to Advertisements Regulation Act, 1907 (c. 27), s. 2, any bye-laws made under that section must provide for the exemption from the operation of such bye-laws of any hoardings or similar structures in use for advertising purposes at the time of the making of the bye-laws & of any advertisements exhibited at that time for a period not less than five years. In 1911 a county council made bye-laws under the section containing such an exemption as is there specified. In 1927 the council made further bye-laws under Advertisements Regulation Acts, 1907 (c. 27) & 1925 (c. 52), containing a similar exemption, which, however, was qualified by the words " but this exemption shall not extend to any hoarding or similar structure or any advertisement to which the bye-law (of 1911) applied " :—Held : (1) the bye-law in this form was valid & intra vires, since hoarding, etc., to which the earlier bye-law applied had already enjoyed the statutory period of exemption, & were not entitled to a second period ; while others were in no way prejudiced by the exception ; (2) a gable end of a building 25 feet high was not a " hoarding or similar structure."—Gloucester Billposting Co., Ltd. v. Hopkins (1932), 96 J. P. 462 ; 30 L. G. R. 488.

—— Construction—" 12 feet in height."]—Deft. was summoned for erecting & maintaining for advertising purposes a hoarding or similar structure in contravention of a bye-law made under Advertisements Regulation Act, 1907 (c. 27), s. 2, prohibiting the erection or maintenance for advertising purposes of any hoarding or similar structure exceeding 12 feet in height. The alleged hoarding or structure consisted of rectangular panels or advertisement boards measuring approximately 20 feet in length horizontally & 10 feet in height vertically & attached to the wall of a building. On these panels picture posters were pasted. Although the panels did not themselves exceed 12 feet in height, they were fixed in such a position on the wall as to be more than 12 feet above ground level :—Held : (1) the words 12 feet in height meant the measurement of the hoarding itself & not the height at which it was above ground level ; (2) per Avory, J., neither the wall nor the panels were hoardings or similar structures within the meaning of the bye-law, which was intended to apply to some independent structure erected on the ground & not to panels fixed to a wall.—Royle v. Orme (1932), 96 J. A local authority, purporting to act under this sub-sect., served a notice upon a building owner requiring the provision of means of communication before the buildings were " erected sold let or occupied " :—Held : the notice was bad, inasmuch as it did not specify whether the work was to be done before the erection of the buildings, or before their sale,

The bus was found to have been brought to the place where it stood for the purpose of a cheap & handy dwelling. It stood apparently on firm ground on a plateau on top of a hill, but owing to the state of the soil down the side of the hill it was found to be nearly if not quite impossible to remove it. The motor lorry, although adapted for use as a bedroom & used as such, was found to have been brought there in the first instance for agricultural purposes. Pltf. did not apply for permission under Public Health Acts Amendment Act, 1907 (c. 53), s. 27, to erect the caravans as temporary buildings. The local authority purporting to act under their powers under the same sect. pulled down the caravans. Fees—How recoverable.]—A weekly tenant brought an action against his landlord for special damages in respect of injury to his wife caused by the breach of the landlord's duty to keep the premises in repair, & the county ct. judge awarded a sum for damages which included an amount claimed by the London County Council for the wife's expenses at a hospital provided by them. On appeal:—Held: (1) whether or not the hospital expenses were recoverable by the council from the tenant, more than six months having elapsed since the discharge of the patient from hospital, the county ct. judge was entitled in assessing the special damages to take these expenses into account & to award their amount for payment over to the council; (2) the hospital expenses were still recoverable by the council & therefore on this ground also their amount had been properly included in the special damages. The provision in Local Govt. Act, 1929 (c. 17), s. 14, giving the council the like power to provide hospitals as was conferred on local authorities by Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 131, did not operate to incorporate sect. 132 of the 1875 Act, which gives power to recover hospital expenses at any time within six months of the patient's discharge from hospital, & the duty imposed by 1929 Act, s. 16 (1), on the council to recover these expenses impliedly carried with it the power to recover these expenses in any ct. of competent jurisdiction, a power additional to the power to recover these expenses summarily conferred by 1929 Act, s. 16 (2), & not subject to the six months' limitation applicable to summary proceedings.—ALLEN v. WATERS & Co., [1935] 1 K. By Local Govt. Act, 1929 (c. 17), s. 5, the county council have powers to provide assistance otherwise than by poor relief, including (sect. 14) the power to provide hospitals conferred on local authorities by Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 131; & (sect. 16) it is the duty of the council to recover from any person maintained in any institution or "from any person legally liable" to maintain that person such part, if any, of the expenses "having regard to their financial circumstances" as they are in the opinion of the council able to pay:—Held: the words "legally liable" in Local Govt. Act, 1929 (c. 17), s. 16, include persons rendered liable for the cost of maintenance by statute, & not only those liable at common law; but, before an order for payment can be made upon any person under that sect., it is incumbent upon the council to show that deft. is possessed of sufficient means to pay the amount claimed.—MIDDLESEX COUNTY COUNCIL v. NATHAN, [1937] 2 K. Power to make order when satisfied that house unfit for habitation—Meaning of "satisfied."]—By Housing Act, 1930 (c. 39), s. 19 (1), a local authority, if, upon consideration of an official representation or a report from their officers or other information in their possession, they are "satisfied" that a dwelling-house is unfit for human habitation & is not capable at a reasonable expense of being rendered so fit, may make a demolition order :—Held : (1) "satisfied" must mean primâ facie satisfied. It was the duty of the local authority to treat that satisfaction merely as a temporary satisfaction on the information then before them & open to be modified or changed should the owner of the house give them further information or make a further offer to do certain works ; (2) an appeal lay to a county ct. judge against a demolition order made by a local authority both on questions of fact & on questions of law.—Fletcher v. Ilkeston Corpn. The local authority rejected a proposal by the owner to turn the two houses into one, & made a demolition order. On appeal to the county ct. the judge found that the two houses could be combined into one at a reasonable expense & that the combined house would be suitable for occupation by persons of the working classes, & he accepted an oral offer of the owner to carry out the work :—Held : there was nothing in Housing Act, 1930 (c. 39), s. 19, to prevent the local authority accepting the undertaking of the owner to turn the two houses into one ; the county ct. judge was entitled to accept the undertaking, which should, however, have specified the period within which the work should be carried out. —Johnson v. Leicester Corpn., [1934] 1 K. It appeared that the houses, which had been closed in 1928 under a closing order, remained unoccupied until 1930, when, by permission of the husband of the accused, they were occupied by tenants, from whom he collected rents. It further appeared that, for the period involved in the case, the husband was generally known to act as factor for his wife in the management of her properties, including the houses in question. On these facts the Sheriff-substitute found the charge not proven :—Held : in the absence of an express finding that the husband was in fact his wife's factor, & that, in that capacity, he had let the subjects with his wife's knowledge & approval, it could not be said that she had been proved to have let them, or permitted them to be occupied, within the meaning of the statute.—Haig v. Thompson, [1931] S. sk. House declared insanitary—Validity of declaration — Prohibition.]—Resps., a corporate body constituted by the Singapore Improvement Ordinance, 1927, & entrusted with the duty of carrying out the provisions of the Ordinance, made a declaration that a dwelling-house belonging to applts. was insanitary within sect. 57 of the Ordinance. Having heard objections by applts. to the declaration, resps. in due course submitted it for consideration by the Governor in Council in accordance with the provisions of sect. 59 of the Ordinance. Applts. thereupon applied for a writ of prohibition to prohibit resps. from proceeding further in respect of the declaration, on the ground (inter alia) that they had acted ultra vires in making it :—Held : (1) the grounds on which resps. made the declaration did not justify it, & they were therefore acting beyond their powers & the declaration was not enforceable ; (2) in deciding whether, after considering the objections raised by applts. against the declaration, it should be revoked or submitted to the Governor in Council under sect. 59 (1) of the Ordinance, resps. were exercising quasi-judicial functions ; (3) a writ of prohibition should issue. Although the declaration had been submitted to the Governor in Council by resps. they were not functus officio because in the exercise of their quasi-judicial functions they had still (inter alia) the discretionary power under sect. 61 (1) of the Ordinance, if the Governor in Council approved the declaration, of requiring the applts. to demolish the building. There was, therefore, something upon which prohibition could still operate, & the application for the writ was not made too late ; (4) when a house is stated to be unfit for human habitation, it is the whole house that is being so described.—Estate & Trust Agencies (1927), Ltd. v. Singapore Improvement Trust, [1937] A. sm. Validity of demolition order—Effect of delay.]—On June 10, 1931, a local authority served upon the owner of dwelling-houses a notice stating that the houses were unfit for habitation, & that a meeting of the authority would be held on July 13, when the owner would be entitled to be heard upon the matter. The owner did not attend the meeting, & no undertaking regarding the houses was given. At the time when the notice was served there were tenants in the houses for whom accommodation had to be provided. Owing to difficulties which occurred in obtaining a site for, & in building, new houses for the tenants, no demolition order was served upon the owner until March 14, 1934. The owner maintained that the order, in view of the delay in issuing it, did not comply with the provisions of Housing (Scotland) Act, 1930 (c. 40), s. 16, & was invalid :—Held : the demolition order was validly made, in respect that sect. 16 did not impose upon the authority a duty of making the order within a specified time, & that the delay was not unreasonable in the circumstances, & had occasioned no prejudice to the owner of the houses.—Brown v. Bonnyrigg & Lasswade Magistrates, [1936] S. C. 258.—SCOT.

1930 (c. 39), s. 17, reported to their Housing Committee that seven houses were unfit for human habitation & capable at a reasonable expense of being rendered fit: the committee reported that, having considered that representation, it recommended service upon the landlords of notices under the section requiring the execution of works upon the houses; on Apr. 26 the council adopted the committee's report, & on Apr. 28 seven notices were served on the owner's agents (the persons "having control" within sect. 17 (2)) requiring them within fifty-six days to execute the works therein specified. Pltfs. who knew that the notices had been served, bought, on or about Sept. 8, 1932, four of the seven houses, on which none of the work, specified in the notices served in respect of them had yet been done. A requirement in one notice was "to take down & re-build the front, back main & back addition walls where necessary; . . . rake out & re-point the walls of the water-closet, . . ."; another, in two notices, was to "take down & re-build the front & back addition walls where necessary & re-point the remainder of walls (sic), where necessary"; & another, in the fourth notice, was to "take down & re-build the front, back addition & water-closet walls where necessary; . . . re-point around reveals of front door; . . ." Pltf. did work on all the houses but rebuilt no walls (though he repointed all or most of them), & all the work that he did was finished by Oct. 14. He contended that he had complied with the notices, which the council denied: & there was evidence that the council's senior sanitary inspector stated that the council would enter upon the houses, rebuild the walls, & take off the roofs. Pltf. did not appeal to the county ct. against the notices, as he could have done under sect. 22 of the Act, with the result that they became, under that sect., operative on the expiration of twenty-one days after service & final & conclusive as to any matters which could have been raised on such an appeal. He alleged that they were invalid, on the ground that there was no sufficient proof that the council had properly considered what it was necessary for them to consider under sect. 17 of the Act before serving them. He accordingly commenced the present action, claiming declarations that the notices were invalid, & that the council were not entitled to enter upon the houses, to pull down their walls or to take off their roofs, & an injunction to give effect to the declarations. Evidence was given for pltf. that the use of the words "where necessary" in notices of the kind before the ct., though not unusual, was not common:—Held: (1) by the Ct. of Appeal, in the absence of any evidence one way or another, the ct. would not assume that the council had not properly discharged the duties imposed upon them by sect. 17 of the Act, the proper course for pltf. to adopt if he challenged the validity of the notices was to appeal to the county ct. under sect. 22 of the Act within the twenty-one days thereby limited, & as he had not done so the notices must be regarded as valid notices under sect. 17.

By MAUGHAM, J., (2) local authorities must exercise discretion as to the nature of works to be specified in notices served under sect. 17 (1) of the Act, which they can do through their appropriate committees or persons chosen thereby; (3) the notices required pltf. to take down & rebuild only those parts of the walls which needed rebuilding; (4) local authorities have no power, under sect. 18 of the Act relating to the enforcement of notices served under sect. 17 (1), to enter upon & do work in dwelling-houses, or give notice in writing of intention to do so, unless non-compliance with notices given under sect. 17 (1) can be shown, & pltf. was therefore free to prove, if he could, that he had complied with the notices, & thus prevent the council from proceeding under sect. 18.—COHEN v. WEST HAM CORPN., [1933] Ch. 814; 102 L. 502d. —— —— Demand for payment—Necessity for signature by town clerk.]—On the default of defts. to render fit for human habitation two blocks of houses, numbering twenty-three houses altogether, which were under their control, after proper notices served on them, the pltf. corpn., under Housing Act, 1930 (c. 39), s. 18 (1), did the work themselves, & served a demand for payment on defts. under Housing Act, 1930 (c. 39), s. 18 (3). The claim was signed by one of pltfs.' officials, not the town clerk. It claimed two sums, one in respect of each block of houses, giving the totals of the different items of expenditure, labour & materials, but there was no demand for the expenditure on each or any house separately. On these demands being made defts. did not appeal to the county ct. under sect. 22 (1) (b) of 1930 Act:—Held: (1) the demands were bad, firstly, in that they were not signed by the town clerk as directed by Housing Act, 1925 (c. 14), s. 120 (2), which by sect. 65 (1) of 1930 Act is to be construed as one with the latter Act; (2) because they did not specify the sums spent on each separate house; (3) further, the fact that defts. did not appeal to the county ct. did not make the demands good demands, & " demand " in sect. 22 (1) (b) of 1930 Act means a valid demand. Defts., therefore, were not bound to appeal to the county ct.—WEST HAM CORPN. v. BENABO (CHARLES) & SONS, [1934] 2 K. B. 253; 103 L. J. K. B. 452; 151 L. T. 119; 98 J. P. 287; 50 T. L. The fact that the people who dwell in it are of such a character & live under such conditions as to make it a common lodging-house does not cause it to cease to be a dwelling-house.—Re ROSS & LEICESTER CORPN. 502h. Validity of clearance order—Mistake in number of days allowed for vacation—Confirmation with modification by Minister of Health.]—A clearance order made by a local authority under Housing Act, 1930 (c. 39), purported to require that certain of the buildings to which it related should be vacated in a less number of days from the date on which it would become operative than the period of twenty-eight days from that date as required by the Act. The Minister of Health confirmed the order with the modification that the less number of days was altered to twenty-eight days. The order did not include a " starred " note to the form of clearance order prescribed by Provisional Regulations, 1930, made under the Act setting forth the substance of sect. 11 of the Act. On an application to the High Ct. under sect. 11 (3) by the owner of these buildings as a person aggrieved by the order to question its validity in regard to them:—Held: (1) the mistake as to the number of days in the order as originally made did not render it an order which was not within the powers of the Act, or prevent it from applying to these buildings; the order having been confirmed by the Minister with the above-mentioned modification, it could not be said that the requirement of the Act as to the number of days was not complied with by the order; &, therefore, that mistake in the order as originally made was not a ground on which the High Ct. should quash the order in so far as it affected these buildings; (2) the omission of the starred note did not render the order an order which was not within the powers of the Act; assuming that it was a requirement of the Act that that note should be included in the order, there was no evidence in the case before the ct. to show that the interests of appct. had been substantially prejudiced by that requirement not having been complied with; &, therefore, the omission of the note was not a ground on which the High Ct. ought to quash the order. Semble: that it was not a requirement of the Act that the starred note should be included in the order.

(3) The High Ct. will entertain an application under Housing Act, 1930 (c. 39), s. 11 (3), by a person aggrieved by a clearance order, who desires to question its validity only on the grounds mentioned in that sub-section or either of them, namely, that the order is not within the powers of the Act, or that any requirement of the Act has not been complied with, or possibly on the further ground that there is no evidence to support the order; & not on the ground that the evidence is insufficient to support the order.—Re BOWMAN, SOUTH SHIELDS (THAMES STREET) CLEARANCE ORDER, 1931, [1932] 2 K. 502l. —— Confirmation of clearance order—Powers of Minister of Health.]—Where a local authority has made a clearance order under Housing Act, 1930 (c. 39), s. 1, & has submitted the order to the Minister of Health for confirmation, & objections are made thereto by the owners, the Minister must comply with the provisions of 1930 Act, Sched. I., para. 4, & cause a public local inquiry to be held, & consider any objections not withdrawn & the report of the person who held the inquiry. In deciding whether or not he shall confirm the clearance order the Minister occupies a quasi-judicial function & must not take into consideration any matters other than those mentioned in para. 4 of Sched. I. If the Minister holds a private inquiry to which the owners are not invited or takes into consideration ex parte statements with which the owners have had no opportunity of dealing he is not acting in accordance with correct principle of justice, & his confirmation of the clearance order would not be within the powers conferred upon him by the Act, & the owners would be entitled as being persons aggrieved to have the confirmation order quashed.—ERRINGTON v. MINISTER OF HEALTH, [1935] 1 K. 502m. —— —— ——.]—FROST v. MINISTER OF HEALTH, No. 502v, post.

502n. —— —— ——.]—The Minister of Health has, under Housing Acts of 1925 & 1930, the right to give advice to local authorities & to make inquiries in order to determine whether any powers under the Acts should be put in operation in any area, notwithstanding that under Housing Act, 1930 (c. 39), s. 2, the duty is imposed upon the Minister of deciding in a semi-judicial capacity whether or not a clearance order made by a local authority should be confirmed. The representatives of a local authority applied to the Ministry of Health for advice with regard to the preparation of their 1933 five-year slum clearance programme & saw C., one of the Minister's chief housing & town planning inspectors. C. declined to give any advice as he was not sufficiently acquainted with the conditions in the borough. He subsequently visited the borough & inspected the exteriors of properties in various parts of the borough in co. with the chief sanitary inspector of the borough, & C. told the sanitary inspector that the properties which he had seen appeared primâ facie to be the class of property which other local authorities were including in clearance orders, but that he could not express any definite opinion nor was he in a position in any way to bind the Minister. The local authority subsequently made a clearance order in respect of certain properties the owners of which objected to the confirmation of the order. At the public local inquiry the above facts were disclosed. The clearance order was confirmed by the Minister, but C. took no part in deciding whether or not the order should be confirmed. The owners appealed under sect. 11 of 1930 Act on the ground that the Minister in confirming the order had failed to act judicially:—Held: upon the facts, the statement of opinion by C., which did not bind the inspector who held the inquiry, nor the Minister of Health, was in no way inconsistent with the exercise of the duty imposed upon the Minister of deciding in a semi-judicial capacity, after a consideration of the objections & the report of the inspector who held the public local inquiry, whether or not the clearance order made by the local authority should be confirmed, & the objectors had no cause of complaint against the confirmation of the order.—OFFER v. MINISTER OF HEALTH, [1936] 1 K. 502o. —— —— ——.]—A local authority in pursuance of their powers under Part III. of Housing Act, 1925 (c. 40), made an Order for the compulsory purchase of certain land. The owner of the land objected to the confirmation of the Order by the Minister of Health. A public local inquiry was held by an inspector of the Ministry of Health at which it was stated that the land was required by the local authority partly for slum clearance & partly for the erection of new houses required under Housing Act, 1935 (c. 40), on account of overcrowding. The local authority, before the inquiry was held, asked the Minister to receive a deputation with a view to expediting the provision of new houses under Housing Act, 1935 (c. 40), & securing the payment of a subsidy as large as possible. This deputation was received at the Ministry after the public local inquiry was held, but before the confirmation by the Minister of the Compulsory Purchase Order. It was suggested by the owner of the land that representations with regard to the purchase of his land must have been made at that interview in his absence. But the representatives of the local authority & of the Minister deposed that no reference was made at that interview to the purchase of the land in question. The Minister subsequently to the interview confirmed the Compulsory Purchase Order. In proceedings to quash the Confirmation Order:—Held: inasmuch as the interview between the representatives of the Minister & the local authority was held for the sole purpose of carrying out the duties imposed upon the Minister & the local authority by Housing Act, 1935 (c. 40), s. 1, of consulting together for the purpose of carrying that Act into effect, & there was no evidence that the order for the compulsory purchase of the land in question was discussed at the interview, there was no such identity between the subject-matter of the deputation & the subject-matter of the Confirmation Order as to amount to an interference with the exercise by the Minister of his semi-judicial functions in confirming the Compulsory Purchase Order, & that consequently there was no ground for quashing the Compulsory Purchase Confirmation Order.

Per SLESSER, L.J.: Where the Minister has the right under one Act of giving advice to a local authority, & under another Act the duty of confirming Orders made by local authorities, his duty is to carry out both those powers, & they cannot be said to be contrary to one another, inasmuch as the Legislature has imposed upon him the duty of doing both.

Per SCOTT, L.J.: Where public departments are given quasi-judicial duties to perform as well as administrative duties, obligation to carry out their quasi-judicial duties in strict accordance with natural justice must always be considered in the light of their administrative duties.—HORN v. MINISTER OF HEALTH, [1937] 1 K. —— —— ——.]—A clearance order was made which related to an area including a house owned by applt., & applt. was in due course served with notice of the making of the order. He lodged an objection to the order, in accordance with the provisions of the Housing Acts, & was duly served with notice of the principal grounds on which the local authority was satisfied that the premises were unfit for human habitation. The Minister of Health caused a public local inquiry to be held, at which applt. was represented & his objections to the making of the order were stated. The inspector looked at the houses in question & made a report to the Minister, who decided to confirm the clearance order. Applt. appealed on the ground that there was no evidence upon which the Minister could confirm the order:—Held: as applt. had shown neither that the order was not within the powers of the Act, nor that any requirement of the Act had not been complied with, the ct. could not interfere with the Minister's decision.—Re FALMOUTH (WELL LANE, SEDGMOND'S COURT & SMITHWICK HILL) CLEARANCE ORDER, 1936, HALSE'S APPLICATION, [1937] 3 All E. 502q. —— —— ——.]—(1) There is no duty on the Minister of Health when considering whether to confirm a clearance order under sect. 1 of Housing Act, 1930 (c. 39), to hear evidence tendered by persons who oppose the confirmation of the order. Both the local authority & the Minister must consider the matter fairly & reasonably & then make such order as they think proper.

(2) No appeal lies from the making or confirmation of the order except in cases where applt. can show either that the order is not within the powers of the Act or that some requirement of the Act has not been complied with.—HALSE v. MINISTER OF HEALTH (1937), 35 L. G. R. 421.

502r. —— —— Postponement pending inquiry into scheme of county council.]—A borough council gave notice to the London County Council that they were about to take into consideration the question of declaring certain land to be a clearance area, & the London County Council did not notify the borough council within the prescribed period that they themselves intended to deal with the area. Thereafter the borough council made an order declaring the area to be a clearance area, & requested the Minister of Health to confirm such order. Before the Minister had taken any steps the London County Council notified the Minister of their intention to deal with the same area by means of a different scheme, & the Minister ordered a local inquiry into the county council's scheme, suggesting that the borough council should be represented thereat, & refused to consider the question of confirming the order of the borough council until after such inquiry had taken place:—Held: there had been no refusal by the Minister to perform his statutory duty, but merely a postponement of his decision until after the inquiry. Therefore the issue of a writ of mandamus would not be justified. —R. v. MINISTER OF HEALTH, Ex p. FINSBURY BOROUGH COUNCIL (1934), 32 L. G. R. 349.

502s. —— —— Houses demolished before confirmation.]—Nottingham Corpn. on June 4, 1934, resolved that a certain area should be a clearance area, & on the same day made a compulsory purchase order in respect of part thereof. Upon that part of the area there were 39 houses of which 27 were the property of appct. On July 21 appct. instructed a builder to demolish all the 27 houses, & the demolition work began on July 26 & was completed before Oct. 2. Notice of the order was served on appct. on July 30, & he lodged his objection on Aug. 15. On Oct. 2 the public local inquiry began at which the fact of the demolition was proved. On Jan. 16, 1935, the Minister confirmed the order. Appct. questioned the validity of the order & applied under Housing Act, 1930 (c. 39), s. 11 (3), to have it quashed:—Held: before confirming an order the Minister ought to consider matters as they are at the time of the local inquiry, & as there was at that time no subject-matter on which the Act could operate, the Minister ought not to have confirmed the order either with or without modification.—MARRIOTT v. MINISTER OF HEALTH, [1937] 1 K. 502u. —— —— Local inquiry—Procedure.]—At a public local inquiry by the Minister of Health to consider the question of the confirmation of a compulsory purchase order in respect of a part of the White City, counsel for the owners of the land sought to state the intentions of his clients as to the future use of the property. He had already stated that he did not intend to call any evidence. The inspector refused to allow the statement to be made:—Held: the inspector was right in refusing to hear such a statement unsupported by evidence, & the complaint made afforded no ground for quashing the order.—Re LONDON (HAMMERSMITH) HOUSING ORDER, LAND DEVELOPMENT, LTD.'S 502v. —— Area in map accompanying advertisement differing from area at time of resolution.]—By a resolution passed on Oct. 4, 1933, a local authority declared an area within their district to be a clearance area under Housing Act, 1930 (c. 39), s. 1 (1). The map defining the area included within it certain houses belonging to the local authority. In Dec. certain communications passed between the local authority & the Minister of Health regarding the terms of the clearance order, & on the advice of the Minister the houses belonging to the local authority were excluded from the area. Accordingly, when the clearance order was advertised in Mar. 1934, it was accompanied by a new map which did not include within the area the houses in question. Objections to the order having been made, an inquiry under Sched. I., para. 4, to the Act was held on May 29, & on Sept. 29 the order was confirmed without modification by the Minister of Health:—Held: (1) the fact that the area covered by the order confirmed by the Minister was different from that defined on the map made at the time of the resolution of the local authority did not render the order one which was not within the powers of the Act, although it might be one with regard to which a requirement of the Act had not been complied with; (2) up to the time of objections to the order being made, the Minister of Health acted in an administrative, & not in a judicial, capacity, & he was, therefore, entitled through the officials of his department, to advise the local authority on what the terms of the clearance order should be.—FROST v. MINISTER OF HEALTH, [1935] 1 K. 502w. —— Failure to hear objections before resolution passed.]—A local authority passed a resolution under Housing Act, 1930 (c. 39), s. 1, declaring an area in their district to be a clearance area. An owner of property in that area contended that the clearance order based on the resolution was bad, because he had not been given an opportunity of being heard in opposition to it before the resolution was passed:—Held: there was no rule of law obliging the local authority to hear objections by owners of the property affected before passing the resolution, & the resolution & subsequent order were valid.—FREEDMAN v. MINISTER OF HEALTH (1935), 154 L. T. 240; 100 J. P. 104; 80 Sol. Jo. 56; 34 L. G. R. 153.

502x. —— Part of premises not dwellings.]—A clearance order was made in respect of certain premises consisting of garages & workshops with dwelling rooms over, the dwellings not being let, occupied or used in connection with the garages & not being in communication therewith. The owner of the premises contended that it was not within the powers of the local authority under the Housing Acts to order the demolition of the whole of the premises, as the garages & workshops were not dwellings or parts of dwellings. It was also contended that, if that part of the building which was a dwelling were taken away & certain repairs were effected to that part which remained, it might become a desirable garage & could not be a danger to any one living in the neighbourhood:—Held: the structure was all one building, & the local authority had acted within its powers in ordering the demolition of the whole.—Re HAMMERSMITH (BERGHEM MEWS) CLEARANCE ORDER, 1936, WILMOT'S APPLICATION, [1937] 3 All E. 502y. Power to purchase adjacent land.]—A local authority made, & the Minister of Health confirmed, an order for the compulsory purchase of certain land adjacent to a clearance area. The acquisition of that land was reasonably necessary for the carrying out of a scheme for the development of that clearance area in conjunction with other clearance areas in the neighbourhood, but would not have been necessary had it been proposed to develop the area as a separate unit:—Held: Housing Act, 1930 (c. 39), s. 3, conferred power on the local authority to make, & on the Minister to confirm, the above-mentioned compulsory purchase order.—SHEFFIELD BURGESSES v. MINISTER OF HEALTH (1935), 154 L. T. 183; 100 J. P. 99; 52 T. L. R. 171; 80 Sol. Jo. 16; 34 L. G. R. 92.

502z. Discretion of local authority as to method of clearance.]—The owner of certain property included in a compulsory purchase order contended that the onus was upon the local authority to satisfy the Minister of Health that, by making a compulsory purchase order rather than a clearance order, it had chosen the most appropriate method for securing the clearance of the area:—Held: Housing Act, 1930 (c. 39), s. 1 (3), gave the local authority an absolute right to secure the clearance of the area in either of the two ways as it should decide, or partly in one and partly in the other. At the local inquiry the local authority was not required by the Act to call evidence to show why it thought one way more appropriate than another to the particular case, but it was open to the Minister not to confirm the order if he thought the local authority had adopted a wrong method.—Re GREENWICH (PRINCE OF ORANGE LANE) HOUSING ORDER, 1936, WILLEY'S APPLICATION, [1937] 3 All E. 502aa. Compulsory purchase order—Objection—Sufficiency of notice—Satisfaction of Minister.]—Appct., the owner of certain properties in a clearance area, gave notice to the Minister of Health of objection to a compulsory purchase order. The local authority served notices upon appct. under Housing Act, 1935 (c. 40), s. 63 (1), alleging that the properties were unfit for human habitation, & stating the facts which the local authority alleged to be its principal grounds for being satisfied as to the unfitness. Appct. objected to the notices on the ground that they did not give him sufficient particulars of the facts in support of the local authority's allegation of unfitness, & he contended the Minister had no power to hold a public local inquiry into the local authority's application for confirmation of the compulsory purchase order:—Held: by Housing Act, 1935 (c. 40), s. 63 (1), it is the Minister, & not the objector, who is to be satisfied that the local authority has served appropriate notices under that sect., & as the Minister was satisfied, in the present case, that a sufficient notice had been served upon appct., appct. could not object to the hol[illegible] of the public inquiry after the expiration of the period required by sect. 63 (1).—R. v. MINISTER OF HEALTH, Ex p. HACK, [1937] 3 All E. 503a. —— Claim for compensation—When scheme "made."]—By Town Planning Act, 1925 (c. 16), s. 10, it is provided that any person whose property is injuriously affected by the making of a town planning scheme shall, if he makes a claim within the time limited by the scheme, be entitled to obtain compensation in respect thereof from the responsible authority. & by sect. 2 of the Act it is provided that a town planning scheme shall not have effect, unless it is approved by an order of the Minister of Health, who may refuse his approval except with such modifications as he thinks fit, & a scheme when so approved shall have effect as if it were enacted in the Act:—Held: upon the true construction of the Act, the person entitled to obtain compensation under sect. 10 is the person whose property, at the date of "the making" of the scheme, that is, when an order has been made by the Minister approving the scheme, & not before, is injuriously affected thereby.—MARKHAM v. DERBY CORPN., [1935] Ch. 320; 104 L. 506a. Improvement scheme—Validity—Particulars of proposed development must be shown.]—An improvement scheme purporting to be made under the provisions of Housing Act, 1925 (c. 14), after providing for the acquisition & clearing of an unhealthy area, proceeded to empower the local authority to sell, lease or otherwise dispose of, as they thought fit, the cleared area or to appropriate or use it for any purpose approved by the Minister of Health. The scheme further provided that if the Minister so required, the local authority should provide a number of dwellings, not exceeding 72, suitable for accommodation of persons of the working classes, on a site either within or without the area, according to a scheme to be approved by the Minister. The scheme had been presented to the Minister with a petition for its confirmation: Held: in order to be a valid improvement scheme within Part II. of the Act, a scheme must, besides providing for the acquisition & clearance of an area, contain particulars of the proposed development of the area, & not confer on the local authority an unrestricted power to sell or lease the cleared area.—R. v. MINISTER OF HEALTH, Ex p. DAVIS, [1929] 1 K. 506c. —— —— Confirmation of unauthorised scheme—Effect of Housing Act, 1925 (c. 14), s. 40 (5).]—Housing Act, 1925 (c. 14), s. 40, which empowers the Minister of Health to make an order confirming, with or without modifications, an improvement scheme made under the Act, & provides that "the order of the Minister when made shall have effect as if enacted in this Act," does not preclude the ct. from calling in question the order of the Minister where the scheme presented to him for confirmation is inconsistent with the provisions of the Act.

The Corpn. of Liverpool submitted to the Minister of Health for confirmation a document under the common seal purporting to be an improvement scheme under Housing Act, 1925 (c. 14), s. 35, in respect of an unhealthy area within the city. The first part of this document, after defining the area proposed to be dealt with, by clause 5, empowered the corpn. in general terms to make & widen & stop up or deviate any street in the area, directed them to appropriate other parts of the land to the erection of dwelling-houses for the working classes, & provided that any lands not required for these purposes might be disposed of as the corpn. might think fit. The second part contained estimates of the cost of acquiring the land & of the lay-out, & stated that there were no surplus lands. The Minister, after holding a public local inquiry, made an order modifying the scheme by providing (inter alia), in lieu of clause 5, that the whole of the lands in the area should, subject to the provision of any necessary streets & approaches, be used for the purposes of rehousing, & confirming the scheme as so modified. The owner of two houses which it was proposed to acquire compulsorily under the scheme on account of their sanitary condition obtained a rule nisi for a writ of certiorari to quash the order of the Minister as being made without jurisdiction, inasmuch as the scheme which the order purported to confirm was not an improvement scheme within the meaning of the Act in respect that (a) it was not accompanied by a lay-out plan & (b) it provided that land within the area might be disposed of as the corpn.

509c. —— Condition as to maximum "selling price"—Validity.]—Pltfs., a local authority, were empowered, under Housing, etc., Act, 1923 (c. 24), & Housing (Financial Provisions) Act, 1924 (c. 35), to assist builders by making grants in respect of working-class houses of a specified character. The grants might be subjected by the local authority to terms & conditions having the approval of the Minister of Health, who would reimburse pltfs. in respect of such grants out of the public funds. Defts., a firm of builders, applied to pltfs. for such assistance in respect of certain houses then under construction, which pltfs. granted, subject to a condition that the selling price or value of each house should not exceed £550. The houses were completed & the subsidies duly paid to defts. Defts. subsequently sold three of the houses for sums exceeding £550. Pltfs. brought an action for repayment of the three sums of £75 paid in respect of such houses. Defts. contending: (1) that the term "selling price" referred to the price at which a house might reasonably be expected to be sold, & that a house having qualified for subsidy on that footing should not subsequently become disqualified by any actual sale at a higher figure; (2) that the condition limiting selling price was void, (a) as being ultra vires pltfs. to impose or the Minister of Health to approve, or (b) for repugnance:—Held: (1) the "selling price" of a house meant the price at which such house was actually sold, as distinct from any previously estimated value; (2) a condition imposed by a local authority limiting the selling price of houses in respect of which assistance is being granted under the Housing, etc., Act, 1923 (c. 24), is one which the local authority has power to impose & the Minister of Health to approve, & is prima facie valid. 524d. Interim development order—Grant of permission to build by council—Certiorari.]—A certiorari will lie to bring up a decision of a local authority to permit development pending the final approval by the Minister of Health of a town-planning scheme. Resolutions had been passed by a rural district council for the preparation of a town-planning scheme, & the scheme was awaiting the approval of the Minister of Health, who had made, under Town Planning Act, 1925 (c. 16), s. 4, an Interim Development Order, under which persons could apply to the council for permission to build, pending the approval of the scheme by the Minister. This permission, if granted, would safeguard the appcts.' right to compensation under sect. 10 of the Town Planning Act, 1925 (c. 16), s. 10, in the event of their property being injuriously affected by the making of the town-planning scheme. An application was made to the council for permission to develop certain premises in the area covered by the proposed town-planning scheme. Objections were invited & considered by the council, who unanimously decided to permit the proposed development, pending the final approval by the Minister of Health of the town-planning scheme:—Held: as the decision of the council to permit the development in question conferred a legal right to compensation in certain events & affected the rights of subjects, it was sufficiently near a judicial decision to be the subject of a writ of certiorari. Where, therefore, one of the councillors voting in favour of the resolution to grant permission to develop, had such an interest in the matter as to disqualify him from taking part or voting, on account of bias, an order nisi for a writ of certiorari to quash the decision of the council was made absolute.—R. v. HENDON RURAL COUNCIL, Ex p. CHORLEY [1933] 2 K. Filling station—Preservation of amenities—Validity of bye-law.]—Purporting to act upon the powers conferred upon them by Petroleum (Consolidation) Act, 1928 (c. 32), s. 11 (1), which, with certain modifications, applies to Scotland, the Corpn. of Glasgow applied to certain areas in the city a set of model bye-laws which had been confirmed by the Scottish Office & approved by the Secretary of State. The areas affected by the bye-laws formed a belt round the centre of the city & covered a surface of 35 square miles. Certain motor traders & suppliers of petroleum, feeling themselves aggrieved by the extent of the area & the restrictions in relation to the filling stations, claimed a decree reducing the bye-laws on the ground that they were ultra vires, unreasonable, & uncertain:—Held: the Act left to the Corpn. the power of determining to what part of their area bye-laws should be made to apply in order to preserve the amenity of the places mentioned in sect. 11; they were the judges of the beauty or picturesque character of the places; & the bye-laws were not ultra vires or unreasonable or uncertain.—ROBERT BAIRD, LTD. v. GLASGOW CORPN., [1936] A. By a resolution passed by the City Council on July 22, 1926, pltfs.' slaughter-house was removed from the register upon the ground that no slaughtering had been done on the premises between Mar. 1924, & July, 1926:—Held: upon the evidence, these premises had throughout the period in question been continuously occupied by pltfs. as a slaughter-house & used as such. The local authority were therefore not entitled under sect. 126 to remove the name from the register, even although there had been a breach of the regulations on the part of pltfs. —WOOLLISCROFT v. STOKE-ON-TRENT CORPN. 584b. Adoption of Acts—Right to poll.]—A meeting of ratepayers was summoned for the p of determining whether the provisions of the Public Libraries Acts should be adopted in defts.' district. A chairman having been chosen, the resolution to adopt the Acts was carried upon a show of hands; a poll was demanded, but the chairman refused to grant it. Defts. declined to put in force the Acts: —Held: the right to demand a poll existed by the common law, & had not been taken away by any of the provisions contained in the Public Libraries Acts, & defts. could not be compelled by mandamus to carry out the Acts.

The question is whether it is not an attribute at common law of all public meetings, that any qualified person may demand a poll, & the meeting may be enlarged so that all persons duly qualified may come in & take part in the decision. Cannot a meeting be adjourned at common law? Both reason & authority show that where a large class of persons exists who are qualified to take part in a meeting, an opportunity ought to be given of summoning them & of allowing them to record their votes (BRETT, L.J.).—R. v. WIMBLEDON LOCAL BOARD (1882), 8 Q. 670a. Claim for betterment.]—Where by the construction of a street within the area of a town planning scheme, which includes among its purposes the execution of street works, any property is increased in value, the responsible authority are entitled, under Town Planning Act, 1925 (c. 16), s. 10 (3), to recover from the owner of the property one-half of the amount of the increase in value, as the authority's claim arises by the coming into operation of a provision contained in the scheme, & therefore "by the making of [a] town planning scheme" within above sub-sect. An authority's claim for betterment under above sub-sect. is not restricted by the fact that the property in respect of which the claim arises is not itself within the area of the scheme, but only contiguous thereto.—R. v. WEBSTER, Ex p. YOUNG (1934), 152 L. On the termination of the franchise, the railway, with its equipment, machinery & other works, passed to resp. comrs. as an organic railway capable of operation in situ. The railway had not been, & could not be made to be, a financial success, but the agreement expressly stipulated that the co. was not to be compensated "in respect of any franchises for holding or operating" the railway:—Held: on the proper construction of the agreement & statute, the compensation should not be fixed (as decided below) at the break-up value of the railway to the comrs. but on the basis of reconstruction cost less depreciation. The arbitrators unanimously came to a preliminary decision that the value of the stock should be determined on the basis of the net earning capacity of the railway, & that principle was accepted by all parties concerned. By a majority the arbitrators held that evidence of the value of the physical assets, whether the selling value or the cost of replacement, was not admissible, & a majority award was made after the exclusion of evidence of that description. It was contended that the cost of replacing the assets was material, among other reasons, because under legislation in the United States, in which about a third of the length of the railway lines was situate, regard was to be had to the aggregate value of railway property in certain groups in fixing maximum rates of freight:—Held: having regard to the principle upon which the value was being ascertained, the excluded evidence was not material or admissible; it was not established that the United States legislation above referred to resulted in there being a relation between the cost of replacement & net earning capacity.—GRAND TRUNK RY. n (p. 252) i. —— —— Powers of Minister.]—The Crown expropriated a certain area for use in the building of the terminal of the Hudson Bay Railway at Churchill & for a port on Hudson Bay. At the date of the taking there were no permanent habitations anywhere in the vicinity save a Hudson Bay Post & Mounted Police Post. The future of Churchill was altogether dependent upon the completion of the work for which the land was taken:—Held: under the Expropriation Act a Minister of the Crown may take any land for the use of His Majesty as he thinks advisable to take, & his decision or judgment that the lands so taken are necessary for a public work is not open to review by the cts. This power or authority does not interfere with the security in the enjoyment of private property, as the Crown must compensate the owner of any lands so taken for the value thereof & all damages resulting from the expropriation. Speculative prices paid by purchasers of real estate in the vicinity, some fifteen years before the expropriation in question, are not a fair criterion of the market value of similar property at the date of the expropriation thereof. By an arrangement between the owner & the tenant, to which the ry. co. was not a party, the arbitrator was asked to treat their claims for compensation as one claim, i.e., as if there were only one person interested therein. The arbitrator accepted as the basis of the valuation of the land its value on the footing that it had been cleared of its business & buildings & was a vacant site available for a factory or some other industry; but nevertheless, in addition to the sum which he awarded the owner, he awarded over $100,000 to the tenant as compensation for the disturbance of its business & for the value of the buildings, equipment, etc.:—Held: the value of the buildings, etc., & compensation for business disturbance could no longer properly enter into the matter, not because the value of the land had been increased by any specific figure representing actually either the value of the buildings or damages for business disturbance; but because an increased value had been attributed to the land upon a hypothesis which is inconsistent with the existence of a claim either for the value of buildings or for damages for business disturbance.—TORONTO TERMINALS RY. ddd i. —— ——.]—Applt. B., as owner, & applt. P. Coals, Ltd., as lessee from her, of a certain quarter section situated in Alberta, presented an application to the Board of Railway Comrs. under sect. 197 of Railway Act, asking the Board to fix the amount of compensation payable to applts. in respect of coal lying under the right of way of resp. railway. The latter alleged that, in 1914, it purchased the right of way from the then owner, predecessor in title of applts., paid him in full for all the coal required to be left for the support of the right of way & that by virtue of the transfer itself, it was entitled to such support:—

231a. —— Occupier becoming owner.]—In 1885 the owners of a farm conveyed a small part of it to a ry. co. & in the conveyance it was agreed that the consideration paid should be taken to be not only the purchase money but also compensation for the accommodation work, including fences, which the ry. co. was otherwise required to make & maintain by Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (c. 20), s. 68. No similar agreement was entered into with pltf.'s father, who at that time was occupier as tenant from year to year, & the ry. co. proceeded to erect fences on either side of the railway & to maintain them. In 1911 pltf.'s father bought the fee simple of the farm. On the father's death in 1932 pltf., who had been occupying the farm with his father, became the sole occupier & soon after had the fee simple conveyed to him by the father's personal representatives. Two sheep belonging to pltf. strayed on to the railway through a gap in a fence & were killed. Pltf. claimed damages & the county ct. judge made an order for £5 damages. On appeal :—Held : there had been no merger of the occupiers' interest with the fee simple on the purchase of the farm & pltf. was, therefore, entitled to damages for the loss of the sheep by reason of the ry. co.'s failure to maintain the fence pursuant to the Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (c. 20), s. 68. —Symons v. Southern Ry. The jury found that the engine whistle was not blown nor was the bell rung, as required by statute; that the absence of these signals caused the accident; & that there was no contributory negligence on the part of pltf. At the close of pltf.'s case deft.'s counsel had moved to have the case withdrawn from the jury on the ground that it was manifest that there had been contributory negligence :—Held : the case should have been taken from the jury on the ground that it was evident from pltf.'s own case that, even if the facts were that deft. had not given the proper warnings, the accident could not have happened but for pltf.'s negligence in remaining on the track.—CONVERSE v. CANADIAN PACIFIC RY. 503a. Claim for compensation—" Determination " by company—What amounts to.]—Pltfs. were transferred to the co.'s employment when it became an amalgamated co. under Railways Act, 1921 (c. 55). In accordance with Sched. 3 to that Act they put forward claims to compensation for loss suffered by reason of the amalgamation. Sched. 3, para. 4, provides that any question whether the provisions of para. 3, dealing with the transfer of existing officers or servants, has been complied with, should be referred to a Standing Arbitrator or board of arbitrators appointed by the Lord Chancellor, & para. 5 provides that claims shall be determined in accordance with Local Government Act, 1888 (c. 41), s. 120, with the necessary modifications. By sub-sect. 4 of that sect., the time for appeal to a Standing Arbitrator is fixed at three months from the date of the determination. The claims were discussed at a meeting held on Apr. 26, 1928, at the co.'s registered office. L., the co.'s assistant general manager, concluded by asserting that the cases of all pltfs. were governed by a decision of the Standing Arbitrator refusing the claim of one B., but no formal letter refusing the claims was sent to pltfs. or their solr. It was subsequently contended on behalf of the railway co. that the co. had given its " determination " of the claims, within Railways Act, 1921 (c. 55), at the meeting of Apr. 26, & that the proposed appeals were out of time. In an action by pltfs. for a declaration that their claims were not determined by the co. on Apr. 26, 1928 within Railways Act, 1921 (c. 55), Sched. 3, para. 5, or at all:—Held: decisions on claims for compensation must be formulated in a definite manner in the name & on behalf of the co. & communicated forthwith to the claimants; & on the facts there had been no such determination.—MACDONALD v. GREAT WESTERN RY. Owing to bluffs & shrubbery intercepting his view, resp. was unable to see down the railway in the direction of the approaching train until he had reached the right-of-way. Resp. had listened for the whistle & looked for smoke. When he reached the right-of way, he took a hurried glance along the track, which did not disclose any danger. He then gave his attention to his automobile as it went up a grade towards the track & did not again look along the track until too late to avoid the accident. In an action for damages, the jury negatived contributory negligence on the part of resp. & he recovered damages:—Held: resp.'s failure under the existing circumstances to make a more careful & complete observation, which would have disclosed the approaching train, did not so incontrovertibly amount to contributory negligence that no jury could reasonably find otherwise.—CANADIAN NATIONAL RYS. v. CLARK, [1923] S. At the crossing there were two sets of gates, traffic gates & wicket gates for pedestrians. At the trial, one of defts.' regulations, which instructed gatekeepers at this class of gate to warn pedestrians of risk & prevent them crossing during operations, was admitted in evidence. The negligence charged against deft. was failure to have a gatekeeper on duty at the gates & failure on the part of the train driver to keep a look out & give warning:- although deft.'s regulation relating to the duty of gatekeepers was admissible in evidence, there was no evidence of negligence in the management & control of the level crossing, but there was evidence upon which the jury were entitled to hold that the accident, despite pltf.'s contributory negligence, was due to the failure of the train driver to keep a sufficient look out.—ALCHIN v. RAILWAYS COMR. 631a. Facilities must arise out of railway traffic.]—The jurisdiction of the Railway & Canal Traffic Commission is limited to questions arising directly or indirectly out of traffic upon a railway. Therefore the Commission refused to entertain an application for improved facilities by the owner of an occupation road which was crossed by a line of railway & interrupted by gates which were said to be kept shut ; & on a summons taken out by resps. the application was dismissed, no evidence being heard, on the ground that laying new track on deft.'s right-of-way. His foot was caught between a rail & a tie & a wheel of the "pioneer" of the work train which was proceeding behind the workmen struck & crushed his leg. The jury found deft. responsible for the injury because of the fault of the brakesman on the "pioneer" in not responding quickly enough in applying the emergency air-brake when sensing the danger. The jury negatived any negligence on pltf.'s part. The evidence as to whether the brakesman applied the emergency brake at all was contradictory :—Held : the jury's finding must be taken to mean that, if the brakesman did apply the brake, he did not do so as quickly as he might & ought to have applied it ; & on the evidence it was open to the jury to so find.—KLAPISCHUK v. CANADIAN PACIFIC RY. 756a. Adjustment of charges to revenue—Railway carrying on subsidiary business—Railways Act, 1921 (c. 55), s. 58.]—In dealing with the subject of dock undertakings belonging to railway cos. the Railway Rates Tribunal accepted the division between "railway" & "dock" set out in the railway cos.' estimates, by which all receipts & expenses in respect of railways, sidings & warehouses, whether they were within the area of a dock or not, were treated as "railway" receipts & expenses, & all receipts & expenses in respect of "docks" other than those entered as "railway" receipts & expenses, were treated as "dock" receipts & expenses :—Held : (1) this division of receipts & expenditure between railways & docks could not be supported, as it involved the exclusion from consideration of charges at dock warehouses or storage spaces where none of the goods stored therein used railways, & all charges in respect of the conveyance on railways in docks in whatever circumstances the rails were laid or charges were made for their use; (2) (BANKES, L.J.) under sect. 58 (4) of the above Act the Tribunal has to take into consideration the different operations which go to make up the business of a dock undertaking, for which operations separate & distinct charges are made; (3) Semble (SCRUTTON, L.J.): warehousing on a dock undertaking goods exported or imported, storing such goods in the open on dock lands, the use of transit sheds, & services such as coopering, are dock & not railway charges.—MANCHESTER SHIP CANAL Co.'s & DOCK & HARBOUR AUTHORITIES ASSOCN.'s APPLICATIONS, [1927] 2 K. a (p. 375) i. —— —— To Dominion railways only.]—The B. C. Co. was incorporated in England & operates in British Columbia under a provincial licence. Under agreement with the C. P. R. Co. it operates by electricity the V. & L. I. Ry., which connects with the C. P. R., & which, in 1901, was leased to the C. P. R. Co. for 999 years, & was declared by Parliament to be a work for the general advantage of Canada. The B. C. Co.'s "Central Park Line" runs from Vancouver to its connection with a branch of the V. & L. I. Ry. & thence over the latter to the latter's terminus at or near New Westminster, from which terminus the B. C. Co.'s "Central Park Line" continues for one mile to a point where it makes physical connection with the Canadian National Ry. The Board of Railway Comrs. for Canada directed the B. C. Co. & the Canadian National Rys. to publish & file, between stations on the V. & L. I. Ry. & points on the Canadian National Rys., "via direct connection between the co.s," joint rates on the same basis as those published between the said V. & L. I. points & stations on the C. P. R. The B. C. Co. appealed against the order on the ground of lack of jurisdiction in the Board to compel it to file joint rates as aforesaid over the said one mile of its line, which, it contended, was subject only to provincial jurisdiction:—Held: the Board had not jurisdiction to make the order.—BRITISH COLUMBIA ELECTRIC RY. ll (p. 375) i. —— —— —— To contribute to cost of works.]—The Board of Railway Comrs. for Canada when making an order for contribution to the costs of works is entitled to have regard to the state of matters existing when the order for contribution is made. If new interests which are affected by the work have arisen since it was originally ordered, the Board can competently order contribution to the cost to be made from such quarters. The test of liability to contribute is not necessarily to be found in the answer to the question whether an order to execute the work could originally have been pronounced against the party sought to be made liable to contribute. Once it is established that a co., municipality or person was within the meaning of the Railway Act "interested in or affected by" the construction of a work, the jurisdiction of the Railway Board under the Act to order it to contribute to the cost of the works is unassailable. The question of the quantum of the contribution is a matter entirely in the discretion of the Board. The Parliament of Canada has jurisdiction to confer on the Board authority to compel such contribution from a corpn. so interested or affected even though it is a provincial corpn.—CANADIAN PACIFIC RY. yy (p. 376) iii. —— —— Wharfage rates.]—The Board of Railway Comrs. for Canada has no power, under Railway Act, R. S. C., 1927, to regulate, no question as to discrimination being involved, as to absorption by a railway co. of wharfage charges in respect of transpacific freight, at the point where the goods are transferred from rail to ship for ocean carriage to the transpacific country. The function of the Board as to tolls & charges is, excepting as to powers conferred by sect. 358 of the Act, limited to regulating charges for carriage & for those other services which are incidental to carriage, as railway services, within the meaning of the Act. The wharfage service in question is not such a service. This would appear to be so independently of, but is put beyond doubt by, sect. 358. The definition of "toll" cannot properly be construed as declaring that any wharfage service is a railway service in the above sense.—Re POWERS TO WHARFAGE CHARGES, [1931] S. C. R. 431.—CAN.

yy (p. 376) iv. —— —— Consideration of other statutes & agreements.]—Sub-sect. (5) of sect. 325 of the Railway Act declares the powers of the Board under the Act to fix & determine just & reasonable rates shall not be limited or in any manner affected by the provisions of any Act of the Parliament of Canada, or by any agreement made or entered into pursuant thereto, save & except as to rates on grain & flour from points west of Fort William to Fort William and Port Arthur. The wording of this sub-sect. should not be construed as a restriction upon the powers of the Board to fix the rates set out in the Order now in question. On the contrary, it seems from the language used that Parliament contemplated that the Board would look at & consider the statutes & agreements relating to rates which had been in force or agreed upon, & desired to make it clear that, with the exception of the Crow's Nest Agreement, the Board was not to be bound by any such statute & agreement. What weight these statutes & agreements shall have is left to the discretion of the Board; &, subject to certain conditions, the obligation rests upon the Board of fixing rates which are "fair & reasonable." In this case, the own conduct of the Canadian National Railways since the Order in question was made has been such as to justify the inference that, in their judgment, the rates were not unfair or unreasonable.—Re BOARD OF RY. Can., 1927, c. 170, the Railway Board has jurisdiction to impose a proportion of the cost of work, which in the exercise of its powers it has ordered to be carried out, only upon a co., municipality, or person interested in or affected by the order. But in determining whether a particular co., municipality or person is so interested or affected the Railway Board can have regard to the circumstances existing not only when the work was ordered but also when it makes its order allocating the cost, or reviews that order under sect. 51 ; further, absence of benefit from the work executed does not necessarily show absence of interest in or affection by the order to carry out the work. In cases in which the Railway Board has jurisdiction the amount of the contribution is within the discretion of the Board. 931a. —— Extent of duty.]—(1) The duty of a railway co. under Regulation of Railways Act, 1873 (c. 48), s. 17, to keep its canals in repair & open for navigation is not an absolute duty, nor, on the other hand, is it limited, as in the case of highway authorities, to acts of misfeasance. It is a duty to take reasonable care.

(2) A railway co. acquired a canal 150 years after it had been constructed. One of the locks collapsed. It was found that the baulks of timber on which the walls rested were laid transversely on the soil which formed the bed of the lock. The proper method would have been to lay the baulks upon vertical piles driven into the ground :—Held : no evidence of negligence on the part of the railway co. that on the appearance of cracks in the walls & subsidence of the soil at the side of the walls they failed to investigate the foundations of the lock, an operation which might have involved the closing of the canal for some months.

(3) In order to found a claim for damages for the closing of a canal, pltf. must show that there has been caused to him thereby peculiar damage greater than that caused to the general public.

(4) An agreement by traders with a railway co., that they would establish a gravel business near a canal of the railway co., & would pay a reduced rate to be afterwards agreed for the transport of gravel by the canal, & would erect machinery at their own expense, in consideration whereof the railway co. would permit the traders to erect machinery & other plant for carrying gravel over the canal & railway, & would repair the canal :—Held : to be void for uncertainty.

978a. —— —— —— Liability of county council on covenant—Tow-path raised to avoid flooding.]—The construction of a canal involved the interception of a certain public road ; & the canal co., in accordance with its statutory obligations, carried the road over the canal by means of a bridge. The canal subsequently became vested in a railway co., who were required under s. 17 of the Regulation of Railways Act, 1873 (c. 48), s. 17, to keep the canal open & navigable. At a later date the railway co. entered into an agreement with the county council having jurisdiction in the locality under which the council agreed to remove the bridge & to construct a new bridge in substitution therefor ; & the council covenanted that they would "from time to time & at all times thereafter well & sufficiently maintain & repair the new bridge & the roadway & footpaths upon the same & the approaches thereto." The agreement provided for a headway of six feet between the arch of the new bridge & the towing-path passing under it. The bridge & the neighbouring part of the canal for considerable distances on both sides of the bridge were in a mining area which had been subsiding for a long time prior to the agreement ; & within sixteen years thereafter, owing to further subsidences, there was a general sinking of the bridge, & the towing-path. As, however, the water level remained the same, the railway co. found it necessary, in order to avoid flooding, to raise the towing-path—the resulting effect being that the headway between the bridge & the towing-path was reduced to four feet six inches, which was insufficient for the convenient working of the canal:—Held: the covenant on the part of defts. to "maintain" the bridge did not impose upon them an obligation to raise the bridge so as to obtain the six feet of clearance for the use of the waterway, even although pltfs. had found it necessary to raise the towing-path.—GREAT WESTERN RY. v. MONMOUTHSHIRE COUNTY COUNCIL (1929), 94 J. e i. —— Closed during trade depression.]—Premises purchased by resps. in 1923 were used by them as a malt-house until the autumn of 1927, when, owing to trade depression, they dismissed their staff & closed the premises indefinitely. The premises were not subsequently utilised by resps. in any way. When the premises were closed the machinery therein was left intact, but none of it could be removed without damaging the building, except a screening cylinder, which would cost more to remove than it was worth. Resps. tried to sell the premises, but failed to do so. The premises as they stood were not capable of use save as a malt-house :—Held : the premises were capable of being used as malting premises at any time, but there had been no beneficial occupation of the premises during the year for which the poor rate was claimed. — OFFALY COUNTY COUNCIL & RIORDAN v. WILLIAMS, [1930] I. furniture. The removal was completed in Apr. 1926, except that a caretaker was left in possession with a few articles of furniture for his use. In Mar. 1927 pltfs. decided to use the premises partly as an elementary school & partly for other purposes. Defts. rated pltfs. in respect of the building for the two periods ending Sept. 30, 1926, & Mar. 31, 1927, & it was admitted that the rate was duly made & confirmed. Pltfs. objected that the rate was invalid, as there was no beneficial occupation by them. Upon their refusing to pay, defts. complained to the justices, who issued a distress warrant, & defts. seized a tramcar belonging to pltfs. Pltfs. did not appeal to quarter sessions, but took proceedings in replevin :—Held : (1) pltfs. were not in beneficial occupation during the relevant period, & were not ratable; (2) the jurisdiction of the justices to grant a distress warrant depended on the question of actual occupation within the parish & not on that of beneficial occupation, & as pltfs. had failed to show that the distress was unlawful, the action of replevin failed.—LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL v. HACKNEY BOROUGH COUNCIL, [1928] 2 K. 115a. —— Levy of rates in stipendiary district by county council.]—9 & 10 Vict. c. lxv. created a stipendiary justice's district. Under the Act the quarter sessions of the county could levy rates on the district in the same manner as was then authorised for making county rates. There were now two county boroughs under the Local Govt. Act, 1888 (c. 41), in the district :—Held : on a question submitted summarily to the ct. under Local Govt. Act, 1888 (c. 4), s. 29, the county council had the power to levy the rates on such part of the stipendiary district as was not included within either of the county boroughs, & the liability of the county boroughs could be redeemed by an adjustment under Local Govt. Act, 1888 (c. 41), s. 32.—Ex p. STAFFORDSHIRE QUARTER SESSIONS (CHAIRMAN) (1889), 54 J. P. 72; 6 T. L. R. 45.

202 i. What amounts to separate occupation — Flats.]—Dwelling-houses, each hitherto occupied as the residence of one family, were divided by structural alterations into separate residences, each consisting either of a flat or of a single apartment. This work was done in some cases by the proprietors of the houses, in other cases by lessees. The flats were then let on yearly leases, & the apartments by the month, the rents covering the exclusive use of the flats or apartments, & the use of hall & staircase, central heating & supply of hot water, occupier's rates, & the services of a caretaker who performed a number of duties in connection with the building :—Held : as the tenants of the flats & apartments were not merely inmates of the houses under the landlords, but were exclusive occupiers of distinct & separate tenements, each flat & each apartment fell to be separately entered in the Roll at a yearly rent or value representing the proportion of the rent paid to the landlord which could fairly be attributed to the occupation of the heritable subjects.—WRIGHT v. GLASGOW ASSESSOR, [1936] S. They imported teas from Ceylon, Java, India, China, & other foreign countries. The teas were brought to the premises in question for blending, sifting, cutting, milling, & packing for export abroad for sale wholesale to the public as tea. No tea went out of the premises until after blending, & no blended teas from the premises were supplied or distributed to any part of the United Kingdom, & no blended teas came into the premises, Apart from the basement, which was used & occupied solely as a tin-box factory, the premises were used (a) as premises for blending, sifting, cutting, milling, & packing teas imported from abroad so as to make the teas suitable for export abroad for sale wholesale to the public as tea; & (b) as premises for exporting abroad for sale to the public as blended tea the tea leaves so blended. There was no finding that wholesale business was carried on on the premises:—Held: the primary purpose of the occupation & use of the premises was a factory purpose, & therefore the premises must be derated.—LIPTON, LTD. v. BURTON, [1932] 1 K. 2261. —— —— —— ——.]—Applts., a firm of seed merchants, owned & occupied a hereditament consisting of a large warehouse, used for cleaning & testing seeds of their own growth for the purposes of sale, & certain subsidiary buildings, including offices, which were admittedly not used for industrial purposes. The hereditament was registered as a factory. A claim that the hereditament was an industrial hereditament was opposed by the Crown on the ground that the premises were primarily occupied & used for the purposes of a retail shop. By a special case stated it was found that all the seeds were sold to customers other than the trade, that orders for the same were received by applts. at their offices, & that the seeds were despatched from the warehouse in fulfilment of such orders. At the hearing in the House of Lords, in answer to a request by the House for further information as to the exact nature of the uses to which the hereditament was put, it was agreed that the seeds were sold in approximately equal quantities to trade customers & to customers other than the trade, that the retail sales were effected either by travellers or by letters addressed to the hereditament or by telephone; that the offices had none of the physical features of a shop, & that the applts. had no accommodation adapted for the purpose of the physical resort of customers:—Held: the hereditament was not primarily occupied & used for the purposes of a retail shop & it was an industrial hereditament.—TOOGOOD & SONS, LTD. v. GREEN, [1932] A. —— —— —— Rag sorters.]—A rag merchant's warehouse was occupied & used, as to one-third of its area, for the grading, blending & sorting of rags, &, as to two-thirds, for the storage of rags (a) awaiting these processes; (b) in the course of preparation; & (c) fully dealt with & ready for despatch to the rag merchant's customers. The rags, after being subjected to the above processes, were sold wholesale to heavy woollen cloth manufacturers for use in the heavy woollen cloth industry, & until so treated were useless for that purpose. The revenue officer objected to the inclusion of these premises in the special list as an industrial hereditament, on the ground that the premises were primarily occupied & used for the purposes of wholesale distributive business or for the purposes of storage:—Held: (1) the hereditament was primarily occupied & used not for the purposes of wholesale distributive business, but for the conversion of the articles which entered the hereditaments into finished & saleable articles by means of the processes to which they were there subjected, & that this was an adaptation for sale; (2) the storage was merely incidental to those processes. 226u. —— —— —— Beer bottling premises.]—Brewers occupied a bottling store in which beer brewed by them elsewhere was matured, carbonated, filtered & bottled, & from which, after the bottles had been corked & labelled, it was distributed to the trade. The beer when it entered the premises was unmarketable, & was converted by processes carried on therein into the commodity known as bottled beer. The hereditament was a factory within Factory & Workshop Acts. The revenue officer objected to the inclusion of the hereditament in the special list as an industrial hereditament under 1928 Act, s. 3, on the ground that it was primarily occupied & used for the purposes of distributive wholesale business within exception (c) in sect. 3 (1):—Held: the treatment to which the beer was subjected in the hereditament was not a mere prelude to distribution, but changed the liquid from an unfinished article to a finished one, namely, bottled beer, which was not ready for distribution until the bottles had been corked & labelled, & the hereditament did not fall within the exception & was therefore an industrial hereditament.—SEDGWICK (CAMBERWELL REVENUE OFFICER) v. CAMBERWELL ASSESSMENT COMMITTEE & WATNEY, COMBE, REID & Co., [1931] A. 226v. —— —— —— Chain cable testing establishment.]—Resps. occupied & used a testing establishment for the purpose of carrying on the business of testing & finishing cables & anchors under a licence from the Board of Trade, pursuant to the Anchors & Chain Cables Act, 1899, & they gave certificates in respect of the cables & anchors which had passed the tests. The Act of 1899 prohibited the sale in this country of anchors & cables which had not been proved according to its provisions. The hereditament was admitted to be a factory within Factory & Workshop Acts. The processes employed involved the manufacture & replacement of faulty links in cables or faulty parts in anchors, & the scaling, tarring & finishing of cables & anchors before delivery to the ultimate consignees. The revenue officer objected to the inclusion of the hereditament in the special list as an industrial hereditament on the ground that it was primarily occupied & used for purposes which were not those of a factory or workshop within exception (f) in 1928 Act, s. 3 (1):—Held: the hereditament was primarily occupied & used for the purpose of testing operations, which were not factory purposes, & fell within the exception.—GROVE (DUDLEY REVENUE OFFICER) v. LLOYD'S BRITISH TESTING CO., LTD., [1931] A. Retail shop on same premises.]—Resps. were the occupiers of a hereditament entered by the assessment committee in the special list & therein apportioned as to £59 industrial user & as to £146 non-industrial user. The revenue officer appealed against the inclusion of the hereditament in the special list on the ground (inter alia) that it was primarily occupied & used for the purposes of a retail shop. The hereditament consisted of a three-storied building which was in the sole occupation of resps., who were bespoke tailors & outfitters. They also owned a retail shop for the sale of shirts, collars, socks, hats & ties on the same premises in which the manufacture of clothes was carried on. The hereditament was registered as a workshop:—Held: as a matter of law the hereditament could not be dissected as being occupied & used partly as a retail shop but mainly as a workshop. The business conducted on the hereditament was a unified business & the workshop must be treated as ancillary to the trade or business of a retail shop.—(TAUNTON REVENUE OFFICER) v. DONOVAN [1932] 1 K. 226aa. —— —— —— Processes carried out on premises.]—A firm of cleaners & dyers were in occupation under a lease for years of a hereditament situated in a busy shopping street in a London suburb. The hereditament, which had the external appearance of a shop, consisted of three floors, there being five rooms on the ground floor, two on the first floor, & two on the second floor. One of the rooms on the ground floor was entered from the street & had a counter for receiving & despatching goods; another room on that floor which faced the street & had a plate-glass window contained a plant for cleaning & drying articles; all the other rooms on the ground & first floors were used for purposes connected with the work of cleaning & dyeing, & the rooms on the second floor were unused. The firm dealt direct with members of the public & did not work for any other firm. Articles received for cleaning were brought to the hereditament by customers & by the firm's vanmen, who collected from two receiving offices maintained by the firm, & from an agency, & from customers' houses in response to orders received by post or telephone. Not more than one-third of the articles received at the hereditament was brought there by the customers themselves. Most of the articles brought by the customers to the hereditament were, after cleaning, delivered to the customers by the firm's vanmen:—Held: the proper legal inference from these facts was that the hereditament as a whole was primarily occupied & used for the purposes of a "retail shop"; &, accordingly, it was a retail shop & therefore not an industrial hereditament, & was not derateable. The question whether or not upon the ascertained facts the purposes for which a hereditament is used & occupied are those of a "retail shop," as defined for the purposes of Rating & Valuation (Apportionment) Act, 1928 (c. 44); by sect. 3 (4), thereof, is a question of law & not of fact.—RITZ CLEANERS, LTD. v. WEST MIDDLESEX ASSESSMENT COMMITTEE, [1937] 2 K. 226bb. —— —— —— Newspaper offices & printing works—Apportionment of editorial & advertising rooms.]—Printing offices & works in which a newspaper was composed, printed & published, were included in the special list under 1928 Act as an industrial hereditament, & an apportionment was made of the net annual value of the hereditament according as its various parts were used for industrial or non-industrial purposes:—Held: (1) the hereditament was properly included in the special list as an industrial hereditament, as the composing, printing, & publishing of a newspaper was the making of an article & the adapting for sale of an article within Factory & Workshop Act, 1901 (c. 22), s. 149, & therefore the hereditament came within the definition of a non-textile factory, the primary purpose for which the hereditament was occupied & used being an industrial purpose; (2) the annual value of the hereditament must be apportioned according to the occupation & use thereof for industrial purposes, & the occupation & use for other purposes; those portions of the premises which were occupied & used for printing, composing, engraving, publishing & circulating were used for industrial purposes & entitled to be derated, but that those portions of the premises which were occupied & used for the editorial department, general administrative offices & clerical staff, advertising department, stationery counter, & returns store were used for non-industrial purposes & not entitled to be derated.—CARDIFF REVENUE OFFICER v. CARDIFF ASSESSMENT COMMITTEE & WESTERN MAIL, LTD., CARDIFF REVENUE OFFICER v. CARDIFF ASSESSMENT COMMITTEE & DAVID DUNCAN & SONS, LTD., WESTMINSTER REVENUE OFFICER v. DAILY MIRROR NEWSPAPERS, LTD., [1931] 1 K. 226cc. —— —— —— Printing works with shop.]—Applt. occupied an hereditament consisting of a printer's works & shop, which did not form a large part of the business, but in which some orders for printing work were received. All the printing work was done in fulfilment & not in expectation of orders. A newspaper was printed on the premises. The premises had until Jan. 1934, been rated largely as an industrial hereditament, but the assessment committee then altered the rating to general. Quarter sessions held on appeal that this was an industrial hereditament. The assessment committee appealed:—Held: the hereditament was industrial, for it was primarily occupied & used as a factory, for the purpose of doing work & labour in accordance with orders given by customers, & the handing over of & receiving payment for the work did not make the premises a retail shop.—MCGOWAN v. OSGOLDCROSS ASSESSMENT COMMITTEE, WEST RIDING OF YORKSHIRE, [1936] 2 All E. 226dd. —— —— —— Wholesale dairy.]—Resps., who were wholesale dairymen, occupied & used certain premises for carrying out the processes of cleaning & pasteurising milk & of cheesemaking. The milk, after cleaning & pasteurisation, & the cheese after ripening, were sent to the respondents' selling centres. The assessment committee found that the premises were an industrial hereditament & were entitled to be derated:—Held: as the question was one of fact, & as there was no evidence on which the conclusion of the assessment committee could be varied, their decision must be affirmed.—CARMARTHEN REVENUE OFFICER v. UNITED DAIRIES (WHOLESALE), LTD. 226ee. ——Meaning of "contiguous."]—The only point decided in this case which was remitted to sessions for further consideration of other points was that a hereditament in the occupation of the resps. was not "contiguous" to another 235 yards away, & that Quarter Sessions was wrong in law in holding that it was contiguous so as to be treated as forming one hereditament with the other premises for purposes of de-rating.—SOUTHWARK REVENUE OFFICER v. HOE (R.) & Co., LTD. 226ff. —— ——.]—The word "contiguous" must be construed in its ordinary & proper sense as meaning "touching," & not in its loose sense as meaning "neighbouring."

In five cases properties in the same occupation as the main industrial hereditaments were alleged to be part of the main industrial hereditament as being contiguous thereto. The distance in a direct line between the two properties sought to be treated as part of a single hereditament varied from 20 yards to 60 yards. In one case the properties were only separated by a public thoroughfare, but in that case the property sought to be added was used as a stable. In the other four cases the properties were separated by other properties in different ownership:—Held: the two properties in four of the cases were not contiguous to each other & therefore could not be treated as parts of a single hereditament within sect. 3 (3), & in the fifth case, inasmuch as the property sought to be added was used as a stable, & therefore, under sect. 3 (2), was to be deemed not to form part of the factory or workshop, it could not therefore be one of the properties which "are used as parts of a single . . . factory" within sect. 3 (3).—SPILLERS, LTD. v. CARDIFF ASSESSMENT COMMITTEE & PRITCHARD (CARDIFF REVENUE OFFICER), PIERCE (WIRRAL REVENUE OFFICER) v. WIRRAL ASSESSMENT COMMITTEE & SPILLERS, LTD., PINSENT (PLYMOUTH REVENUE OFFICER) v. PLYMOUTH ASSESSMENT COMMITTEE & OCTAGON BREWERY CO., BLUNT (WEST DERBY REVENUE OFFICER) v. WEST DERBY ASSESSMENT COMMITTEE & TATE & LYLE, LTD., [1931] 2 K. Freight-transport hereditament—Particular instances.]—(1) Certain bonded warehouses near the port of Liverpool were used for the storage of tobacco, wine & sugar passing through the port, & the bulk of these goods was stored for a very substantial time:—Held: on the facts the warehouses were primarily used for warehousing merchandise not in the course of transport & were not subjects for derating.

(2) A wool warehouse not actually connected with any particular dock & not a bonded warehouse was used as a storage place for wool conveyed thereto by the Dock Authority at the charge of the consignee to be sold at the regular wool sales:—Held: the warehouse was not used for transport purposes, but as a place for preparing goods for sale, & was not entitled to be derated.

(3) Three grain warehouses had as their special feature an elevator by which grain was discharged from ships, barges or carts into the warehouse, & when sold, moved out again into sea or land vehicles. 226kk. —— Railway—Transfer of benefit to public—Who entitled—General engineering works.]—The mischief which the Railway Freight Rebate Scheme is designed to cure is a mischief in respect of iron & steel works, not a mischief in respect of general engineering works. Therefore, when a general engineering works consists of four departments, one of which falls within the definition of "iron & steel works" in Local Government Act, 1929 (c. 17), Sched. XI., Part I., para. 17, it cannot for the purpose of the above scheme be considered as four separate works, but must be regarded as a whole, & a general engineering works is not an iron & steel works.—CENTRAL MARINE ENGINE WORKS v. AMALGAMATED RY. The goods were brought to the hereditaments from the ocean-going steamers in insulated barges, on delivery into which the liability of the shipowners ceased. The goods were sorted to marks in the hereditaments. In one of these 17½ per cent. of the goods were delivered out immediately after sorting, while of the balance of 82½ per cent. part did not remain in the hereditament longer than twenty-eight days, & part remained for a longer period. In the other hereditament 12 per cent. were delivered out immediately after sorting, the balance remaining for a period up to twenty-eight days or longer. Each hereditament had, besides its refrigerating chambers & machinery, a crane for the unshipping of goods, a non-insulated reception front & a non-insulated delivery front. On a claim by applt. co. for the derating of the hereditaments:—Held: (1) the hereditaments, so far as regarded the refrigerating machinery & chambers, were "primarily occupied & used for warehousing merchandise not in the course of being transported," & therefore were not entitled to be derated; (2) the crane, non-insulated reception front & non-insulated delivery front were primarily used for dock purposes, & were entitled to be derated; & therefore (3) the value of the hereditaments for derating purposes must be apportioned, the apportionment being between the value of the refrigerating chambers, etc., which were not the subject of derating, on the one hand, & the value of the crane, non-insulated reception & delivery fronts, which were the subject of derating, on the other hand.

Per SCRUTTON, L.J.: The primary use of refrigerating chambers is to store goods not being transported, rather than, like barges, to serve as a means of transport.—UNION COLD STORAGE CO. v. MOON, [1932] 2 K. B. 648; 101 L. J. K. B. 791; 147 L. T. 487; 96 J. P. 432; 30 L. G. R. 433, C. A.

226tt. —— Premises forming part of industrial undertaking.]—Resps. were the occupiers of a hereditament, consisting of storage bins, offices & premises, which adjoined premises occupied by manufacturers of fertilisers & artificial manures. By a lease of resps.' premises granted to them by the manufacturers, resps. were given rights of way between their premises & the highway to Barking. Resps.' premises were separated from the water front by the manufacturers' premises, which consisted (inter alia) of a wharf, in addition to their factory & plant for the manufacture of fertilisers. In terms of an agreement between resps. & the manufacturers, the latter erected upon their premises & up to the distribution centre of resps., a conveyor, from which loading of materials held by the storage bins could be carried out into road transport vehicles. The goods landed at the wharf for transfer to resps.' premises during one year constituted a considerable part of the total goods landed at such wharf. Resps. maintained that their premises were part of a dock undertaking, & were used wholly for docking purposes, whereof a substantial portion of the volume of business related to shipping & unshipping of merchandise not belonging to, or intended for the use of, the undertakers, the manufacturers, & that the hereditament ought to be entered & distinguished in the valuation list as a freight transport hereditament:—Held: as the undertaking carried on by the manufacturers was an industrial undertaking, & not a dock undertaking, there was no dock undertaking of which resps.' undertaking could form part, &, therefore, resps.' premises ought not to be entered or distinguished in the valuation list as a freight transport hereditament.—SOUTHERN ESSEX ASSESSMENT COMMITTEE v. BETTY & TOM, LTD., [1937] 1 All E. h i. —— ——.]—Christ College Trust, as the owner of certain lands & buildings in Hobart, was rated by the municipal council in respect of such buildings which were used as a public boys' school. All pupils, with unimportant exceptions, were liable to pay fees. The fees received were considerably less than the expense of the school. The deficiency was made good from income derived from capital invested in trust for the school. Under the trust deed by which the school was established, & Christ College Acts, 1926, no member of the board of management could derive any profit from the school:—Held: even if the school were used for charitable purposes it was not used solely for such purposes, in that the compulsory payment of fees by pupils made the institution a business; &, the words "charitable purposes" should be construed ejusdem generis with hospital & benevolent society, & not in their technical sense.—CHRIST COLLEGE TRUST v. HOBART CORPN., 22 Tas. The nuns appealed in respect of the convent. Of the 43 nuns residing in the convent, 14 were allocated to manage an Industrial School; the remaining 29 attended to the management of the Asylum & the laundry. There was no evidence as to the number of nuns exclusively engaged in working the laundry. The produce of the land went to the support of the nuns & the penitents in the Magdalen Asylum:—Held: the convent was not used exclusively for charitable purposes, since it accommodated not only those nuns who were engaged exclusively in charitable work, but also those who were engaged in working the laundry, & therefore it was not exempt from rateability.—GOOD SHEPHERD NUNS v. COMR. For, under 12 Geo. 2, c. 29, the county rate was to be paid out of the poor rate of the several parishes, & was therefore a parochial tax.—R. v. AYLESBURY WITH WALTON INHABITANTS (1846), 9 Q. 448a. ——.]—A drill hall erected by a county Territorial Army Assocn. for the use of a local coy. of that army was regularly used for the ordinary military purposes for which it was provided. The hall was, however, also used each Saturday night during the winter for dances organised by the officer commanding the co., to which members of the coy. with their wives & fiancées were admitted free & the public on payment of 6*d.* each, & the profit after payment of expenses was distributed for the benefit of the members of the co. or their dependants, the purpose of the dances being to keep the men of the co. together during the winter & to stimulate recruiting. It was contended by the rating authority that the above statutory provision should be construed as if, in accordance with the previous state of the law, the word "exclusively" was inserted therein immediately before the word "occupied," or at least as if the word "where" at the beginning of the provision meant "in so far as" or "to the extent to which," & that in view of the user of the hall for the dances it came, consistently with one or other of these respective constructions, either not at all or not entirely within that provision & was therefore either wholly or partially rateable:—Held: the provision must be construed according to the natural meaning of its words without regard to the previous state of the law, none of the constructions contended for could be supported, & the hall came wholly within the provision; even if one or other of the proposed constructions was the true construction, the hall was in the circumstances exclusively occupied on behalf of the Crown for public purposes & would come within the provision; & consequently the hall was entirely exempt from rates.—DERBY (TERRITORIAL ARMY ASSOCIATION) v. DERBY (SOUTH EASTERN AREA) ASSESSMENT COMMITTEE, [1935] 2 K. Two thousand acres he let to tenant farmers reserving to himself the sporting rights ; 700 acres of the remainder was waste land & he farmed 300 acres himself. He let the sporting rights over the whole 3,000 acres to B., under an agreement contained in correspondence between them. There was no grant by deed. Applt. was rated separately on the sporting rights so let & appealed from an order of the justices directing the issue of a distress warrant in respect of those rates :—Held : applt. was not rateable in respect of the sporting rights as there was no legal severance of the right from the occupation of the land. —TOWLER v. THETFORD RURAL COUNCIL (1929), 99 L. 552c. —— Sporting rights reserved.]—A farm was let to a tenant under an agreement in writing, not under seal. The agreement contained a clause reserving to the owner the sporting rights over the agricultural land. The owner refused to pay the rates in respect of the sporting rights so reserved. An application for a distress warrant was refused by the justices on the ground that there had been no severance of the sporting rights from the occupation of the land within Rating Act, 1874 (c. 54) :—Held : a grant of sporting rights over land could be validly made only by a deed under seal, but where the owner of the land, by an agreement in writing, not under seal, let the land, &, by the same document, reserved to himself the sporting rights, there was in fact a severance of the sporting rights from the occupation of the land within Rating Act, 1874 (c. 54), s. 6, & the owner was rateable in respect of those rights under sect. 6 (3).—CLEOBURY MORTIMER RURAL DISTRICT COUNCIL v. CHILDE, [1933] 2 K. stock market was established, & for some time afterwards held upon every fourth Tuesday. From 1793 to 1856 a stock & cattle market was held on every alternate Tuesday in the main street of Ashford, the lord of the manor & the inhabitants receiving certain payments for the use of such pens as either of them supplied respectively, but no tolls appeared to have been levied upon animals sold at the market. After many mesne assignments, in 1856 applt.'s lessors, incorporated as a limited co., obtained a conveyance in fee of a piece of land in the manor, & " all the tolls, stallages, dues, profits, or emoluments whatsoever arising from all markets & fairs held in the said town of Ashford," except the meat, fish, & vegetable market. In 1874 applt. hired from the co., at a fixed annual rent, certain fixed tolls of the cattle market, the lands belonging thereto, & the fairs & other perquisites. The land occupied by the market is fenced in, & kept locked when not used for market or other purposes. Some pens in the market are appropriated to particular owners & salesmen, & others are free for any animals in the market. All animals, however, pay toll for admittance to the market :—Held : upon a case stated, that the tolls for admittance to the market were incident to the soil so as to be taken into consideration as increasing the value of the occupation, & were not mere market tolls which could not be rated.—PERCY v. ASHFORD UNION (1876), 34 L. 675a. House let out in apartments or lodgings—Representation of the People Act, 1867 (c. 102), s. 7.]—By Representation of the People Act, 1867 (30 & 31 Vict. c. 102), s. 7, where the owner is rated at the passing of this Act to the poor rate in respect of a dwelling-house situate in a parish wholly or partly within a parliamentary borough, instead of the occupier, his liability to be rated for the future shall cease ; & after the passing of this Act no owner of any dwelling-house so situate shall be rated to the poor rate instead of the occupier, except as hereinafter mentioned. . . . When the dwelling-house shall be wholly let out in apartments or lodgings, not separately rated, the owner of such dwelling-house shall be rated to the poor rate.

Applt. & five other persons each occupied a room in a six-roomed dwelling-house in a parish within a parliamentary borough, & had the use in common of the street door, passage, staircase & domestic conveniences ; the owner did not occupy any part of the premises, nor retain any control over the tenants, each of whom had the exclusive possession of his own room. At the time of the passing of above Act the owner was rated in respect of the whole house, instead of the occupiers, by virtue of Small Tenements Act, 1850 (c. 99). After the passing of above Act, the overseers of the parish made a rate, in which each of the six occupiers was separately rated :—Held : the owner of the house, & not the several occupiers, was rateable : for that the house came within the exception in sect. 7.—STAMPER v. SUNDERLAND OVERSEERS (1868), L. 675b. —— ——.]—Resp. was rated & assessed to a general rate in respect of a house which was situate in the parish of H., which was, at the date of the passing of Representation of the People Act, 1867 (c. 102), & had ever since been, situate in a parliamentary borough. Resp. did not occupy or reside in or exercise any supervision or control over the house, which was a private dwelling-house consisting of a basement, a ground floor & two other floors, & was let by resp. to, & was occupied by, three tenants. The rateable value of each of the tenements was under £20. Each tenant had a separate letting & a separate key, & had the exclusive use & occupation of the rooms let to him or her. On an appln. for a distress warrant against resp., it was contended on behalf of applt. that the borough council were entitled to rate resp. under Representation of the People Act, 1867 (c. 102), s. 7, inasmuch as the house was wholly let out in apartments or lodgings not separately rated. It was contended on behalf of resp. that the house was not wholly let out in apartments or lodgings not separately rated within the meaning of that section, & that the demand was bad, as no allowance, abatement or deduction had been made to resp. under Poor Rate Assessment & Collection Act, 1869 (c. 41). The justices were of opinion that the house was not in point of law a dwelling-house wholly let out in apartments or lodgings within the meaning of sect. 7, & they dismissed the summons:—Held: on the authority of Stamper v. Sunderland Overseers, No. 675a, ante, the council were entitled to rate resp. under sect. 7 of the Act of 1867, & the appeal must be allowed.—Griggs v. Stevens (1909), 101 L. The tenement was wholly let out in apartments or lodgings not separately rated within Representation of the People Act, 1867 (c. 102), s. 7. Purporting to act under that sect., the rating authority rated resp. as owner, instead of the occupiers of the tenement, without allowing him any commission, abatement or deduction:—Held: the Act under which resp. was rateable as owner instead of the occupiers was not Representation of the People Act, 1867 (c. 102), but was Poor Rate Assessment & Collection Act, 1869 (c. 41), & he was entitled to the commission, abatement or deduction specified in sect. 3 or sect. 4 of the later Act.—Davis v. Wallis, [1908] 2 K. The tenements were wholly let out in apartments or lodgings not separately rated within Representation of the People Act, 1867 (c. 102), s. 7. Purporting to act under that sect., the rating authority rated applts. as owners, instead of the occupiers of the tenements, without allowing them any commission, abatement or reduction:—Held: applts. were properly rated as owners, instead of the occupiers, under Representation of the People Act, 1867 (c. 102), s. 7, & were, therefore, not entitled to any commission, abatement or reduction from the amount of the rate. That portion of Representation of the People Act, 1867 (c. 102), s. 7, which provides for the rating of owners of houses wholly let out in apartments or lodgings not separately rated has not been repealed by implication by Poor Rate Assessment & Collection Act, 1869 (c. 41), or otherwise.—White & Hales v. Islington Corpn., [1909] 1 K. The local govt. auditor at his audit made a surcharge on the rate collector in respect of the amount of these abatements:—Held: the words "all boroughs" in Representation of the People Act, 1867 (c. 102), s. 7, extended to all boroughs which had since the passing of that Act become parliamentary boroughs, & were not limited to boroughs which were in existence as parliamentary boroughs at the date of its passing; the owners ought to have been rated under that sect. & were therefore not entitled to any commission, abatement or deduction from the amount of the rate; & the surcharge was, therefore, rightly made by the auditor.—R. v. Roberts, [1914] 1 K. At the material time there remained in the mill machinery & plant of the classes mentioned in sect. 24 (1) (a) of 1925 Act (which for convenience was described as "motive machinery & plant"). There were also certain fixed machines & loose chattels falling within sect. 24 (1) (b) (called for convenience "process machinery & plant"):—Held : the co. were not rateable as the occupiers of premises used as a warehouse for the process machinery, on the grounds (a) that by sect. 24 (1) (b), no account is to be taken of the value of such plant or machinery; (2) the Act applies to hereditaments whether in active operation or out of work.

800a i. Railways (Valuation for Rating) Act, 1930 (c. 24)—Exclusion of ferry.]—L. & N. E. Ry. Co. in which, as successor of the North British Ry. Co., the rights of ferry across the Forth at Queensferry were vested by statute, entered into an agreement with a firm of shipbuilders, under which the latter obtained the sole & exclusive right to work the ferry, & also to use certain piers in connection therewith, for a period of ten years. Under the agreement the shipbuilders provided the vessels & the staff at the piers, & fixed, collected, & retained the tolls & charges, except that they were bound, in the event of the revenue from the ferry exceeding a certain sum, to pay a proportion of the excess to the ry. co.; & they relieved the ry. co. of all obligations & liability in connection with the working of the ferry. They were, further, entitled to assign their rights under the agreement or to sublet:—Held : the agreement constituted a lease of the ferry & was not a mere grant of a right to work the ferry, & accordingly, the ferry was excluded from the undertaking of the ry. co., under Railways (Valuation for Rating) Act, 1930 (c. 24), s. 22 (9).—London & North Eastern Ry. 800a iii. —— Method of assessment.]—The Assessor of Railways & Canals, in valuing for the first time under sect. 22 of Railways (Valuation for Rating) Act, 1930, the heritable subjects in Scotland belonging to the L.M.S. & L.N.E.R., adopted the following method. Taking in each case the average Scottish net receipts as certified by the Anglo-Scottish Railways Assessment Authority, he deducted for interest on tenant's capital a sum of 5 per cent. of such capital, & of the balance he assigned 40 per cent. to the tenants for tenant's profits & risks, & 60 per cent. to the landlord. He fixed the valuation at the latter figure, bringing out a valuation for the L.M.S. of £940,005 as against the preceding year's valuation of £717,243, & for the L.N.E.R. a valuation of £628,898 as against one of £436,979. The method of valuation adopted by the Assessor was the method he had applied in the case of a number of public utility cos., except that, instead of the ordinary deduction of 20 per cent. for tenant's profits & risks, he deducted, in the case of the railway cos., 4 per cent. having regard to their financial position at the time. The ct. approved in principle of the

They are sums part of which may be properly regarded as paid in restoration of losses on capital account, & the fact that they may also be applied for revenue purposes is not enough to justify the conclusion that the entire funds are in their nature revenue. The words " set aside out of revenue " in Railways (Valuation for Rating) Act, 1930, s. 4 (3), mean placed to a revenue account in the accounts kept under Railway Accounts Act, 1911.—LONDON, MIDLAND & SCOTTISH RY. 800b. —— —— Bridge maintained by bridge company—Cost of upkeep.]—The building of the Forth Bridge by the Forth Bridge Ry. Co. was authorised by the Forth Bridge Acts, 1878–1882. By sect. 16 of the 1882 Act, the works authorised are for all purposes whatsoever the undertaking of the Forth Bridge Co., & by sect. 38 the London & North Eastern Ry. Co. are forever to maintain & work the railway (i.e. carried by the bridge) with the same powers & obligations as if it formed part of the London & North Eastern Railway system, while the Forth Bridge Co. are to maintain & repair the structure of the bridge carrying the railway. In pursuance of these Acts the London & North Eastern Ry. Co. take all the traffic receipts of the Forth Bridge, but hand over to the Forth Bridge Co. the interest on the capital subscribed for building the bridge & the cost of maintaining the structure. Nevertheless, for the purpose of the Railways (Valuation for Rating) Act, 1930 (c. 24), the Forth Bridge is part of the London & North Eastern Railway undertaking, & the expense of maintaining the structure, though not in fact included in the Statutory Account No. 10, on which the valuation is required to be based, ought to have been so included, & was properly included by the Joint Assessment Authority in their ascertainment of the net railway revenue of the London & North Eastern Co.—FIFE & WEST LOTHIAN COUNTY COUNCILS v. LONDON & NORTH EASTERN RY. 800c. —— Railway hereditaments.]—Held: (1) notwithstanding the provisions of Railways (Valuation for Rating) Act, 1930 (c. 24), s. 4 (2), the method known as the profits basis was still to be applied in assessing the rateable value of railway hereditaments. That method consists of ascertaining three factors, namely, (a) the estimated capital value of the plant & implements required by the tenant; (b) the percentage to be allowed to the tenant on his capital as remuneration; & (c) the net receipts from the undertaking. By dividing the first factor by the second, & subtracting the result from the third, a figure is obtained which is to be deemed to be the net annual value of the ry. co.'s undertaking; (2) in estimating for the purposes of the above calculation the value of the ry. co.'s rolling stock, a deduction must be made for depreciation of each item since its last reconditioning & a further deduction for depreciation due to obsolescence of the type, but no addition may be made for the profit which a manufacturer would have charged the hypothetical tenant for manufacturing each item of plant. Each such item must be taken into account at its actual cost to the ry. co., since the only conceivable tenant is the ry. co. itself.—Re SOUTHERN RY. CO. APPEALS (1935), 152 L. T. 299; 51 T. L. The construction of the roadway was a condition imposed on the co. by the statute empowering the co. to construct the bridge. The question raised was whether the roadway formed a "railway hereditament" or part of a "railway hereditament" within Railways (Valuation for Rating) Act, 1930 (c. 24), s. 1 (3):—Held: as the railway co. was given statutory authority to construct the bridge only on condition that the co. also constructed & maintained the toll-bearing road deck, it followed that the maintenance & the carrying on of the road deck was either an incidental & necessary part of the co.'s principal undertaking, or was an undertaking subsidiary or ancillary to its principal undertaking; on either view, therefore, the road deck was a hereditament occupied for the purpose of the co.'s undertaking & was thus a railway hereditament within sect. 1 (3) of the Act of 1930.—NEWCASTLE-UPON-TYNE & GATESHEAD CORPN. v. RAILWAY ASSESSMENT AUTHORITY & LONDON & NORTH EASTERN RY. 800k. —— Adjustment after appeal—Jurisdiction of Railway Assessment Authority.]—In terms of the Railways (Valuation for Rating) Act, 1930 (c. 24), the Railway Assessment Authority in July, 1933, settled the draft valuation roll as affecting the Southern Railway Co., & the total rateable value of the whole undertaking was shown to be £2,225,000, part of which, relating to Southampton Dock, was assessed at £101,520. After the draft roll had been settled, notice thereof was given to various persons, including the rating authority of Southampton. Thereupon the Southampton rating authority, in terms of the Act of 1930, made a representation objecting to the apportionment relating to Southampton Dock, on the ground that it was insufficient, as full regard had not been paid to all material considerations, including the net receipts derived from the hereditament, & the relative value of the land & buildings then occupied, & that it was therefore less than a fair apportionment. After considering the representation, the Railway Assessment Authority decided that effect ought not to be given to it. Meanwhile, as a result of an appeal to the Railway & Canal Commission, followed by an appeal to the House of Lords, the rateable value of the whole undertaking, being the cumulo in the draft valuation roll, had been reduced to £2,180,000, with consequential reductions in the various parts of the whole undertaking, including a reduction, as regards the Southampton Dock, from £101,520 to to £100,000. On Apr. 27, 1934, the draft valuation roll was completed by the Railway Assessment Authority, in pursuance of the provisions of the third schedule of the statute, notice whereof was given by the Authority on May 1, 1934, to all interested parties, including the Southampton rating authority,

&, at the same time, attention was particularly directed to the right of appeal, under sect. 9 of the Act of 1930, within two months after completion of the railway valuation roll, to the Railway & Canal Comrs. against an incorrect determination of the net annual or rateable value of any railway hereditament. The Southampton rating authority did not appeal. Later, the rateable value of the whole undertaking was reduced by the Railway & Canal Commission to £1,077,131 & the Comrs. made an order under the Act, directing the Railway Assessment Authority to make the necessary adjustment, which was, on appeal, confirmed by the House of Lords, & became operative within the time limited by sect. 10 of the Act. Thereupon the Railway Assessment Authority inserted the new aggregate sum in the roll, & made proportionate deductions in the case of each constituent undertaking, &, by that time, the period for making representations under the Act had elapsed. A revision was now sought of the apportionment in respect of Southampton Dock:—Held: the duty of the Railway Assessment Authority was properly performed, without any excess of jurisdiction, & the Act did not provide, in the circumstances, for a reiteration of the objections made by the local rating authority without success in 1933.—R. v. RAILWAY ASSESSMENT AUTHORITY, Ex p. SOUTHAMPTON CORPN., [1937] 1 All E. 903a. —— ——.]—By sect. 111 of the Manchester Corpn. Waterworks Act, 1847, the corpn. were authorised to levy a domestic water rate on occupiers of property in the city & a public water rate on owners of such property. A poor rate was made in respect of a hereditament consisting of part of the aqueduct from T. to M. in the township of L. The method of assessment adopted by the corpn. & the assessment committee was that approved by the House of Lords in Kingston Union v. Metropolitan Water Board, No. 901, the profits basis system. For the relevant year the revenue of the corpn. in respect of their water undertaking was £755,043 5*s.* 8*d.*, including £79,099 13*s.* 11*d.*, the amount collected in respect of the public water rate. After deducting the expenditure of carrying on the undertaking there remained a balance of £462,335 4*s.* 2*d.*, &, out of this, provision was made (i) for payment of interest & dividends; (ii) for sinking fund in respect of the moneys borrowed by the corpn. under the statutory powers for their water undertaking, including sums to meet expenditure on the construction of works, none of which were completed or occupied or brought into use until after the period for which this rate was made; & (iii) for the promotion of the Bill for the Manchester Corpn. Act, 1919, by which the corpn. were empowered to make & maintain further reservoirs at H. & other works, the construction of no part of which had been commenced The sum which had to be provided in the following year for debt charges in respect of moneys borrowed for the last-mentioned purposes amounted to £114,674, but there was no earmarking of the proceeds of the public water rate against this sum. The assessment committee, for the purposes of their valuation of this hereditament, included the whole of the sum of £79,099 13*s.* 11*d.*, the proceeds of the public water rate, in the gross revenue of the corpn.'s water undertaking & made no deduction in respect of debt charges:—Held: this sum should be excluded. But for the fact that the landlords' charges were included in the account there would have been no need for the hypothetical tenant to raise this public water rate or any part of it. The sum raised by the public water rate was part of a larger sum provided to meet debt charges in respect of money borrowed by the corpn. for the construction of additional works uncompleted & not in occupation at the date of the rate.—MANCHESTER CORPN. v. BOLTON AREA ASSESSMENT COMMITTEE & LITTLE HULTON URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL (1931), 144 L. 928a. —— Hereditament must be assessed as productive or unproductive.]—In the rating of a water undertaking extending over several parishes, ascertained on the profits basis as approved by the House of Lords in Kingston Union & Metropolitan Water Board, No. 901, a hereditament, part of the undertaking, in a parish which has been assessed on the contractor's basis as "indirectly productive" in that parish, cannot be at the same time further assessed at an additional sum as "directly productive." To do so would be to produce that very injustice which the profits formula was designed to prevent.—MANCHESTER CORPN. v. BOLTON AREA ASSESSMENT COMMITTEE & WESTHOUGHTON URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL (1930), 144 L. a new on-licence for five & a quarter years subject to the payment of £3,000 monopoly value made payable by five annual instalments of £600 each. The question arose whether in fixing the value of the premises for the purposes of the valuation list the instalments ought to be taken into consideration by way of diminishing the estimated rent that a hypothetical tenant would pay & therefore the gross value:—Held: the liability for these instalments ought not to be taken into account in fixing the estimated rent; by LORD WRIGHT, M.R. & ROMER, L.J. (SCOTT, L.J. dissenting) on the ground that the annual instalments being payments necessary to maintain the premises as licensed premises, they came within the words " other expenses " to be borne by the landlord under the definition of gross value in sect. 68; by LORD WRIGHT, M.R. & SCOTT, L.J. on the ground that the rent to be paid by the hypothetical tenant under sect. 68 was in respect of the premises when licensed & therefore when embodying the monopoly value, so that the monopoly value must be borne by the landlord in order to secure the licence.—APPENRODT v. CENTRAL MIDDLESEX ASSESSMENT COMMITTEE, [1937] 2 K. 1054a. —— —— ——.]—In assessing a licensed public-house to rates, regard should be had to the competition between brewers, each desirous of obtaining a tenancy of the house in order to carry on the business there by means of a manager in his own employment, & thereby to secure the use of the house for the sale of beer from his own brewery, & thus to obtain a larger output & a profit thereon over & above the retail profit which a tenant other than a brewer might reasonably expect to make, & to the rent which a competing brewer who desired the house for these reasons might be willing to give.

The fact that a decision of a Div. 1057a. —— —— ——.]—On an appeal to quarter sessions against a rate for the half-year ended Mar. 31, 1928, in respect of certain coal mines of which applts. were occupiers, applts. contended that, inasmuch as the mines had been worked at a loss since 1925, the rateable values thereof should be reduced to nil, or, alternatively, to nominal amounts. On May 10, 1928, applts. entered into a new lease for a term of twenty years of part of their properties. Quarter sessions found that under the trade conditions prevailing at the time when the rate was made, none of applts.' properties could be worked except at a loss, & that there was no indication that conditions of trade were likely to improve within a year; &, further, that the only basis on which any one could have been found who might have entered into a tenancy of the properties at that time would have been on the assumption that his tenancy would continue for a term of years & in the hope that conditions of trade would improve during that period. Upon these findings they rejected applts.' contention:—Held: (1) the expression " term of years," as used by quarter sessions, meant a tenancy from year to year, which might be put an end to on notice; where a colliery was actually being worked by the occupier as a going concern the expectation of better trade subsequent to the year of assessment was a consideration which might be taken into account in arriving at the true assessment; (2) inasmuch as quarter sessions had not included any matter of law which they ought to have excluded, or excluded any matter of law which they ought to have included, the quantum of the rateable values of the mines was a pure question of fact for that ct.—CONSETT IRON CO., LTD. v. DURHAM COUNTY ASSESSMENT COMMITTEE FOR NO. 5 OR NORTH-WESTERN AREA, [1931] A. The measure of valuation which should be applied is the value in exchange, properly understood. The test of such value is, what would a prudent investor be likely to pay or agree to pay for the building by way of investment ?—the assessor keeping in mind the likelihood that the reversible currents which affect land, causing it sometimes to depreciate and at others to appreciate in value, will not at

A rating authority had appointed a sub-committee to fix the values of properties in the district for the purpose of the preparation of the valuation list. They appointed P. & G. members thereof, & subsequently appointed the same two persons as their representatives on the resp. assessment committee. The applicant had given notice of objections to his assessment to the resp. committee, & on learning the above facts, obtained a rule nisi for a prohibition to that committee from hearing & determining his objection :—Held : (1) a writ of prohibition would lie to an assessment committee ; (2) within provision 12, the duties of the rating authority with respect to the preparation of the valuation list had been delegated to the sub-committee of which P. & G. were members, &, consequently, they were disqualified from sitting on the assessment committee under provision 12, although at the time of their appointment thereto they were not disqualified ; (3) P. & G. were not interested " otherwise " within provision 11, which refers to an interest ejusdem generis as that of an owner or occupier.—R. v.

sp. Land & buildings—Meaning of " value."]—Under the Winnipeg Charter where land has buildings thereon the land & buildings must be valued for assessment purposes as a unit. The " value at the time of the assessment " which under sect. 294 of said Charter the assessor is required to ascertain, is that amount which a prudent investor, taking into account all the factors creating value, might reasonably be expected to pay for the property. In determining such value, every factor past, present, future or potential, which enables its owner to exchange property for money must be taken into account. There is nothing in said Charter which authorises " uniformity " or equalisation of assessments. The assessor is not entitled to consider the assessments of other properties. In determining value the facts as to the sales of other properties are admissible as evidence of value. But this evidence must be of sales of property in the neighbourhood at the time the assessment was made. The amount which might be obtained at a forced sale is no test of value but the price asked in a bond fide offer to sell is weighty evidence of value. The net revenue of the property & the replacement cost are also factors to be considered in conjunction with all the others.—Re PHILLIPS ESTATE, [1934] 1 W. W. R. 449 ; 41 Man. L. R. 582.—CAN.

A further provision that " the dominant factor in the assessment of subjects of taxation shall be equity " does not alter the situation, as the latter provision is directed towards ensuring equality & uniformity as between various " subjects of taxation," e.g. lands, businesses, & special franchises, & not as between specific lands, etc. Where it is provided that local improvement rates shall not, unless the municipality determines otherwise, be taken into consideration as a factor in the reduction of the general assessment of land to the extent of the local improvement rate levied, or at all, & the municipality has made no determination, the burden of the local improvement tax, being its capitalised value, does not lower the value of the land for assessment purposes.—ROSEBOROUGH v. REGINA CITY, [1934] 2 W. sv. Undeveloped property—Net revenue.]—The owner of property has the right to develop it or not as he sees fit, within the means at his command ; & a municipality has not the right to penalise him in taxes because he does not develop it in the way someone else may think advisable so as to secure from it the largest possible annual return. Under Winnipeg Charter the city has the right to tax the property only at its value as it is, & not at a value which might be the result of further improvements. The future or present possibilities of the property is something which can be considered only in connection with every other feature. The fact, however, that the property is far from being fully developed is almost a complete answer to the contention that the assessment should be based upon the net revenue obtained.—Re CHRISTIE & CLARK'S APPEAL, [1937] 1 W. Per ROMER, L.J.: Power to attend such meetings is one of the powers conferred upon county valuation committees by sect. 18 (2) of the Act, &, that being so, it is not possible for an assessment committee to exclude an officer properly appointed for the purpose of the valuation committee from one of those meetings on the plea of exercising the power conferred upon them by Sched. 1146d. —— Who may be clerk of.]—An officer of a rating authority, whose duty was to attend the meetings of the rating committee for the purpose of taking minutes of their proceedings, & so would obtain knowledge of all the transactions of the rating authority, was appointed by the assessment committee for that area acting clerk to that committee, & would have to advise the assessment committee upon matters of procedure. The assessment committee would have to consider an objection by the rating authority to a proposal to amend the valuation list. An application was made to prohibit the assessment committee from acting on the resolution appointing the officer acting clerk to the assessment committee & also from acting upon a resolution directing him to remain in attendance on the committee during the hearing of the objection to the applt.'s proposal to amend the valuation list & the deliberations of the committee thereon on an allegation of liability to suspicion of bias. The Div. Ct. held that the appointment was valid:—Held: the assessment committee should be prohibited from allowing the officer to remain in attendance on that committee during the hearing of applt.'s objections & proposal & during the subsequent deliberations thereon, on the ground that the assessment committee in hearing objections to the draft valuation list under sect. 27 of 1925 Act, was a body performing judicial or quasi-judicial functions, & if the officer were present at the meeting of the assessment committee when this objection & proposal were being heard, & advised that committee on procedure, it would be impossible to hold that it was a case where justice appeared manifestly & undoubtedly to be done.—R. v. SALFORD ASSESSMENT COMMITTEE, Ex p. OGDEN, [1937] 2 K. 1147a. —— Revaluation—Right to revalue by instalments—One part of county revalued before another.]—Held: on the true construction of 1925 Act, ss. 18, 37 (1), the county valuation committee, in carrying out the duty imposed upon it by sect. 18 (2) of promoting uniformity of valuation in the county, were not bound to make proposals for the correct valuation of all the hereditaments in the county at the same time, but might in the exercise of their discretion proceed by instalments & make proposals for the correct valuation of the hereditaments in succession. Consequently, where in several areas of a county the prevailing valuations were too low, & the county valuation committee made proposals for the correct valuation of a large number of hereditaments in one of the areas only, & the assessment committee determined many of these proposals & in particular made an order increasing the gross & rateable value of one hereditament, the rating authority for that area was not entitled to obtain either a writ of certiorari to quash the order of the assessment committee, or a writ of prohibition to prevent the county valuation committee from making or the assessment committee from determining & enforcing any other such proposal, on the ground that any such proposal made by the county valuation committee in regard to part only of the county must be made in disregard of its statutory duty to promote uniformity of valuation in the county.—R. v. CORNWALL COUNTY VALUATION COMMITTEE, Ex p. FALMOUTH RATING AUTHORITY, [1937] 2 K. 1158a. —— No injustice—Similar properties incorrectly assessed.]—Applts., who were assessed in respect of their premises at £325 gross & £267 rateable value, objected that they had been incorrectly & unfairly assessed in that seven other hereditaments of the same class in the same valuation list had been assessed at lower figures. Applts. called no evidence to prove that their assessment was higher than the rent which might be expected to be obtained for their premises, & their only witness agreed that the rent would be at least £325 ; nor did applts. seek to alter the assessments of the seven other hereditaments, but they sought to use these as evidence that their own assessment was excessive & unfair :—Held : as applts.' hereditament had been entered in the valuation list at the proper figure, evidence that the seven other hereditaments had been assessed at a lower figure was irrelevant & could not be used to justify a reduction of applts.' assessment. 1158d. Revaluation during quinquennial period—Validity.]—A county valuation committee notified a borough rating authority in the county that in the opinion of the committee the quinquennial valuation list for the borough, which had recently come into force, was not in accordance with 1925 Act, in the matter of gross values. After a conference with the county valuation committee, the rating authority were satisfied that a very large number of assessments of shops, houses & flats in the borough were incorrect, & ought to be increased. They accordingly made many thousands of proposals for the amendment of the valuation list, & a large number of objections fell to be decided by the assessment committee. It was sought to quash the assessment committee's decision on one such objection on the grounds (a) that no such proposal for the amendment of a valuation list could lawfully be made under sect. 37 of 1925 Act ; (b) that sect. 37 of that Act did not empower the rating authority to make a general revaluation of their district to take effect during the currency of a quinquennial valuation list ; & (c) that the rating authority could not be " aggrieved " within the meaning of that sect. :—Held : since the rating authority were merely correcting existing inaccuracies in the valuation list, & were not making a new valuation on the ground of any alleged general increase in values, they were not, in truth any more than in form, making a new valuation list, & were acting within sect. 37, though on a large scale, & the rating authority might well be aggrieved both as a local authority & as a ratepayer by the acceptance of incorrect values by the assessment committee in the quinquennial valuation list.—R. v. HORSHAM & WORTHING ASSESSMENT COMMITTEE, Ex p. BURGESS, [1937] 2 K. 1162a. Local Government Act, 1929 (c. 17), s. 70 (4)—Time for making claim.]—(1) A claim under Local Govt. Act, 1929 (c. 17), s. 70 (4), by the occupier of a hereditament to the rating authority that it should be treated as an industrial hereditament for the purposes of a valuation list, though made after the rating authority has deposited the list & at the time when notice of objection to the list is given by the occupier to the assessment committee, is not invalid as having been made too late.

(2) An objection by the occupier of a hereditament in a Metropolitan borough to its non-inclusion in a special valuation list as an industrial hereditament assessable as such at a quarter only of its net annual value, was disallowed by the assessment committee, & their decision was affirmed by quarter sessions, subject to an appeal to the High Ct. by case stated. In these circumstances a quinquennial list for the borough came into force in which the hereditament was entered as a non-industrial hereditament assessable at its full net annual value. In the course of the twelve months preceding the making of a subsequent supplemental list the High Ct. determined on the case stated that the hereditament was an industrial hereditament, & quarter sessions accordingly made an order that it should be inserted as such in the special list; & the decision of the High Ct. was affirmed by the Ct. of Appeal. 1170a. County panel of valuers for special properties—Validity.]—In the course of preparing a new valuation list under Rating & Valuation Act, 1925 (c. 90), a conference was held between the county valuation committee (a committee of the Surrey County Council) & representatives of the rating authorities in that county, including pltf. council, at which it was resolved that uniformity in the assessment of properties of a special character would be best secured if one valuer were appointed to value each class of property throughout the county, & that the best means of attaining that end would be by co-operation between the county valuation committee & the rating authorities in the exercise of their respective powers under the Act & the appointment by the county valuation committee of a county panel of valuers to value special properties on behalf of the rating authorities & themselves, the valuers appointed, if possible, to be valuers who had previously acted for rating authorities in the county; & further, that, having regard to the interest of each rating authority in the attainment of uniformity not only in its own area but also as between its own area & all other areas in the county, the payment of the valuers employed on the panel should be met by the county valuation committee as a county charge. Accordingly, defts., in professed exercise of their powers under the said Act, appointed a panel of valuers to value the special properties throughout the county with the view to advising the county valuation committee & any rating authorities desirous of availing themselves of their advice & assistance in connection with such valuation, & in due course delivered a precept to pltfs. for their share of the county rate, which included the fees & expenses connected with the panel of valuers. In consequence of such action pltfs. challenged the power of defts. to appoint a panel of valuers to value special properties on behalf of pltfs., a mode of procedure which they alleged had the effect of throwing upon the county rate the whole of those fees & expenses & to spread the burden over the whole county, including pltfs.' area, which contained relatively few of the special properties, to the relief of areas which contained a larger number of special properties; & by this action they claimed a declaration that defts. had no power under the said Act or otherwise to appoint or maintain a county panel of valuers to value special properties on behalf of rating authorities or to charge fees or other payments to such valuers or the expenses of establishing & maintaining the panel against the county rate:—Held: the appointments by defts. of valuers to value special properties throughout the county were not in fact made by defts. on behalf of pltfs., & further, that the action of defts. in making the appointments & charging the fees & expenses in connection therewith against the county rate was no usurpation by defts. of pltfs.' functions under the Act, but was within the scope of defts.' duties & powers within the meaning & intent of sect. 18 other provisions contained in the said Act.

Qu.: whether, had there been evidence to prove that the action of defts. was ultra vires, the ct. would, in the absence of the A.-G., have jurisdiction to grant any relief to pltfs.—COULSDON & PURLEY URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL v. SURREY COUNTY COUNCIL, [1934] Ch. 694; 103 L. SECT. 2.—AMENDMENT OF RATE (Vol. XXXVIII., p. 585).

Add the following case:—

1184a. Duty of rating authority to alter "then current rate"—On alteration of valuation list by assessment committee.]—Applts., in Jan. 1927, gave notice of objection to the valuation list, & relief was refused by the assessment committee. In Nov. 1927 the new assessment committee which came into being on Apr. 1, 1927, reconsidered applts.' objection & granted relief, as from Apr. 1, 1926. They altered the valuation list accordingly, but the rating authority refused to alter the rate book, on the ground that the assessment committee could not make their reconsidered decision relate back to the earlier rating period in which the objection had been originally taken & decided:—Held: it was the duty of the rating authority to alter their "then current rate" on receipt of notice from the assessment committee, & "then current rate" meant the rate current at the date of the objection.—KINGSTON MILL, STOCKPORT, LTD. v. OWEN (1928), 141 L. 1188a. Change in amount—Disallowance of relief.]—The duty cast by Companies Act, 1929 (c. 23), ss. 78, 264, upon a receiver appointed by debenture holders of a co. to pay rates then due from the co. & "having become due & payable within twelve months next before" his appointment in priority to any claim for principal & interest in respect of the debentures, applies to a subsequent increase in those rates resulting from an appeal being allowed against the derating of part of the co.'s premises under Local Government Act, 1929 (c. 17). This is so, because, by Rating & Valuation Act, 1925 (c. 90), s. 37 (10) (which is made applicable to such a case by Sched. IX., Pt. II., para. 1, sub-para. 4, of Local Government Act, 1929 (c. 17)), the resulting amendment of the valuation list is to be deemed to have had effect as from the commencement of the period in respect of which the rate was made & to be recoverable, under the combined effect of that sub-sect. & sect. 36 (2), "as if it were arrears of the rate."—Re AIREDALE GARAGE CO., LTD., ANGLO-SOUTH AMERICAN BANK, LTD. v. AIREDALE GARAGE CO., LTD., [1933] Ch. 64; 101 L. 1392a. Next sessions after date of rate—Not date of realisation of grievance—County Rate Act, 1852 (c. 81), s. 22.]—The appeal given by above sect., to a parish which is "aggrieved by any rate or assessment" made upon the county rate basis to "the next quarter sessions of the peace after such cause of appeal shall have arisen" must be brought to the next practicable quarter sessions after the parish is in fact aggrieved by the rate; the appeal is not to the next practicable quarter sessions to be held after the parish finds out that it is aggrieved.

A county rate which affected the parish of M. was made in Oct. 1904. In Jan. 1905, as the result of an appeal by a railway co. against their assessment to the poor rate in the parish of M., the rateable value of the parish for the purpose of the county rate basis or standard was reduced by a considerable sum. On Apr. 17, 1905, the parish council of M. gave notice of appeal to the next quarter sessions against such part of the basis or standard as affected that parish, & also against the rate existing upon that basis or standard, they alleging that they only knew of the result of the appeal by the railway co. & its effect on the county rate basis on Mar. 28:—Held: the parish council had not appealed against the county rate to the next quarter sessions after the "cause of appeal" had arisen within above sect., & therefore the quarter sessions had no jurisdiction to entertain the appeal against the rate.—WEST RIDING OF YORKSHIRE COUNTY COUNCIL v. MIDDLETON PARISH COUNCIL, [1906] 2 K. 1392b. —— Time for giving notice of appeal.]—On Mar. 17, 1910, a county council fixed the county rate assessment basis for a parish, & on the same day made a rate on the basis so fixed. The county council forwarded their warrant for the first instalment to the guardians of the union in which the parish was included, making the instalment payable by two equal payments. The guardians of the union in due course issued their precept to the overseers of the poor for the amount of the warrant, making it payable in two equal portions, one portion being made payable on Aug. 20, 1910. The county council subsequently forwarded their warrant for the second instalment to the guardians of the parish, making it payable by two equal payments, & the guardians duly issued their precept to the overseers for the amount of the warrant, making it payable in two equal portions, one portion being made payable on Feb. 18, 1911. The parish overseers made the payments in Aug. 1910, & Feb. 1911, as required by the precepts. On Sept. 2, 1910, a railway co. gave notice to the assessment committee of the union in which the parish was included of objection to their assessment in respect of a portion of their line within the parish on the ground of over assessment, & similar notices were during 1910 given by other ratepayers within the parish. For the purposes of the present case the poor rate valuation was taken to be the same as the county rate assessment basis. On Sept. 27, 1910, the parish overseers gave notice to the county council that they felt aggrieved by & objected to the county rate of Mar. 17, 1910, & that they intended to appeal against the rate at the next quarter sessions for the county. On Apr. 13, 1911, the union assessment committee reduced the assessment of the railway co., & from time to time the assessment of the other objectors. The parish overseers subsequently repaid to the railway co. & other objectors £121 6*s.* in respect of over assessment to the county rate as regarded the instalment payable on Aug. 20, 1910, & £107 5*s.* as regarded the instalment payable on Feb. 18, 1911. The hearing of the appeal of the parish overseers to quarter sessions was by consent respited from time to time & ultimately took place on June 27, 1911, when the ct. of quarter sessions ordered the county council to refund to the parish overseers the two sums of £121 6*s.* & £107 5*s.* as being the amounts overpaid by them in Aug. 1910, & Feb. 1911, respectively:—Held: it was not competent for the ct. of quarter sessions to hear the appeal or to order repayment by the county council to the parish overseers of either of the two sums inasmuch as, assuming that the parish overseers were aggrieved, the grievance arose either on Mar. 17, 1910, when the county rate was made, in which case the notice of appeal of Sept. 27, 1910, was too late, or on Apr. 13, 1911, when the reduction in the assessment of the railway co. & the other objectors was made by the union assessment committee, in which case the notice of appeal was premature; further, even if the notice of appeal had been given at the proper time, the ct. of sessions would have had no power to order repayment to the overseers of the sum of £121 6*s.* inasmuch as the payment of that sum was made by them in Aug. 1910, before their notice of appeal to quarter-sessions of Sept. 27, 1910, was given, & under County Rates Act, 1852 (c. 81), ss. 22, 23, power is only conferred on a ct. of quarter sessions to which the overseers appeal against a county rate to order repayment to the overseers of any sums overpaid by them after their notice of appeal against the county rate is given by them.—GLAMORGAN COUNTY COUNCIL v. BARRY OVERSEERS, [1912] 2 K. B. 603; 81 L. J. K. B. 836; 108 L. T. 118; 76 J. P. 307; 10 L. G. R. 477.

Part VII.—Collection of Rate.

1426a. Transfer—Remuneration.]—In 1927 the Egremont U.D.C. appointed pltf. rent collector at a commission of 2 per cent. on all moneys collected. In 1928 it was resolved that pltf. should be paid at the rate of 3 per cent. on all rents collected by him. Although described as a rent collector, pltf. in fact collected rates as well as rent. In 1934 Egremont was transferred to deft. council, pltf. becoming an officer of that council. By the order which effected the transfer pltf. was, while performing similar duties, to receive not less remuneration than he would have been entitled to if the order had not been made. Defts. appointed pltf. a rate collector. In an action for remuneration at the rate of 3 per cent. defts. contended that pltf. was entitled to no remuneration in respect of rates. This contention was abandoned at the hearing, defts. then arguing that remuneration should be at the rate of 2 per cent. & not 3 per cent.:—Held: upon the evidence pltf. was entitled to remuneration at the rate of 3 per cent. from the Egremont U.D.C. for collecting both rent & rates, & he was therefore entitled to 3 per cent. in respect of the rates collected on behalf of defts.—COWAN v. ENNERDALE RURAL DISTRICT COUNCIL, [1936] 3 All E. R. 684.

According to the books of applt. municipality in 1926 & previously, the land & the buildings were not described on the valuation roll under consecutive numbers nor on the same pages of the book. Accounts for municipal & school taxes were sent & paid by resp. co. It was not disputed that the taxes on the buildings were paid; but the municipality claimed taxes were due on the land. Applt. municipality, in the public notice of sale for unpaid taxes, described the whole lot as being to be sold without indicating that the buildings were excluded. 1564a. Failure to object in time—Whether mandamus to alter lies.]—W. & Sons occupied premises which they claimed were entitled to be derated, as being industrial hereditaments. The claim was rejected by the local authority & by quarter sessions, but was finally upheld by the Divisional Ct. Pending the appeal to that ct., the new quinquennial valuation list had been prepared, in which the premises had been entered as fully rateable, & W. & Sons had not appealed against it as provided for by Valuation of Property (Metropolis) Act, 1869 (c. 67), in the belief that if their appeal to the Divisional Ct. were successful their premises would, ipso facto, be transferred to the industrial hereditaments list. The local authority, however, refused to transfer, & W. & Sons obtained a rule nisi for mandamus ordering them to do so, which ultimately was made absolute by the Ct. of Appeal :—Held : the relevant statutory provisions for the preparation & deposit of valuation lists showed that the Legislature had provided fully for any person affected to make objection & appeal, & it was of the first importance that the list once settled should be conclusive. The writ of mandamus was founded to prevent the failure of the performance of some public duty, & applts. had failed in no duty. Resps. had neglected their right under the Valuation (Metropolis) Act, 1869 (c. 67), to object & appeal against the list, & it was not necessary to add new safeguards, such as proceeding by writ of mandamus, to those already provided by statute. Mandamus was not granted where there was another sufficient & convenient remedy.—STEPNEY BOROUGH COUNCIL v. WALKER (JOHN) & SONS, LTD., [1934] A. 1611a. Power to transpose entries—Although no objection as to one.]—In May, 1932, a double flat which had formerly been occupied as a single flat was divided by the owner into two flats & let to separate tenants & was known as Nos. 3 & 4, Duke Street Mansions. In Oct. 1932, a provisional valuation list was made which included the two flats. That list showed No. 3 to be rated at £169 gross & £137 rateable value & No. 4 at £146 & £118 rateable value. The owner pursuant to Valuation (Metropolis) Act, 1869 (c. 67), s. 47 (4), gave notice of objection to the provisional list so far as it related to No. 3, but he gave no notice of objection in respect of No. 4. The owner's representative attended & objected that the figures entered opposite Nos. 3 & 4 had by accident been transposed. The assessment committee amended the provisional valuation list with the result that the valuation of the two flats was increased by £58. The owner objected that no notice had been given him that the valuation of No. 4 would be considered by the assessment committee. The Div. Ct. held that under sect. 47 (7) of 1869 Act the assessment committee had power to alter entries in the provisional list even where no objection had been made to those entries. On Appeal :—Held : on the facts, the two flats, Nos. 3 & 4, must be regarded as one hereditament, & that being so, all the requirements of sect. 47 of 1869 Act had been duly complied with.—R. v. WESTMINSTER ASSESSMENT COMMITTEE, Ex p. BLACK, [1934] 1 K. Even assuming that dower attaches to the interest of the husband in land rented to him on a crop-sharing basis, Dower Act does not transfer to the widow the ownership of his share of a crop growing thereon at his death. Dower Act Amendment Act, 1926, does not affect either sect. 2 of Dower Act, supra, which contains a definition of homestead, or sect. 3 thereof, which declares every disposition by act inter vivos of the homestead of any married man null & void unless made with the written consent of the wife; but it applies only to sect. 4 of the Dower Act & thus operates only to make any disposition by will, or devolution following death intestate of a married man, of such exempted chattels subject to & postponed to an estate for the life of the married man's wife, but does not interfere with or require the consent of the wife to a disposition by him inter vivos of such chattels; & does not affect chattels owned by him in excess of those exempt from execution; they continue as before the amendment to be disposable by him by disposition inter vivos & by will & devolve ordinarily if he dies intestate.—Re SCOTT ESTATE, [1935] 1 W. Defts. had no actual notice of the covenant on the registered title. Pltf. brought the action to restrain defts. from committing a breach of the covenant on the charges register by converting the house into a set of private suites:—Held: (1) under sect. 50 (2) of Land Registration Act, 1925 (c. 21), defts., as persons deriving title under P., were affected with notice of the covenant entered on the register & were bound by it; (2) pltf. was not a person entitled to the benefit of the covenant under sect. 56 (1) of Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), or otherwise, & could not enforce it; (3) on the facts the defence of acquiescence by pltf. in changes which had taken place in the neighbourhood failed. The action, having failed on the second ground, was dismissed.—WHITE v. BIJOU MANSIONS, LTD., [1937] Ch. 610; [1937] 3 All E. R. 269; 157 L. T. 105; 53 T. L. R. 818; 81 Sol. Jo. 498.

910a. —— With absolute title—Claim that land subject to collateral agreement—Failure to prove agreement.]—Pltfs. were the registered owners in fee simple of a plot of land forming part of a building estate upon which plot they had erected a house. The property comprised in this title was originally the freehold property of defts., S. J. & E. I., who were carrying on business in partnership & who were the registered owners with an absolute title of the whole estate. Before the purchase of the plot by pltfs., a plan was produced of the proposed lay out of the estate. This plan showed, amongst other things, a small strip of land adjoining pltfs.' plot: that strip bore upon it the words "Tennis Courts." Pltfs. stated that in addition it was orally represented to them by defts. that this strip would be used only as tennis courts; & that they were therefore induced to purchase the plot. After the purchase defts. S. J. & E. I. transferred their business & the whole of the unsold portion of the building estate to deft. co., H. C. J. & Co., Ltd., who were duly registered as owners in fee simple with an absolute title. Defts. having erected three garages on the strip of land in question pltfs. sought a mandatory injunction to remove them, alleging that when they purchased the plot there was a collateral agreement that this strip was only to be used as tennis courts, & that on the faith of this agreement they agreed to the purchase. This was denied by defts. During the action the statement of claim was amended to enable pltfs. to claim rectification of deft. co.'s registered title by inserting therein a notice that the strip of land was affected by the restrictive agreement prohibiting the user thereof otherwise than as tennis courts:—Held: (1) pltfs. had not succeeded in establishing the collateral agreement they alleged; (2) in all the circumstances of the case there was nothing which could be considered to make it unjust not to rectify under Land Registration Act, 1925 (c. 21), s. 82 (3). The action therefore failed.—HODGES v. JONES, [1935] Ch. 657; 104 L. J. Ch. 329; 153 L. T. 373; 79 Sol. Jo. 522.

911a. First registration under Land Transfer Acts, 1875 & 1897—Effect of Land Registration Act, 1925 (c. 21), s. 147.]—The purchasers of freehold land caused themselves to be registered as first proprietors with an absolute title under Land Transfer Acts, 1875 & 1897, of the land purporting to be conveyed to them, which included two narrow strips of woodland of which, as the ct. decided in this action, an adjoining owner was in possession, having acquired a good title by possession to the fee simple at the time of the registration:—Held: that notwithstanding Land Registration Act, 1925 (c. 21), s. 147, the power to rectify the register conferred by sect. 82 (1) of that Act enabled the ct. to order rectification of entries made in the register under Land Transfer Acts, 1875 & 1897, & accordingly that the order for rectification of the register by excluding from pltfs.' registered title the land erroneously included in it had been properly made.—CHOWOOD, LTD. v. LYALL (2), [1930] 2 Ch. 156; 99 L. 911b. Entry procured by fraud.]—A daughter without her mother's knowledge arranged for the sale of certain registered land from the mother to herself. Without explaining the true nature of the document, the daughter secured the execution of the necessary transfer by her mother & her own registration as owner with an absolute title. The daughter subsequently created charges upon the property, the chargees being ignorant of the fraud upon the mother, & giving full consideration for their charges:—Held: the mother was entitled, under Land Registration Act, 1925 (c. 21), s. 82, to rectification of the register by striking out the daughter's name & inserting the mother's name as owner with an absolute title. There was, however, no ground for any rectification of the charges register.—Re LEIGHTON'S CONVEYANCE, [1936] 1 All E. R. 667. On appeal, [1936] 3 All E. R. 1033, C. A.

913a. —— No loss suffered by rectification.]—On Apr. 22, 1925, Chowood, Ltd. (hereinafter called "Chowood"), were registered as proprietors, with an absolute title, of certain freehold lands which they had purchased from & had had conveyed to them by the vendor. The lands so registered included strips of woodland to which, without the knowledge of Chowood, a title by possession under Real Property Limitation Acts had, before the date of Chowood's registration, been acquired by one Lyall, an adjoining owner. In an action by Chowood against Lyall for trespass on the strips of woodland, Lyall established her title under the Limitation Acts & counterclaimed rectification of the register. LUXMOORE, J., ordered rectification of the register by removing therefrom Chowood's title to the strips, & the register was rectified accordingly. Upon an application by Chowood against the A.-G. (on behalf of the official trustees of the Insurance Fund established under Land Transfer Act, 1897 (c. 65)), that their claim to be indemnified under Land Registration Act, 1925 (c. 21), s. 83, in respect of loss alleged to have been suffered by reason of the rectification might be determined by the ct.:—Held: as appcts.' registered land was subject to the overriding rights of Lyall to the strips of woodland which she had then already acquired under Real Property Limitation Acts, the rectification of the register for the purpose of giving effect to those overriding rights had put appcts. in no worse position than they were in before such rectification; with the result that appcts. having suffered no loss by reason of the rectification were not entitled to be indemnified under Land Registration Act, 1925 (c. 21), s. 83.—Re CHOWOOD'S REGISTERED LAND, [1933] Ch. 574; 102 L. In the case of agricultural land that depends upon what an ordinary prudent agriculturist would have grown, & if deft. for his own purposes has grown a less profitable crop the mesne profits are not thereby limited. If deft. has let the land the rent received is ordinarily the measure of the profits in the absence of

The estate of testator proved insufficient to meet the pecuniary legacies & to provide for the two funds :—Held : the legatees entitled to life interests in the two funds ought to be treated as annuitants.

221a. —— Bankruptcy of covenantor.]—A marriage having been dissolved by a decree absolute in 1925, the wife remarried shortly afterwards. Immediately before the remarriage the former husband executed a settlement on his former wife in consideration of her release of any claim to alimony or maintenance from him. By the settlement the husband covenanted with his former wife & as a separate covenant with the trustees to pay her, during their joint lives, an annuity of such an amount as after deduction of income tax would yield the clear sum of £3,000 a year for her separate use without power of anticipation whilst under coverture. In 1929 the former husband was adjudicated bkpt. Pltfs., as trustees of the settlement, & defts., the former wife, jointly proved in the bkpcy. for a large sum made up of several items, of which £41,723 represented the capital value of the annuity of £3,000. The proof was admitted, & in Dec. 1931 a dividend of 6*d.* in the pound was paid to pltfs. This amounted to £2,322, of which £1,043 1*s.* 6*d.* was the proportion attributable to the annuity. On a summons taken out by pltfs. to determine the question whether they ought to pay to deft. the dividend so far as it was attributable to the annuity, notwith-

Interminable Stock of N. S. W., which is free of Federal & State income tax. Testator had not directed that the beneficiaries should receive the capital value of a perpetual annuity of £400 free of those taxes :—Held : as the basis for ascertaining the amount of the capital money bequeathed by the will that Government security in this State, which is the most permanent & the least likely to be redeemed, must be selected.—Gilmour v. Gilmour (1931), 31 S. 247a. —— ——.]—Under the will of her then husband made in 1902 & a separation deed & settlement made in 1903 V. was entitled to two annuities of £200 each. Testator, who was also the settlor, died in 1913, & V. afterwards married a Dutch subject, & for the remainder of her life resided in Holland. In 1927 the trustees of the will offered to redeem both annuities, & after some negotiations were informed by V.'s solrs. that they would advise her to accept £6,000 for redemption, the annuities to be paid in full up to the date of redemption. The trustees sent the solrs. a draft release for their approval. V. having informed her solrs. that she would accept the offer of £6,000, they sent her the release engrossed for her execution, & she executed it on Jan. 12, 1928. On Jan. 17 she died, but no notification of her death was received by her solrs. in London until Jan. 31. In the meantime, the trustees having been informed by V.'s solrs. on Jan. 24 that she had accepted the £6,000, on Jan. 30 paid the money to them, being in ignorance of V.'s death :—Held : there was no concluded contract for the sale & purchase of the annuities, as the purchasers could not have intended their offer to be accepted by the vendor merely executing a document. But even assuming there was a concluded contract, there was a total failure of consideration, owing to the death of the annuitant before completion, & the trustees were entitled to recover back the £6,000.—KENNEDY v. THOMASSEN, [1929] 1 Ch. 426 ; 98 L. 254b. —— Annuity charged on premises & business—Sale of business to company—Undertaking of company to pay annuity.]—By his will made in 1913 P. appointed his two sons exors. & devised & bequeathed to them the freeholds upon which his business was carried on & the businesses subject to the payment of an annuity of £300 to his wife. Testator died in 1914. In Feb. 1923 the two sons agreed to sell to a trustee for an intended co. the undertaking & assets of the business in consideration of cash & shares in the co. & an undertaking by the co. to pay all the liabilities of the vendors in relation to the business, including the annuity & a charge to secure the bank overdraft of the vendors' firm. That agreement was carried out by two deeds dated June 1, 1923, one an assignment of the goodwill & the other a conveyance of the freehold premises of the vendors in connection with the business, including freehold premises at L. The conveyance recited the charge to the bank effected by deposit of the deeds, but made no reference to the annuity, & the will was also shortly recited. The conveyance was made by the vendors as beneficial owners, & the habendum was expressed to be subject to a charge by way of collateral security to the bank to secure £774 8*s.* 4*d.*, the amount of the firm's overdraft. On Nov. 19, 1929, the co. sold the freehold premises at L. to deft. J. by a conveyance of the fee simple free from incumbrances in the usual form. The co. having paid off the £774 8*s.* 4*d.* were able to hand over the title deeds to J. The widow was paid her annuity to Dec. 1929, when the co., owing to bad trade, were unable to pay it. The widow then brought this action claiming that J. had taken the property with notice which ought to have put him on inquiry whether the premises were freed from the annuity :—Held : the conveyance to the co. being made subject to the bank charge prevented any inference by J. that the vendors had ceased to act as exors., & the vendors to the co. were shown on the conveyance to be sole beneficiaries under their father's will as well as exors., & the fact that the vendors to the co. conveyed as beneficial owners did not put J. on inquiry, as he was entitled to assume that they were selling as exors.—PARKER v. JUDKIN, [1931] 1 Ch. 475 ; 100 L. The weekly sums fell into arrear & the widow asked for a declaration that the three weekly sums were a charge on the capital of the trust fund, or, alternatively, were a continuing charge on the income of such fund:—Held: the weekly sums were neither a charge on the capital nor a continuing charge on the income of the trust fund. The direction in the deed as to surplus income arising during the widowhood of testator's widow showed that the parties to the deed intended that the weekly sums in any year should be paid out of the income of that year, & of that year alone.—Re COLLER'S DEED TRUSTS, COLLER v. COLLER, [1937] 3 All E. PART VI. SECT. 3, SUB-SECT. 2.

593 i. Application to sur-tax—Liability of residue of estate—Method of calculation.]—Testator directed his trustees to pay to each of his two daughters an annuity of £5,000, & to hold the residue of his estate for his son in liferent & his son's children in fee; & further provided: "I hereby specially provide & declare that the income tax payable from time to time upon the said annuities . . . shall be payable out of . . . the income of the residue." It had previously been decided that, under this provision, super-tax as well as income tax on the annuities was payable out of the income of the residue. Both daughters had income from other sources:—Held: the intention of testator with regard to sur-tax was that the income of the residue should be burdened only with the amount of tax which would have been payable if the annuities had been the only income of the annuitants.—BAIRD'S TRUSTEES v. BAIRD, [1933] S. C. 553.—SCOT.

n i. ——.]—By his trust disposition & settlement testator directed his trustees to dispose of "the free annual income of the residue" of his means & estate between the date of his death, which was May, 1925, & Martinmas, 1931 (inter alia), as follows: (1) By paying to an adopted daughter "an annual allowance of £600," which he declared to be alimentary; (2) by paying in certain events, to each of her daughters "an annual allowance of £100"; & (3) by paying, in certain events, to each of her sons "such an annual allowance as my trustees in their sole direction . . . shall think right & proper, but not exceeding £100." Testator also directed "My trustees shall accumulate whatever balance may remian of said annual income, all accumulations of income to be added to the capital of my estate & dealt with as residue":—Held: the annual allowances fell to be paid under deduction of income tax.—HUNTER'S TRUSTEES v. MITCHELL, [1930] S. C. 978.—SCOT.

n ii. —— Bequest free of income tax & super tax.]—Testator bequeathed to his wife an annuity of "five thousand pounds to be paid free of income tax & super tax which shall be borne by my trust estate to the relief of my wife." Testator's wife was possessed of income, apart from the annuity, amounting to £1,600 a year. She received from the Inland Revenue Authorities repayment of the personal allowances provided in the Income Tax Acts:—Held: (1) the testator's trustees were bound to pay a proportion of the total sur tax assessed upon his widow equivalent to the proportion which the amount of the annuity, with income tax & sur-tax thereon, bore to her total income; (2) in ascertaining the amount of the income tax & sur tax of which they were bound to relieve the widow, the trustees were not entitled to take into account, by way of deduction, the amount of the personal allowances repaid to her.—RICHMOND'S TRUSTEES v. RICHMOND, [1935] S. C. 585.—SCOT.

n iii. —— "Free of all duties & taxes."]—An annuity given "to be paid clear & free from all deductions whatsoever & free of all duties & taxes" is to be paid free of both income-tax & unemployment-relief tax.—Re RICHARDS, RICHARDS v. RICHARDS [1935] N. Z. L. R. 909.—N.Z.

n iv. —— Excessive tax repaid—Whether annuitant entitled.]—A testator, who died in 1919, by his trust disposition & settlement directed his trustees to pay to his wife, who survived him, an alimentary annuity of "Three hundred pounds per annum free of all deductions including income tax." From 1919 until 1927, when the widow intimated to the trustees that she elected to claim her rights of jus relictæ & terce, & thereafter until 1931, when her claim was settled, the trustees paid to her the full amount of her annuity. Throughout the whole period they accounted to the Inland Revenue for income tax on the £300 at the current rate or rates, & in each year they got the widow to reclaim a proportion of the tax paid by them, representing the personal allowances to which she was entitled. These claims over the period amounted to £630 17*s.* 6*d.*, &, as & when paid to the trustees by the Inland Revenue, they were credited to the trust. A question having arisen as to whether these sums fell to be repaid to the widow, or remained part of the general trust estate, a petition for directions was presented to the ct. by the sole trustee then acting:—Held: the widow was not entitled to the sums in question, the only obligation of the trustees being to keep her indemnis quoad income tax, to the effect that, if more tax was paid than ought to have been paid, the excess, when recovered, belonged to the trust estate.—Re MILNE'S TRUSTEES, [1936] S. C. 706.—SCOT.

se. Jurisdiction of court—Inland Revenue not represented.]—Under an agreement contained in missive letters, the proprietor of a business agreed to sell his interest in it for a sum payable in cash & an annuity "payable quarterly during his lifetime, but for a minimum of five years." On his subsequent refusal to enter into a formal agreement embodying the terms of the missives, the purchaser brought an action for implement, & (inter alia) for declarator that the annuity fell to be paid under deduction of income tax. The Inland Revenue were not called as parties to the cause. Defender pleaded that the declaratory conclusion was incompetent in the absence of the Inland Revenue:—Held: the question whether the annuity was or was not payable under deduction of income tax could competently be determined although the representatives of the Inland Revenue had not been convened; & plea repelled.—ALLEN (DAVID) & SONS, BILLPOSTING, LTD. v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS., [1933] S. 912a. —— ——.]—The benefit of a covenant to pay a rentcharge does not run with the rentcharge at law, but the covenant is only in gross.

By deed dated Apr. 26, 1867, the Earl of W., the tenant for life of the W. estates, in exercise of certain powers under a private Act, conveyed part of the settled lands to E. in fee simple; & E. granted thereout to the Earl & the person or persons who would for the time being have been entitled to the receipt of the rents & profits thereof if the conveyance had not been made yearly & for every year for ever thereafter the rent of £142 7*s.* 3*d.* There were the usual powers of distress & entry & a covenant by the grantee for himself, his heirs, exors., administrators & assigns with the Earl his heirs & assigns & other the person or persons who would for the time being have been entitled as aforesaid that he, the grantee, his heirs & assigns, would pay the yearly rent thereby reserved to the person or persons entitled thereto under the reservation thereinbefore contained. The Earl died in 1882, & under & by virtue of various deaths & two successive disentailing deeds & resettlements the W. estates passed ultimately to the present infant tenant in tail & became vested in the pltfs. as statutory owners thereof. In none of those title deeds was there an express assignment of the benefit of the covenant to pay the rentcharge. E. died in 1887, leaving a will of which the first deft. was exor., he & the other defts. being the present trustees thereof. In 1920 the trustees sold & conveyed the land conveyed to their testator in 1867 to W. in fee simple, subject to the rentcharge & to the covenants on the part of the grantee contained in the conveyance of 1867. In 1927 W. became bkpt., & by an order of Aug. 8, 1929, the bkpt.'s interest in the land was vested in pltfs. in fee simple. Payments of the rentcharge having ceased to be made since Dec. 25, 1927, pltfs. brought this action for payment by defts. of £231, the arrears which accrued down to the date when the land was vested in them :—Held : (1) notwithstanding the absence of express words of limitation a perpetual rentcharge had been effectually created; (2) the benefit of a covenant to pay the rentcharge did not run with the rentcharge; (3) Real Property Act, 1845 (c. 106), s. 5, now Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 56, did not affect the second question, as the sect. only applied to covenants which ran with the land or property.—GRANT v. EDMONDSON, [1931] 1 Ch. 1; 100 L. sg. Illegal unshipment—Forfeiture of bonds—Forged landing certificates.]—The Exchequer Ct. has jurisdiction in an action by the Crown upon a bond entered into pursuant to the Inland Revenue Act of Canada upon the withdrawal of goods from a bonded warehouse for the purpose of export. Upon the true construction of the printed departmental form of bond used in those circumstances the bond becomes void if the obligor accounts for the goods to the satisfaction of the collector of inland revenue. That condition is performed where the collector, acting upon apparently genuine official documents certifying the landing of the goods at the foreign port, has cancelled the bond by making an entry in his book of record, even if, without the knowledge of the collector or obligor, the documents have been fabricated.—CONSOLIDATED DISTILLERIES, LTD. v. R., [1933] A. It was also charged against him that he did not, when required, furnish proof as provided under sect. 16 of Finance Act, 1934, to the satisfaction of the Comrs. of Customs & Excise, that the cattle had not been imported from the Irish Free State, & that under sect. 186 of Customs Consolidation Act, 1876, he had incurred a penalty of £225, being treble the duty paid value of the cattle, for which the Comrs. of Customs had elected to sue. A statement had been given by deft. to the police in which he professed to account for the history of the cattle. No evidence was given at the hearing of the complaint at petty sessions contradicting deft.'s statement. At the conclusion of complainant's case before the justices,

80a. —— To take reasonable precautions.]—Defts. were a firm of furriers who had imported from Russia a consignment of squirrel skins in Aug. 1934. Out of the consignment ten packages were stored by defts. in the bonded warehouse of pltfs. Whilst in the warehouse they were stolen on the night of Sept. 7–8, 1934. Pltfs. as bonded warehousemen were compelled by law at the demand of the Customs to pay the duties on those packages out of their own moneys. Defts. had refused to supply pltfs. with the necessary funds for that purpose. Pltfs. claimed from defts. the amount of the duties, £823 17*s.* 10*d.*, which they had thus been called upon to pay to the Customs, on the ground that, as between themselves & defts., defts. were primarily liable for the duties. Defts. counterclaimed for £4,119 9*s.* 3*d.* as being the value of the furs, on the ground that the furs were stolen by reason of the negligence of pltfs. & of their failure to exercise due care in the safe keeping of the goods :—Held : (1) the duty of pltfs. with regard to the care of the goods could not be put higher than that they must do what was reasonable. They were not insurers & they had established their defence by satisfactory evidence that the precautions they took were such as reasonable & prudent care demanded. The counterclaim accordingly failed, as did the defence to the claim so far as it was based on the allegation that the loss was due to want of care in the custody of the goods ; (2) the Customs duties on the goods became due from the importers at the date of importation & remained so due until the goods were discharged from the custody of the Customs ; (3) pltfs. having been compelled under sect. 85 of Customs Consolidation Act, 1876 (c. 36), to pay the duties on defts.' goods were entitled to be reimbursed the amount of the duties they had so paid.—Brook's Wharf & Bull Wharf, Ltd. v. Goodman Bros., [1937] 1 K. Add the following case :—

93a. Who liable to duty — Club — Managing totalisator.]—A limited co. was the proprietor of a club formed for social intercourse. Upon the club premises betting on horse races was transacted through the instrumentality of two machines, called totalisators, owned by the co. & worked by the co.'s servants. Any member desiring to it was submitted on behalf of deft. that as no evidence of mens rea on the part of deft. had been given, deft. was entitled to a direction. On behalf of complainant it was submitted that by reason of the provisions of sect. 16 (2) of Finance Act, 1934, it was not necessary in proceedings under sect. 186 of Customs Consolidation Act, 1876, claiming penalties for harbouring uncustomed goods to establish mens rea on the part of deft. The justices refused the application for a direction made on behalf of deft. & convicted deft. of the offence charged but stated a case for the opinion of the King's Bench Division :—Held : the justices were wrong in law in holding that it was not now necessary for the complainant by reason of the provisions of sect. 16 (2) of Finance Act, 1934, to establish mens rea on the part of deft., & the onus of proving guilty knowledge still lay upon the prosecution.—R. (King) v. Gass, [1936] N. I. 144.—IR.

sq. Evasion of duty—Onus of proof.]—Deft. was charged at petty sessions on Sept. 26, 1934, with being knowingly concerned in an attempted evasion of customs duty by dealing with two cattle imported from the Irish Free State into Northern Ireland with intent to defraud, contrary to sect. 186 of Customs Consolidation Act, 1876. The principal evidence against deft. was a certificate signed by order of the Comrs. of Customs & Excise to the effect that some of the cattle in respect of which he was charged were found in the possession or control of C. O'D., on July 13, & that on July 15 some of the same cattle were found in possession of A. M., & that C. O'D. & A. M. being required to furnish proof that the goods had not been imported from the Irish Free State or that customs duty had been paid on them, did not furnish proof to the satisfaction of the Comrs. of Customs & Excise as provided by sect. 16 of Finance Act, 1934. The justices convicted deft. of the offence with which he was charged, but stated a case for the opinion of the King's Bench Division as to whether they were right in law in convicting deft. of the charge, & whether the certificate related only to the goods & was valid & admissible in evidence against any person dealing with the goods, whether such person is or is not named in the certificate, & whether if admissible the certificate casts the onus of proof upon deft. though not named in the certificate :—Held : the certificate was wrongly admitted in evidence against deft. & his conviction should not stand ; also, as deft. was never required to explain his possession of the cattle & was afforded no opportunity of making an explanation, sect. 16 of Finance Act, 1934, never applied to his case, & the onus of proof rested on the prosecution & not on deft.—R. In a suit by the A.-G. of Trinidad & Tobago against resps. for warehousing charges at the monthly rental rate provided for in the rules made under the Ordinance :—Held : that the Ordinance provided a complete scheme for the recovery of warehousing charges from the owner of spirits warehoused on his withdrawal or re-warehousing of the spirits ; a right to recover charges by suit was not contemplated & could not be extracted from the terms of the Ordinance a contingency such as the present was not provided for & the Govt. had no right to suit resps.

Under the rules of the pool 10 per cent. of the gross amount of the stakes on each race was retained by the co. in respect of the facilities provided & the expenses of management, & the balance was divided among the backers, called in the rules "investors," of the winning horse in the proportion of their stakes. The winnings for each week were paid by the co. from its own funds irrespective of any possible loss owing to dishonour of the vouchers. The rules provided that the club acted simply as a distributing agent. Upon an information preferred by the A.-G. against the co. alleging that the co. was liable to pay betting duty in respect of wagers on horse races made by members of the club by means of these machines it was admitted that the co. was a bookmaker & that the transactions in question were bets within Finance Act, 1926 (c. 22), s. 15:—Held: the bets were not made with the co., but by the members inter se, & the claim of the Crown failed.—A.-G. v. LUNCHEON & SPORTS CLUB, LTD., [1929] A. The employee had sole charge of the premises in the absence of the bookmaker, who attended race meetings in other towns during the flat racing season, & had on one occasion been absent from the premises for ten days consecutively. Although the employee had no authority to open new accounts in the absence of his employer, he could accept personal bets & bets over the telephone, & he had said that he had no responsibility, but answered the telephone & recorded messages. On a certain date the employee when in sole charge of the premises was seen to take two or three bets on the telephone & enter them upon a slip, he himself not holding a bookmaker's certificate. During the course of the liquidation the liquidator sold the office furniture of the co., which had been acquired prior to Aug. 1, 1930. The co. was assessed for sales tax both on the sales of the floral articles & on the sale of the office furniture:—Held: the co. was a manufacturer within Sales Tax Assessment Acts, 1930-31, & therefore sales tax would have to be paid on the the sales of the floral articles. Also, as the co. was a manufacturer, the co. was liable to pay sales tax on the sale of the office furniture, such articles, even though not manufactured by the company, being manufactured goods within the Acts.—Re SEARLS, LTD. Sometimes, with the consent of the parties, they supplied transcripts to other persons. They also reported conferences & meetings of various bodies. Occasionally they were instructed to take shorthand notes & not to supply a transcript, & sometimes to make copies of documents. Defts. usually supplied the paper & other materials required for the preparation of transcripts. For work done otherwise than under Evidence Act their fees were fixed by private arrangement, & in general approximated to those chargeable under the Act:—Held: defts. were not engaged in the manufacture or production of goods or commodities within Sales Tax Assessment Act (No. 1), 1930, & were, therefore, not obliged to register or give security thereunder.—ADAMS v. RAU, [1932] Argus L. The business of both cos. was carried on in the same premises & the officers of both were the same. The manufacturing co. sold the major portion of its products to the selling co. on the basis of costs plus 15 per cent. profit. The Crown claimed that the manufacturing, or alternatively both cos. were liable for the sales tax upon the basis of the sales price to the public by the selling co., namely, the market price.—Held: the selling price arranged between the two deft. cos. was not the sale price within the statute. It paid the sales tax on all cards sold, said tax being computed on the sale price of the cards exclusive of the excise tax imposed by sect. 82 of the Act. The Crown contended that the sales tax should have been computed on the sale price including the excise tax:—Held: the excise tax should have been included in the sale price of such cards for the purpose of calculating the sales tax. The definition of "sale price" in the Act is very comprehensive: "sale price" is inclusive of every item entering into the price just before the consumption or sales tax is added & must therefore include the excise tax.—R. v. CONSOLIDATED LITHOGRAPHING MANUFACTURING CO., LTD., [1934] S. o ii. —— —— Meaning of export.]—The words "sale" & "export" as used in the Act, mean a sale & export by the manufacturer or producer, the exportation being an act consummating a transaction to which the tax does not apply. The language of the proviso relates only to exportation by the manufacturer, & cannot be extended to a case where the manufacturer loses control of the goods by selling & disposing of the same to a purchaser in Canada.—R. v. FROWDE, LTD., [1929] 2 D. o iii. —— —— ——.]—Special War Revenue Act, 1915, of Canada, as amended by later statutes, imposes gallonage tax and the sales tax upon specified goods, including beer, manufactured in Canada. It is provided, however, that gallonage tax shall not be payable "when such goods are manufactured for export under regulations prescribed by the Minister of Customs & Excise," & that sales tax shall not be payable on "goods exported," with a provision for a refund on "domestic goods exported under regulations" similarly prescribed:—Held: the exemption from gallonage tax, like that from sales tax, applied only to goods actually exported. & it operated although no regulations had been prescribed; & an export of beer to the U.S.A. was within the exempting provisions although the import was contrary to the law of that country. Further, beer sold to a purchaser in the U.S.A. was within the exemptions where it had been consigned to him at a Canadian port, & was proved to have been shipped from there into the U.S.A. in smaller consignments, mostly to sub-purchasers.—CARLING EXPORT BREWING & MALTING CO., LTD. v. R., [1931] A. When a customer wished delivery of a portion of the goods ordered they would be taken from the reserved stock & payment made when shipped. Deft. notified the Department of National Revenue each month of the quantity of goods thus sold & later remitted the tax thereon calculated at the rate of 1 per cent. The action was brought to recover the amount of the tax calculated at the rate of 4 per cent. upon the sale price of goods sold after Mar. 2, 1931, & delivered after June 2, 1931:—Held: the tax was exigible by the manufacturer when the transaction was finally consummated by delivery of the goods to the purchaser, regardless of the precise date of sale, or where or when the title to the goods passed to him.—R. v. WILLIAM NEILSON, LTD., [1934] Ex. 114a. Sale of tobacco without licence—Offence depends upon place of appropriation—Supply of cigarettes to automatic cabinets in private houses.]—Two informations were preferred alleging the unlawful sale of tobacco without licence contrary to Tobacco Act, 1842 (c. 93), s. 13, as modified by Revene Act, 1867 (c. 90), ss. 8, 9. In each case the respective suppliers, who had a licence entitling them to sell tobacco at their business premises, agreed to supply customers with automatic cigarette cabinets in their private houses. In each case the contract contained a condition: "The place of delivery of the packets of cigarettes shall be place of business of the [suppliers]." In each case a cabinet was delivered to the customer, & the suppliers' representative visited at regular intervals the customer's house, unlocked the cabinet with a key, which at all material times was in the suppliers' control, removed the coins inserted in the cabinet, & any remaining packets of cigarettes, for which the customer was not asked to pay, & restocked the cabinet. In the first case, on each occasion when the packets of cigarettes were brought to the customer's house they were done up in cartons with his name & address thereon, & the cigarettes returned were placed in the cartons & taken away by the suppliers' representative. In the second

It paid to resp. certain sums of money as sales tax imposed by Special War Revenue Act, 1915, & amendments thereto. Suppliant was prepaid or repaid by the customer, the tax so paid, being out of pocket only such amounts as certain customers failed to repay it. Suppliant brought suit to recover all money paid by it as sales tax, alleging such payments to have been made by mistake of law & of fact :—Held : under sect. 87 (c) it is the goods of the owner, manufactured by the labour of another, that are to be taxed as a sale; it is not intended the person performing the labour should be taxed for the goods so manufactured or produced. The suppliant, not having paid the tax itself, but rather as an intermediary for & on account of its customers, has no right of action against the Crown to recover the same.—HOLLANDER & SON, LTD. v. R., [1935] Ex. The A. Co. also carried on business in new parts & accessories. The sales of these goods were made to the same classes of persons as were the sales of the second-hand parts. These sales were to unregistered persons or to registered persons who did not quote their certificates. The Comr. contended that the sales tax was payable because the goods were either manufactured or imported goods & were sold by a registered person to persons of the classes mentioned :—Held : the general words of the Acts should not be treated as applying to goods which have already been retailed in Australia & gone into use.—DEPUTY FEDERAL TAXATION COMR. v. ELLIS & CLARE, LTD. 437a. —— Separate contract for each lot—Whether "series of transactions" within Finance (1909–10) Act, 1910 (c. 8), s. 73.]—At a public sale by auction of dwelling-houses offered in twelve lots, resps. bought from the same vendor six lots at prices in two cases exceeding £500 & in four cases not exceeding £500 in respect of each lot, but in the aggregate exceeding £500. Six contracts of sale were signed by resps., each separately stamped. The conveyance was executed by the vendors but retained by them as an escrow pending payment of the purchase money. The purchase money was paid on May 19, 1932, & the deed was then delivered to the purchasers. The deed, which was exempt from stamp duty under sect. 96 of Poor Relief (Ireland) Act, 1838, was inadvertently stamped by pltf., as solr. for the purchasers, £90 being paid for duty. Pltf. claimed a refund of the £90 on Apr. 25, 1934, which was refused by the Revenue Comrs. defts., on the ground that it was not made within the prescribed period of two years from the date of the conveyance. certain Govt. stocks. The settlement operated as a transfer of the policies of life insurance, but the stocks, shares & marketable securities were subsequently transferred to the trustees of the settlement by separate transfers. Ad valorem "voluntary disposition" duty under Finance (1909–10) Act, 1910 (c. 8), s. 74, was subsequently paid or assessed, without dispute, in respect of the stocks, shares & marketable securities & policies of life insurance, with the exception of the Govt. stocks, which were exempt from duty on transfer by the General Exemptions from all Stamp Duties in the First Schedule to Stamp Act, 1891 (c. 39). The comrs. held that the settlement was also chargeable with ad valorem "settlement" duty on the value of the Govt. stocks included in it. The settlor, however, contended that no duty was payable in respect of those stocks, as they were included in the settlement with other stocks in respect of which ad valorem transfer duty & not settlement duty was payable under Finance (1909–10) Act, 1910 (c. 8), s. 74 (4):—Held: the Govt. stocks were distinct matters, within Stamp Act, 1891 (c. 39), s. 4 (a), from the other property dealt with by the settlement, &, therefore, the settlement could be separately charged, as if it were a separate instrument, with settlement duty in respect of the Govt. stock.—ANSELL v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS., [1929] 1 K. The Comrs. decided that ad valorem duty was chargeable on the deed & they valued the consideration at four times one year's gross income derived from applt.'s profession:—Held: the deed of covenant related to a matter or thing done or to be done in the United Kingdom within Stamp Act, 1891 (c. 39), s. 14 (4); the allotment of shares was good consideration for the sale of an annuity; the deed of covenant was properly chargeable with ad valorem duty under Stamp Act, 1891 (c. 39), s. 60; in the circumstances of the case the valuation of the shares was a proper one.—FABER v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS., [1936] 1 All E. 643a. ——.]—In 1932 a father was tenant for life under the will of a testatrix who died in 1898 of the settled estates (which then consisted mainly of investments) & his son was tenant in tail in remainder. An arrangement was made between the father & the son by which the son was to disentail & the father to purchase from him for £160,000 his absolute reversion in certain of the investments, the son taking over from the father his liability to pay an annual sum to his wife during her life. This sum of £160,000 was then applied in purchasing some of the investments which had thus become the father's property. The only document relating to the sale of the son's reversion for £160,000 was an acknowledgment signed by the son & dated Dec. 14, 1932, by which the son acknowledged the receipt from the father of the sum of £160,000, "being the purchase price agreed as part of a family arrangement for my absolute reversion under the will . . . & a disentailing deed . . . expectant on the life interest" of the father under the will in the investments mentioned in the Sched. thereto :—Held : the acknowledgment was chargeable with ad valorem duty as an agreement for sale within Stamp Act, 1891 (c. 39), s. 59.

It was contended by the revenue authorities that this was one transaction & that the amount of stamp duty on the conveyance should be on the real consideration therefor—namely, the aggregate of the above sums, £1,850 :—Held : this was not a contract for the sale of a house & the land on which it stood, but constituted separate transactions, a contract of sale of land & a contract to build a house thereon, & duty on £500 only was payable.—KIMBERS & CO. v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS., [1936] 1 K. sp. Mortgage stamped in Irish Free State—Double Taxation Relief Act.]—The vendor of an estate situate in County Antrim, which was in process of sale through the Land Purchase Commission under the Northern Ireland Land Act, 1925, executed a mtge. to the Bank of Ireland of the bonus payable in respect of the sale. This instrument, which was dated Apr. 24, 1926, contained a covenant on the part of mtgees. to re-assign the premises on re-payment of the principal & interest thereby secured. It was executed by the mtgor. at his residence in County Antrim & by the mtgees. in Dublin, where it was stamped with an Irish Free State Stamp in respect of the duty chargeable thereon. Upon the ruling of the final schedule of incumbrances the Judicial Comr. declined to accept the mtge. in evidence on the ground that it was not properly stamped in accordance with the provisions of the Stamp Act, 1891 :—Held : by the Ct. of Appeal the mtge. was chargeable with stamp duty in the Irish Free State within Double Taxation Relief Act (Northern Ireland), 1923 (c. 14), Part III., para. (a), & it was accordingly properly stamped & admissible in evidence in Northern Ireland.—Re Estate of MACARTNEY, [1933] N. I. 1.—IR.

734 xi. —— Receipt granted to heritor on account of stipend.]—In the case of a parish where a minister was in right of the whole standardised stipend, a question arose whether a receipt granted by the General Trustees to a heritor on account of stipend paid by him was exempt from stamp duty in virtue of Finance Act, 1924, s. 36 :—Held : in virtue of the nature of standardised stipend as determined by Church of Scotland (Property & Endowments) Act, 1925, s. 36, the receipt granted by the General Trustees to the heritor on account of standardised stipend could not be described as given on account of any salary or other like payment within Finance Act, 1924, s. 36, even though the minister of the parish was in right of the whole standardised stipend thereof; & accordingly, the receipt was not entitled to the exemption from stamp duty conferred by that section.—CHURCH OF SCOTLAND GENERAL TRUSTEES v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS. 734 xii. —— Acknowledgment of loan.]—In an action brought in 1932 by testamentary trustees for recovery of a loan alleged to have been made by testator to defender, pursuers produced a document consisting of a letter, dated 1920, from defender's father to testator, & a docquet holograph of & signed by defender. In the letter defender's father undertook, if testator advanced £1,000 to defender, to arrange for payment of interest. The docquet, which was undated, but must have been executed before July, 1931, bore " I acknowledge receipt of the sum of One Thousand Pounds." The document was not stamped, & defender maintained that it could not be received in evidence, in respect that, being a receipt, it could not be stamped more than one month after its date :—Held : when the letter & docquet were read together, it was clear that the £1,000 was received as a loan, & accordingly, the docquet was not a receipt within Stamp Act, 1891 (c. 39), & might be stamped more than one month after its date.—SIMPSON'S TRUSTEES v. SIMPSON, [1933] S. sh. Failure to give stamped receipt—Money received against voucher.]—Applt., a commercial traveller employed by a joint stock co., received from the co.'s cashier a sum of £10 to be expended in travelling expenses & in return signed a petty-cash voucher, which he handed to the cashier in acknowledgment of his having received the said money. Subsequently he accounted to the cashier for it, producing receipts where receipts had been given to him. He was convicted of a breach of sect. 71 (2) of Stamp Acts, 1894 to 1930, which makes it an offence, in any case where a receipt would be liable to duty, not to give or issue forthwith a receipt duly stamped. For the purposes of those Acts " the expression 'receipt' includes any note, memorandum, or writing whereby any money amounting to two pounds or upwards . . . is acknowledged or expressed to have been received, or deposited, or paid.

On appeal :—Held : the voucher did not merely evidence the passing of money from one servant

762a. Verbal declaration of trust—Followed by deed of settlement.]—A deed of settlement executed on June 24, 1931, after reciting, as was the fact, that on May 20, 1931, for the same consideration as was mentioned in the deed, which then existed in draft form, the settlors had verbally declared that they would thenceforth, until trustees were appointed in their place, hold the securities mentioned in the first & second scheds. thereto, being of the value of £55,344, as trustees upon the same trusts as would be set forth in respect of the securities mentioned in the third & fourth scheds. thereto, being of the value of only £1,512, when the same were formally transferred, went on to witness that in consideration of matters therein mentioned the settlors thereby assigned & transferred to the trustees the securities mentioned in the third & fourth scheds., that the trustees should stand possessed of all the property & securities vested in them upon certain specified trusts, & that the settlors thereby appointed the trustees of the settlement to be the trustees of the securities mentioned in the first & second scheds. thereto. A question having arisen as to the stamp duty with which the deed was chargeable:—Held: although the verbal declaration of trust had been made before the deed, the two nevertheless formed one single transaction & the deed was chargeable under the head "Settlement" in Stamp Act, 1891 (c. 39), Sched. I., with ad valorem stamp duty on the total value of the property mentioned in all its four scheds.—namely, £56,856.—COHEN & MOORE v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS., [1933] 2 K. B. 126; 102 L. J. K. sp. Exemption—Transfer of stock—Equitable interest.]—A deed of settlement otherwise dutiable under Stamps Act, 1928 (Vict.) purported to transfer Australian consolidated inscribed stock to a trustee upon the terms of the settlement. The transfer was not in the form prescribed by Commonwealth Inscribed Stock Act, & consequently did not operate to vest in the trustee the legal property in the inscribed stock:—Held: as the deed of settlement transferred only the equitable interest in the stock, it was not a "document relating to the . . transfer . . . of any stock" within sect. 52A of Commonwealth Inscribed Stock Act, 1911-1933, as that provision applied only to transfers of legal interests, & the deed of settlement was consequently not exempted from stamp duty under Victorian Stamps Act, 1928 by sect. 52A of the Commonwealth Inscribed Stock Act.—FAIRBAIRN v. COMPTROLLER OF STAMPS FOR VICTORIA (1935), 53 C. The exor. transferred shares & made cash payments in compliance with these directions:—Held: the letter was not dutiable under Stamps Act, 1928, as a deed of settlement or of gift within Part IX. of Sched. sa. Club picnic—Sea trip & shore amusements.]—A club conducted an excursion to a seaside resort & a picnic there & sold tickets in connection with the excursion & picnic. The holders of tickets were conveyed to the resort by a boat chartered by the club, where for a few hours ashore they might take part in games, pastimes & amusements in a park, of which the club had the use for the day. They afterwards returned by the same boat. The whole outing extended over some eleven or twelve hours. 786a. —— Theatre club.]—A club was formed with the object of creating a social rendezvous & providing its members with the amenities of a London club, including the provision of meals & refreshments. In addition it provided its own theatre on the club premises & produced regularly at the theatre with professional casts new plays & revivals for short runs, & also provided therein concerts, lectures, etc. There were two classes of members—namely, full members, who paid annual subscriptions at full rates, & enjoyed all the privileges & amenities of the club, & associate members, who paid annual subscriptions at much lower rates than the full members, & were entitled only to a few of the privileges of the full members. Both full members & associate members were entitled to enter the theatre & attend the theatrical performances given there upon payment of the prices charged for admission, which were the same for both full members & associate members, & varied according to the cost of production of each play, & were calculated so as to cover the cost of production throughout each year. There was no admission for the public at large. The Comrs. of Customs & Excise determined that a portion of the subscriptions paid by both full members & associate members was in respect of the right of admission to entertainments & that entertainments duty was payable thereon :—Held : by FINLAY, J., on the facts, a portion of the annual subscriptions paid both by the full members & the associate members was paid in order to entitle them to join the privileged class of persons who alone had the right, upon making a further payment, to be admitted to the entertainments in the theatre, & that portion of the annual subscriptions was chargeable with entertainments duty.

On appeal it was contended on behalf of applts. that the duty could not attach, because Finance (New Duties) Act, 1916 (c. 11), s. 1 (4), referred to a payment for admission & not to a part payment for admission to an entertainment :—Held : by the Ct. of Appeal, that under s. 1 (4) of the 1916 Act, the Comrs. were charged with the duty of breaking up the lump sum paid in respect of the subscription paid to the club to see whether there was contained in it a sum which represented any payment for admission to the theatre, & that if it did, the tax attached; & even though, subsequently or successively, there might have been a direct payment for the ticket of admission which was used by the member, nevertheless the totality of the two sums which had been paid represented a payment made for admission to an entertainment of which he had paid the first portion in his subscription to the club & the second portion directly in the purchase of his ticket, & the duty was payable on the totality of the two sums paid for admission :—Held : therefore, the tax attached.—A.-G. v. ARTS THEATRE OF LONDON, LTD., [1933] 1 K. 787a. Revue during meals at restaurant.]—Defts. co. was in occupation of premises which had previously been used as a theatre. These premises were adapted for use as a restaurant, but the general aspect of a theatre was retained; the stage was enlarged, the seats in the stalls & dress circle were replaced by tables & chairs, & staircases were built from the dress circle to the stage. Food & drink were supplied, as in an ordinary restaurant, & patrons were able to dance on the stage. There was in addition an elaborate revue performed on the stage, which was fitted & adapted for the production of such a revue. Patrons were allotted tables as in an ordinary restaurant; there was a fixed menu each night, but dishes could be ordered à la carte. A minimum charge of 15*s.* 6*d.* was made, payments being made before leaving. The question arose as to whether the co. was liable to pay entertainment duty :—Held : upon the evidence, the 15*s.* 6*d.* was paid by patrons for admission to an entertainment within Finance (New Duties) Act, 1916 (c. 11), but, as part of the payment was in respect of other privileges & rights, only that part of the payment which represented the right of admission to the entertainment was dutiable.—A.-G. v. LONDON CASINO, LTD., [1937] 3 All E. 791a. Bathing pool—Admission of non-bathers.]—The corpn. of a borough were the proprietors of an enclosure which adjoined the sea-shore & included a sea-bathing lake; two areas reserved for sun-bathing; dressing accommodation for about a thousand bathers; terraces with seating accommodation for several thousands of non-bathers sheltered from the wind, & an upper terrace promenade, that accommodation giving the non-bathers a view of the bathing lake, adjacent parks, recreation ground & sea-shore; & a café. The bathing was not organised. The lake & grounds were widely used by visitors & residents as a meeting-place & resort for sheltered sitting & resting in the sun. The sheltered seats, terraces & café were open & used at the same prices whether or not there was bathing. The enclosure was open from Apr. 30 to Oct. 1 from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. on week-days, & for shorter hours on Sundays. The charges for non-bathers were between 2 p.m. & 5 p.m. 4*d.*, & at any other time 3*d.*, these charges being somewhat less than those for bathers. Admission was by ticket obtained at a turnstile :—Held : the bathing, not being organised, was not an "entertainment" within the meaning of that term as defined by Finance (New Duties)

Act, 1916 (c. 11), s. 1, & consequently that entertainments duty under the Act could not be charged on the payments made by non-bathers for admission to the enclosure.—A.-G. v. SOUTHPORT CORPN., [1934] 1 K. The ship then put into Halifax on account of engine trouble; the claimant, L., master of the ship, in reporting to the Collector of Customs at Halifax, as required by sect. 11 of Customs Act, 1927, made an untrue report. Later the ship was seized by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police for an alleged violation of sect. 185 of the Customs Act. On appeal from the decision of the Minister of National Revenue, confirming the seizure, claimants contended inter alia that sect. 11 of the Customs Act was ultra vires :—Held : (1) for customs purposes, a vessel which is not registered in a Canadian port, even though a British vessel, must be considered a foreign vessel; (2) putting into port under constraint does not carry any legal right to exemption from local law or local jurisdiction; (3) the report required by sect. 11 of the Customs Act is required to be made only after the vessel has entered a Canadian port, & the fact that disclosure is required of acts which may have occurred during the course of the voyage, outside of the territorial waters of Canada, does not render the enactment extra-territorial in its operation; (4) the offence charged herein under sect. 185 of the Customs Act is that of having made an untrue report; (5) the Parliament of Canada, for the protection of the revenue, has the right to require a master coming into a Canadian port, to make a full & complete statement, in his report, of the dealings in cargo which he had during the voyage which immediately preceded his arrival at the port.—CASHIN & LEWIS v. R., [1935] Ex. 841a. Right to pension—Not enforceable at law.]—An established civil servant of the Crown has, on the true construction of Superannuation Acts, 1834 to 1909, no legal right to a superannuation allowance or, when such an allowance has been awarded to him by the Lords Comrs. of the Treasury, to an allowance of an amount fixed by reference to the scale contained in Superannuation Act, 1859 (c. 26), s. 2, as amended by Superannuation Act, 1909 (c. 10), ss. 1, 3 (1).

Applts., four retired civil servants who had qualified for the award of a superannuation allowance, claimed to be entitled as of right to have superannuation allowances calculated on the full amount of their annual salaries & emoluments, including a bonus granted by the Treasury to civil servants, in accordance with the scale provided by Superannuation Act, 1859 (c. 26), s. 2, as amended by Superannuation Act, 1909 (c. 10), ss. 1, 3 (1). Two of applts. entered the Civil Service on the faith of a statement contained in a Treasury minute of June 14, 1859, to the effect that all persons appointed subsequent to the passing of the Act of 1859 were to be held entitled to the retiring allowances prescribed by the second sect. of that Act, & they contended that the minute was a continuing offer by the Treasury on behalf of the Crown to such persons that they should receive superannuation allowances on the terms therein contained, & that that offer had been accepted by both applts. A third applt. entered the service of the National Telephone Co. in 1895, & on the transfer of the telephones to the Post Office under Telephone Act, 1911 (c. 26), assigned his share in a contributory pension fund to the Postmaster-General, & was appointed to a pensionable office in the Post Office which qualified him for a superannuation allowance under sect. 6 of that Act, which, by sect. 10, was to be read as one with the Superannuation Acts, 1834 to 1909. The Lords Comrs. of the Treasury, acting in accordance with a Treasury minute dated Mar. 20, 1922, awarded to each of applts. a superannuation allowance calculated on a basis differing from & less favourable to him than that provided by sect. 2 of 1859 Act, as amended by sect. 1 & sect. 3 (1) of 1909 Act, & computed his allowance (a) on his fixed annual salary & emoluments, exclusive of his bonus emoluments; & (b) on a sum less than the full amount of his annual bonus emolument:—Held: (1) applts. had no legal right enforceable in a ct. of law to superannuation allowances calculated according to the scale fixed by sect. 2 of 1859 Act as amended by sect. 1 & sect. 3 (1) of 1909 Act; (2) as to the claim founded on contract, the only power of the Lords Comrs. of the Treasury was conferred by statute, & they had no authority to contract themselves out of it; (3) applt. employed in the Post Office received his superannuation allowance on the same footing as the other applts.—NIXON v. A.-G., [1931] A. 841b. Amount of pension—Whether war bonus included in calculation.]—Upon its incorporation resp. authority took over a pension scheme, whereby it was provided that deductions be made from the wages payable to certain employees (including applt.), & that, for the purpose of computing the superannuation allowance or pension payable to each employee, the wages were to be deemed to be at the rate of the actual wages paid to him at the time of his superannuation or retirement "exclusive of any gratuities, allowance for house, or other additions." From 1915 onwards, a weekly sum called "war bonus" was paid to each employee in addition to wages. The bonus rose from time to time, & in May 1918 a part of the bonus was consolidated with the wages. In 1919 a document, containing the words "war bonus 15*s.* per week added to wage, counting for pension, plus 11*s.* 6*d.* per week floating war bonus," was left with each employee. In the same year applt. (as one of the employees), when asking for a reconsideration of his rate of wages, added "Present conditions of annual leave, sick pay, & pensions." No deduction in respect of superannuation or pension was made from that part of the wages which formed the bonus. In Mar. 1925, when a further revision took place, the wages of applt. were described in a circular issued by resp. authority as "68*s.* 6*d.* per week as a maximum, non-pensionable floating bonus 12*s.*" Resp. authority, in rejecting a demand by applt. for deductions from the bonus payments, informed him that "the authority are prepared to continue the payment of a non-pensionable bonus in addition to your wages in accordance with the terms of the circular, & by accepting that bonus you must be deemed to have agreed to the conditions upon which it is granted." Without accepting the view of the authority, applt. continued to work as usual, & to receive the bonus payments. Upon his retirement, applt. claimed that the payments of war bonus made to him were part of his wages, & ought to be included in the computation of the amount of his superannuation allowance or pension:—Held: by the terms of the agreement between the employers & the workmen, the bonus payments were at all times to be regarded as non-pensionable, & therefore could not be taken into consideration for the purpose of calculating the amount of pension.—TIBBALS v. PORT OF LONDON AUTHORITY, [1937] 2 All E. Officers of local authorities.]—Following this cross-ref. add:-

841c. —— Contracting out—What amounts to.]—The claimant was employed in the service of the H. Urban District Council. That council was, in 1921, amalgamated with the city of S. By an agreement entered into between the claimant & the S. Corpn. in 1920, before but in contemplation of the amalgamation, it was agreed that the corpn. should pay to the claimant an annuity of £300 as compensation "in full discharge for all claims to which he shall or may become entitled in any respect whatsoever by reason of his said office or otherwise in relation to the said urban district of H." This annuity was to be suspended while the claimant should hold any office under the S. Corpn. He in fact entered their service as from the date of the amalgamation & continued to hold a post in the engineer's & surveyor's department until he attained the age of sixty-five years on Jan. 15, 1935. In 1930 the S. Corpn. adopted the Local Govt. & Other Officers' Superannuation Act, 1922 (c. 59), & among the posts which they designated as established posts for the purpose of that Act was the post of "divisional surveyor." The claimant maintained that the post which he held was that of "divisional surveyor" & that he was therefore entitled to claim a superannuation allowance under the Act of 1922, in addition to the annuity payable under the agreement of 1920. The corpn. did not admit that the claimant held the post of district surveyor, & threatened to dismiss him from their service if he did not withdraw his claim. In Oct. 1932, the claimant & the corpn. entered into an agreement under seal (expressed to be supplemental to the agreement of 1920) whereby it was declared that the claimant held his employment at the pleasure of the corpn., & that the post which he occupied was not & should not be deemed to have been designated as an established post for the purpose of the Act of 1922. It was also agreed that the claimant withdrew his claim & should not at any time be entitled to receive superannuation allowance from the corpn. On reaching the age of sixty-five years the claimant retired & claimed that he was entitled to superannuation allowance, & that in calculating the amount his service with the H. Urban District Council must be taken into account. He contended that the agreement of 1932 was void as being an attempt to "contract out" of the Act of 1922. The corpn. contended that the agreement was valid. They did not contend that the rights of the holder of an established post could be diminished by "contracting out," but that this was a bonâ fide compromise of a dispute whether the claimant did hold an established post. Anyhow, they said, the service with the H. Council was excluded by the terms of Art. 52 of the Provisional Order effecting the amalgamation: ". . . no officer shall be entitled to claim or receive both compensation for any direct pecuniary loss by abolition of office or by diminution or loss of fees or salary & a superannuation or retiring allowance in respect of the same period of service & the same pecuniary loss." The matter having been referred to arbn. under sect. 22 of the Act of 1922, the arbitrator found as a fact that the claimant did occupy an established post as district surveyor, & decided in his favour on both points, but stated his award in the form of a special case:—Held: (1) the agreement of 1932 was void. The rights conferred by the Act of 1922 could not be got rid of by "contracting out" either directly or by the indirect method of agreeing that a post which was (as the arbitrator had found) an established post should "not be deemed to be" an established post; (2) the claimant's service with the H. Council must be excluded in arriving at the amount of the superannuation allowance.—POWELL v. SHEFFIELD CORPN., [1936] 1 K. B. 680; 105 L. J. K. B. 330; 154 L. T. 150; 100 J. P. 139; 52 T. L. 56a. —— Ship "specially equipped with salvage plant."]—The owners of the motor vessel V., being informed that the ship was on fire, made a contract in writing with the Admiralty that warships belonging to His Majesty should render salvage services. Such services, including towage, were in fact rendered : —Held : it was not open to the parties by a contract otherwise valid to contract out of the provisions of Merchant Shipping Act, 1894 (c. 41), s. 557.

Per SLESSER, L.J., on the ground that the effect of sect. 557 of Merchant Shipping Act, 1894 (c. 41), was to take away from the Crown the right to claim for salvage services which it might otherwise possess; that the prohibition to claim for salvage services was general in its nature & not enacted solely for the benefit of those persons who were to receive the services & accordingly could not be waived, & that the ct. had no jurisdiction to entertain a claim for services excluded by the sect.

Per SCOTT, L.J., on the ground (1) that the agreement ought to be construed as an undertaking to pay such salvage remuneration as was not barred by the combined operation of the two Acts of 1894 & 1916 & no more; (2) that sect. 557 of the Act of 1894 must be interpreted as meaning that the banned claims were not to be allowed in the King's Cts., & that therefore no cause of action for any of the banned heads of remuneration could exist; (3) that even if there was any ambiguity in the construction of sect. 557, the crucial words in it ought to be construed as a prohibition, & that the Admiralty could not make an agreement for the express purpose of creating by contract a cause of action for salvage remuneration falling within the statutory ban enforceable in the Cts. notwithstanding the statute.

GREER, L.J., held that there was nothing in sect. 557 of Merchant Shipping Act of 1894 which made it illegal for the Admiralty to agree that if they did what they were not bound to do, i.e. stand by a ship & tow her to safety, they were to receive remuneration, or which rendered a promise to pay for such services made by the owners of the salved ship illegal & void, & that therefore the contract which the owners of the salved ship entered into with the Admiralty was a binding contract.—ADMIRALTY COMRS. v. VALVERDA OWNERS, [1937] 1 K. Sub-sect. 3 provided: "The Minister shall, in such manner as may be prescribed by regulations made by him under this section, bring the provisions of this subsection to the notice of persons having a right of appeal thereunder."

Sub-sect. 4 brought into the scope of the section officers in whose cases final awards had been made before the Act, but substituted for one year from the award one year from a date to be fixed by the Minister by regulations. By War Pensions (Final Awards) Amendment Regs., 1923, the date fixed was Feb. 7, 1923, & Reg. 3 provided:

An appeal was taken to the Federal Appeal Board under 13 & 14 Geo. 5, c. 62, s. 10, & the latter found the death was due to military service. By 14 & 15 Geo. 5, c. 60, s. 10, the Appeal Board was required to give certain information in its judgment. The Comrs., claiming the Appeal Board had not complied with the statute, refused to pay the pension. contended that the property in the crane had not passed to the purchasing co. & therefore that it was not included in the assets sold to the new co. & claimed that the liquidator must either accept the obligations arising & continue the instalments payable under the contract or return the crane to the vendors. The liquidator rejected these claims. EVE, J., held that the property in the crane passed to the purchasing co. on the making of the contract, in accordance with rule 1 of Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 18:—Held: sect. 18 of the Act applied only "unless a different intention" appeared, &, reading the contract as a whole, a different intention did appear—namely, that the property in the crane should not pass until the purchase was completed by payment of the purchase price; therefore, in the circumstances of the case, the liquidator must be taken to have determined to carry out the contract & to make use of it for the purposes of the liquidation. 430a. "Current prices."]—By an agreement dated July 12, 1927, pltfs. & defts. agreed that pltfs. were to deal with defts.' entire output of Jarrow pig iron available for delivery in Scotland, pltfs. undertaking to push the sale of the same in Scotland in preference to any other brand. They were to base their prices on the current prices for Middlesbrough pig iron, free on truck makers' works or f.o.b. makers' wharf, excluding Tees dues, & to pay cash on Mondays for the previous weeks' shipments. Disputes having arisen between the parties about the prices which pltfs. ought to charge for the pig iron which they sold, defts. notified pltfs. that they terminated the agreement as from Apr. 22, 1928. Pltfs. brought an action for breach of contract, because, as they alleged, defts. refused to supply them at "the current prices for the Middlesbrough pig iron." Defts. contended that the phrase "current prices" were the list prices which were published every week in a trade newspaper by a group or combine of iron founders in Middlesbrough, but pltfs. contended that "current prices" meant the price at which pig iron was actually being sold in Scotland by the sole agent of the combine :—Held : the expression "current prices" in the agreement meant the list prices which were published every week by the combine in Middlesbrough, & did not mean the price at which pig iron was actually being sold in Scotland by the sole agent of the combine.—JACKS & CO. v. PALMER'S SHIPBUILDING & IRON CO. 446a. —— ——.]—By an agreement in writing pltf. agreed to sell & defts. to purchase a piece of land adjoining other land belonging to pltf., which defts. intended to use for their business as motor coach proprietors. The sale was made subject to defts. entering into another agreement to purchase from pltf. all the petrol required for their said business. On the same date that second agreement, described as supplemental to the first, was executed, which, after reciting that pltf. was the proprietor of a petrol-filling station on the land retained by him, provided that defts. would purchase from him all the petrol required by them for the running of their said business, "at a price to be agreed by the parties in writing & from time to time"; & further, that defts. would purchase no petrol from any other person so long as pltf. was able to supply them with quantities sufficient to satisfy their daily requirements.

ag. "Current market price."]—Defts. oil co. agreed to furnish pltf., a dealer, with gasoline "at the same current market price" as furnished to the trade & because pltf. agreed to buy his gasoline from defts. for three years defts. agreed to give him an extra discount of one cent. The usual & current trade discount at the time was four cents off the retail or "wagon price." Subsequently defts. made special contracts with other dealers, representing about 90 per cent. of the trade. Under these contracts defts. was given the exclusive sale to said dealers for a period of years & the dealers were allowed an extra discount of two cents over the usual four cents :—Held : said subsequent special contracts did not displace the original "current market price" as the foundation of pltf.'s rights under his contract, &, therefore, he was not, as he contended, entitled to a discount

Clause 8 was in these terms: "If any dispute or difference shall arise on the subject-matter or construction of this agreement the same shall be submitted to arbn. in the usual way in accordance with the provisions of the Arbn. Act, 1889."

The land, the subject of the first agreement, was duly conveyed to defts., & for three years defts. obtained their petrol from pltf. Thereafter disputes arose between them, & thereupon defts. purported to repudiate the second agreement, alleging that it had no binding force because (1) no agreement in writing as to price had ever been made, & (2) the clause requiring defts. to take all their petrol supplies from the pltf. was an unreasonable & unnecessary restraint of their trade. In an action by pltf. claiming a declaration that the petrol agreement was valid & binding, & an injunction to restrain defts. from purchasing petrol required for their said business from any person other than pltf.:—Held: (1) a term must be implied in the agreement that the petrol supplied by pltf. should be of reasonable quality & sold at a reasonable price, & that if any dispute arose as to what was a reasonable price it was to be determined by arbn. pursuant to clause 8; (2) inasmuch as defts. were only required to purchase petrol from pltf. for the purpose of the business carried on by them on the land purchased from pltf., & so long only as it was supplied of a reasonable quality & at a reasonable price, the obligation was not an unreasonable & unnecessary restraint of their trade; & (3) the agreement therefore was valid & binding on defts.—v. CLASSIQUE COACHES, LTD., [1934] 2 K. The seller sent the consignment of potatoes to the docks in time for loading in the ordinary way on the Saturday steamer, but that steamer was too heavily laden to take them, & they were delayed for two days at the docks. Prices having fallen in the meantime, deft. refused to accept delivery:—Held: deft. was entitled to reject the potatoes, as it was a condition of the contract that they should be sent by the Saturday steamer.—WILSON v. WRIGHT, [1937] 4 All E. 622a. Goods "ready for shipment."]—Sellers in Finland sold to buyers in England a quantity of timber. The contract described the sale as a sale of "wood goods hereinafter specified," to be loaded at one of two named ports & "to be ready for shipment on June 15, 1928." A specification followed, giving particulars of the timber sold, & at the foot of the contract was the stipulation "loading place & ready date to be definitely declared to buyers by Apr. 1, 1928." Several clauses were printed on the back of the contract, one of them being "the buyers shall not reject the goods herein specified. . . ." In the events which happened delay occurred in delivery of the timber, & a large proportion of the goods which were finally tendered consisted of goods of the 1929 season & not of goods which had been ready for shipment on June 15, 1928. The buyers refused to accept some of the goods so tendered &, as required by the contract, the dispute was referred to arbn. An award was made in the form of a special case, deciding, subject to the opinion of the ct., that the buyers were entitled to reject:—Held: the date of readiness for shipment was of the essence of the contract, & the words "ready for shipment on June 15, 1928," were part of the description of the goods sold & were not a mere warranty; & the clause providing that the buyers should not reject, though not required in cases where there had only been a breach of warranty & intended to protect the sellers where there had been a breach of a condition, did not apply where the goods tendered by the sellers were not of the contract description.—MONTAGUE L. The sellers made several deliveries under the contract amounting to nearly half the contract amount which the buyer accepted, but eventually the buyer requested the sellers to cancel the delivery of 782 tons then due for delivery under the contract, which the sellers consented to do on the buyer agreeing to pay £782 by four instalments on specified dates. The buyer paid two instalments under the agreement, & then discovered that all the meal that had been delivered to him under the contract had been adulterated & was not of the contract description, so that the deliveries might have been rejected by him. less with regard to the adulteration & had delivered the meal in good faith, thereupon brought this action to recover the balance of the £782 due under the agreement. The buyer by his defence alleged that the agreement was made under a mutual mistake of fact in that both the sellers & the buyer contracted in the belief that the goods supplied by the sellers were in accordance with the contract, whereas the meal was not in accordance with the contract, & he counterclaimed for rescission of the agreement & for the return of the money paid under it & also for damages for the breach of contract:—Held: the various deliveries of meal which had been made by the sellers before the date of the agreement did not, by reason of the adulteration, answer the contract description & therefore might have been rejected by the buyer if the defects had been discovered in time, notwithstanding the clause in the contract: "the goods to be taken with all faults & defects, damaged or inferior, if any, at valuation to be arranged . . ." because that clause applied only to goods which answered the trade description, & did not shut out the overriding warranty in Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 13, that in a sale of goods by description there is an implied condition that the goods shall correspond with the description. Further, that the clause in the contract that "Each delivery or shipment shall be treated as a separate contract, & the failure to give or to take any delivery or shipment shall not cancel the contract as to future deliveries or shipments" could not be construed so as to defeat the rights of the buyer under Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 31 (2), to treat the breach of contract by the sellers as a repudiation of the whole contract; notwithstanding that the sellers had no knowledge of the defects & had no intention to deliver defective articles, inasmuch as the intention of a seller must be judged from his acts. But although the buyer, if he had at the date of the agreement for cancellation ascertained all the facts relating to the past deliveries, might have been entitled to treat the contract as having been repudiated by the sellers, yet as it was in the circumstances doubtful whether he would have so elected, the defence that the agreement had been entered into under such a mutual mistake as would justify a rescission of the agreement failed, even apart from any question of restitutio in integrum. The buyer, however, was entitled to damages in respect of the defective quality of the meal that had been delivered, & to a declaration that, in view of the defective quality of the meal, he was not bound to take delivery of the meal that was undelivered.—ROBERT A. The goggles were made of laminated glass consisting of two sheets of glass & an interposed sheet of plastic, & evidence showed that the term "safety-glass" in 1932 referred only to such laminated glass. In the opticians' catalogue notice was given that the purchaser of any goggles of the type here in question was given free insurance to cover £1,000 in the case of loss of sight or expenses incurred in the event of a lesser injury to an eye caused by splintering. In 1935 the aviator was involved in a flying accident in which (inter alia), he suffered injury due to a splinter from the goggles entering his eye. Pltf. stated in evidence that she told deft.'s saleswoman who attended her that she wanted walking shoes, that she had a bunion on her foot & wanted a comfortable pair of shoes; that she was shown three pairs, & finally purchased a particular pair which she had tried on, on the recommendation of the saleswoman. On the third occasion of wearing them the heel of one of the shoes came off, & as a result pltf. sustained a fractured leg. Evidence was given that the shoes were "a very bad job" & that the heels were not properly fastened on:—Held: (1) there was evidence fit to be submitted to a jury in respect of a cause of action under sect. 19 (2) of the Sale of Goods Act, 1923 (N.S.W.) as there was evidence upon which the jury was entitled to find (a) that the shoes were bought by description, & (b) that the implied condition that they were of merchantable quality had been broken; (2) in respect of any cause of action founded upon sect. 19 (1) of the Sale of Goods Act, 1923, it was for the jury, upon the evidence, to determine what was the particular purpose made known to the seller for which the buyer required the shoes, & whether the buyer relied upon the seller's judgment in that respect, & whether the shoes were reasonably fit for such purpose.—DAVID JONES, LTD. v. WILLIS (1935), 52 C. 726a. ——.]—A firm of shipbuilders agreed to build for & sell to the U. M. Co. two sister ships with main propelling Diesel engines designed for carrying petroleum or molasses, each ship to be classed A1 at Lloyd's. The ships with their engines were distinguished in the shipbuilders' yard by the numbers 972 & 973. The shipbuilders entered into a contract with the M. B. & B. Co., who were makers of ships' propellers out of manganese bronze prepared by a special process, for the manufacture of two propellers for these ships, to be of special Parsons manganese bronze, of a specified diameter, & pitch, each with four blades of a specified total developed area & of a maximum brake horse-power at a specified number of revolutions per minute. Each propeller was to be finished, chipped, & polished in style of the highest class, with boss bored, faced, & keyway cut to the shipbuilders' template, with edges brought up to fine lines, to be true to pitch; all in accordance with the shipbuilders' blue print, to be ready for fitting to the shaft on delivery; & to be to the entire satisfaction of the U. M. Co.'s representative & that of the shipbuilders themselves. They were to be delivered on July 14 & Aug. 1, 1930, respectively. The working drawings gave the information necessary to enable the work to be carried out, including the thickness required along the medial lines of the blades; but beyond this & apart from the direction that the " edges " were " to be brought up to fine lines," further details as to the thickness of the blades were left to the skill & judgment of the M. B. & B. Co. Two propellers constructed in accordance with the design & working drawing were passed by Lloyd's surveyor as satisfactory in tensile strength & similar respects, & were fitted to the two vessels. On trial the propeller fitted to No. 972 caused so much noise that the vessel could not be classed as A1 at Lloyd's & the U. M. Co. would not accept it. The propeller which had been fitted to No. 973 was tried on No. 972 & proved satisfactory. The M. B. & B. Co. then made a second propeller for No. 972, without prejudice to the rights of the parties. Although this propeller conformed with the design & working drawing, & was free from fault in other respects, it nevertheless showed the same defect as the former one, & the U. M. Co. were again dissatisfied. The M. B. & B. Co. then made yet another propeller upon the same terms as to the rights of the parties, & this last attempt proved satisfactory. The shipbuilders brought an action against the M. B. & B. Co. claiming £6,277 5*s.* 1*d.* damages for delay in executing the work & expenses incurred in consequence:—Held: pltfs. were 856b. —— —— Defect ascertained by third party.] Crane manufacturers sold a crane in parts to a firm of builders, the arrangement being that the parts were to be assembled by the builders' men. The builders had in their employment an experienced crane erector, who in assembling the parts found that certain cog-wheels worked stiffly, did not fit accurately, & required to be remedied; he accordingly marked in chalk the places where there was inaccurate fitting, saying at the same time that he would have to report the matter to his employers. Before the defects so discovered had been remedied the erector began working the crane, & while he was so engaged a part of it fell & killed him, the fall being due to the defects above mentioned. In an action by his widow under the Fatal Accidents Act, 1846 (c. 93), against the manufacturers of the crane:—Held: the defects being discoverable on reasonable inspection, &, having in fact been discovered by the deceased man, the manufacturers owed him no duty & were not liable for the accident.—FARR v. BUTTERS BROS. & Co., [1932] 2 K. The second deft. suggested that pltf.'s hair should be dyed with Oloxo, a dye she described as harmless, & prepared by & bought by the second deft. from the first deft. Pltf. raised objections to the use of such a dye, but was assured it was safe to use. The pltf. as the result of the use of the dye had an acute attack of dermatitis & nervous trouble. The first deft. by its agent had warranted the dye as safe, but for trade reasons it had supplied the second deft. through a wholesale hairdressers' sundriesman. A booklet was issued with the dye which stated it was dangerous if used without a skin test; but no warning was given to the second deft. as to the danger. A certain quantity of the dye being purchased by the second deft., she was entitled to & did attend certain lectures & demonstrations given on behalf of the first deft., & the lecturer upon behalf of the co. stated that the co. would indemnify hairdressers using this dye against claims arising out of its use:—Held: (1) pltf. was entitled to recover against the second deft. in contract; (2) pltf. was entitled to recover against the first deft. in tort; (3) the second deft. was entitled to recover from the first deft. damages for breach of contract, & those damages were the damages the second deft. had to pay to pltf. in this action & her costs of the action; (4) the indemnity given at the lectures was not made at such a time that it could be considered a part of the contract with the second deft.—PARKER v. OLOXO, LTD., & SENIOR, [1937] 3 All E. 916a. —— Warranty excluded as to defect not apparent on reasonable examination.] — Claimants, grain exporters in Canada, sold a quantity of barley to resps., merchants in Germany. The sale was on c.i.f. terms, & the contract contained a clause providing that the grain was not warranted free from defect rendering it unmerchantable if such defect would not be apparent on reasonable examination. The barley was of a type which was generally used for feeding pigs, & shortly before the consignment which was the subject of this contract arrived in Germany other barley from the same crop had been delivered to German buyers & had been given by them to pigs, with the result that the pigs refused to eat it or, if they ate it, became ill. The German Govt. thereupon ordered that no further barley of the crop should be admitted into the country until they had made an analysis & discovered the cause of the trouble, & accordingly when the barley covered by this contract arrived resps. refused to take up the documents, & eventually the barley was resold at a lower price. The claimants, in an arbn., claimed as damages for non-acceptance the difference between the contract price & the price realised on resale, & the arbitrators decided in their favour, subject to the opinion of the ct. on a special case. It appeared that the barley was infected by a fungus which produced the ill-effects complained of, but that the presence of the fungus could not have been ascertained by any ordinary commercial examination :—Held : (1) as the defect was not one which could have been discovered on any reasonable examination by claimants before shipment, claimants were protected by the contract & were entitled to recover ; (2) the finding of the arbitrators that the barley was not in fact unmerchantable could not be upset on the evidence. The award was therefore confirmed.—CANADA ATLANTIC GRAIN EXPORT CO. (INC.) v. EILERS (1929), 35 Com. Cas. 90.

1376a. —— Delivery order not in accordance with contract—Agreement for delivery order "from bond"—Delivery order of goods in bond.]—F., a financier, L., a distiller, D. & M., a firm of shipbrokers, & one A. were minded to load a ship with a cargo of whisky to be carried across the Atlantic & sold in the U.S. or at some point from which it could easily be smuggled into the U.S., in violation of the laws of that country. D. & M. entered into a contract to buy a steamer for £2,565; F. advanced £256 as a deposit on the purchase. On Oct. 26, 1927, an agreement was entered into between F., L. & D. & M., whereby L. agreed to sell to D. & M. 7,500 cases of whisky at 27*s.* 6*d.* a case free on board at Leith or Glasgow to be delivered ex warehouse not later than Nov. 26. D. & M. were to take delivery on board a vessel of a regular line of steamers. Payment was to be made by a bill for £5,500 drawn by F., accepted by A. & indorsed to L., & a second bill for £4,812 accepted by A. & D. & M., both bills to be payable ninety days from Nov. 26, & to be drawn & accepted on Oct. 26 & handed to L. to hold as security until he should hand the shipping documents or delivery order from bond on or before Nov. 26. L. agreed to lend D. & M. £2,500 for the purchase of the steamer, the loan to be secured by a first mtge. on the steamer. F. agreed to lend D. & M. £1,000 at 40 per cent. per annum interest to be secured by a second mtge. on the steamer. D. & M. agreed to insure the steamer for £1,000 against all risks, including seizure or confiscation, & £2,500 against marine risks & deliver to L. cover notes for £1,500 & £1,000, & to F. a cover note for £1,000. 1399a. —— Appointment as "sole selling agents."]—By an agreement in writing certain manufacturers of bricks & other building materials appointed a firm of builders' merchants "sole selling agents of all bricks & other materials manufactured at their works." The agreement was expressed to be for three years & afterwards continuous subject to twelve months' notice by either party. While the agreement was in force the manufacturers informed the merchants that they intended in the future to sell their goods themselves without the intervention of any agent, & thereafter they effected sales to customers directly. In an action by the merchants against the manufacturers for breach of the agreement:—Held: (1) the effect of the agreement was to confer on pltfs. the sole right of selling the goods manufactured by defts. at their works, so that neither defts. themselves nor any agent appointed by them, other than pltfs., should have the right of selling such goods; (2) the agreement was one of vendor & purchaser & not one of principal & agent.

letting of the lorry by defts. to H. on an agreement in the form of a hire-purchase agreement. The transaction was carried out by means of the printed forms used by defts. in their business, which were more appropriate to a case in which they bought a vehicle & let it on hire-purchase to a third party, than to the present case. H. being in possession of the lorry then fraudulently sold it to pltfs., who were not aware of the previous transaction between H. & defts. Instead of doing this, he arranged to pledge them with defts. for the sum of £178 0*s.* 6*d.* Defts., on Aug. 21, 1936, drew a cheque for that amount in favour of L. & Co., & that cheque was cleared on Aug. 22. L. & Co. then received an order from H. to deliver the furs to defts., which was done. Defts., who had no notice of pltfs.' title, contended that by virtue of Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 25 (1), they were entitled to hold these furs as if delivery to them had been expressly authorised by pltfs. :—Held : the furs after L. & Co. had been paid the £178 0*s.* 6*d.* by defts. were in the possession of H. as vendor in possession, & there was a disposition or pledge of them by H. to defts. They were entitled to hold the furs under this pledge & the claim of pltfs. for delivery to them failed. The word " possession " in Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 25 (1), must be construed with reference to Factors Act, 1889 (c. 45), s. 1 (2), & includes possession by another person on behalf of the person whose possession is material, & it was immaterial that the agreement of pledge was made before the transfer of the furs could be carried out.—CITY FUR MANUFACTURING CO., LTD. v. FUKEENBOND (BROKERS) LONDON, LTD., [1937] 1 All E. 1461d. Sale under hire-purchase agreement.]—On May 17, 1935, T., a branch manager of pltf. co., bought for & on behalf of the co. from C. a motor-car which was forthwith let on hire under a hire-purchase agreement to F., an employee of C., who was not in a financial position to buy a car on any terms. C., T. & F. all knew that the hire-purchase transaction was not genuine in the sense that it was never intended that F.'s part in it should be a real one or that the car should be delivered to F., either by its physical transfer to his custody or by C. submitting to hold it as his bailee. C. made such payments to pltf. co. as were made under the agreement between co. & F., &, although F. had agreed not to change the permanent garage of the vehicle, which was expressed to be at his mother's residence, nor to part with its possession or control, & had signed a document acknowledging that he had received delivery of the car, the car remained in C.'s garage, in his possession, & under his control. On Aug. 9, 1935, C. let the car on hire under a further hire-purchase agreement to deft., who took it in good faith & without notice of the transaction between C. & T. In an action by pltf. co. to recover the car from deft. :—Held : C., having sold the car to pltf. co., had continued in possession of it within sect. 8 of Factors Act, 1889 (c. 45), with the result that the delivery or transfer by C. of the car to deft. had the same effect as if C. had been expressly authorised by pltf. co. to make the same, & pltf. co. could not, therefore, succeed in the action.—UNION TRANSPORT FINANCE, LTD. v. BALLARDIE, [1937] 1 K. 1678a. Right to compensation—Option not to ship goods—Short delivery.]—By a printed form of contract for the sale of timber it was provided that " In the event of under-shipment of any item buyers are to accept . . . the quantity shipped, but have the right to claim compensation for such short shipment." This form of contract was used for a contract for sale of timber for shipment from a port in the Arctic Circle which is open for shipping only for about 21 days in the year. The details of the particular contract were added to the printed form in typewriting & a clause was also added which provided that the goods were " sold subject to shipment : any goods not shipped to be cancelled." In a claim for damages for short delivery :—Held : the contract gave to the sellers an option whether or not they would ship any timber, but once shipped the sellers were obliged to supply the timber in fulfilment of the contract. If, however, the full quantity of timber was not shipped, the buyers could not recover damages for short delivery.—HOLLIS BROS. & CO., LTD. v. WHITE SEA TIMBER TRUST, LTD., [1936] 3 All E. 1728a. —— Provision in contract that each item should be considered separately.]—A contract for the sale of timber contained a clause dealing with allowances for overshipment & undershipment, concluding with the words " each item of this contract to be considered a separate interest." The buyer rejected the whole of the goods on the ground that part of them did not comply with the contract specification :—Held : the stipulation that each item was to be treated as a separate unit was only applicable to disputes with respect to quantity, & as part of the goods were defective in quality, the buyer was entitled to reject the whole, in accordance with Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 30 (3).—RAAHE O/Y OSAKEYTIO v. GODDARD (1935), 154 L. 1762a. Goods not complying with statutory requirements.]—The main tests to be considered in applying sect. 31 (2) are, first, the quantitative ratio which the breach bears to the contract as a whole, &, secondly, the degree of probability that such a breach will be repeated.

A contract in writing was entered into between pltfs. & defts. for the sale by the former to the latter of 100 tons of rag flock to be delivered in three loads of 1½ tons each per week as required, & the weekly deliveries to be separately paid for, it being stipulated that there should be a written guarantee that all flock supplied should conform to Govt. standard. By statute the Govt. standard was that of not more than 30 parts of chlorine in 100,000 parts of flock, & it was made a penal offence to use flock not conforming thereto. The sixteenth load delivered was duly accepted & used, &, after two further loads had been delivered, defts. notified pltfs. that a sample drawn from the sixteenth load had been analysed & showed a contamination of 250 parts of chlorine, & defts. claimed to rescind the contract. During ensuing negotiations two more deliveries were taken, but defts. adhered to their claim to rescind & refused to accept any further deliveries. Pltfs. thereupon brought an action against defts. for damages for breach of contract by the latter in so refusing. Defts. alleged, in defence, that pltfs. by making the defective delivery had repudiated the whole contract, whereby defts. were not obliged to accept further deliveries. It was found at the trial that pltfs.' business was well conducted, & that the contamination complained of by defts. was extraordinary:—Held: in these circumstances pltfs.' breach of the contract was not, within Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 31 (2), a repudiation of the whole contract, that defts.' refusal of further deliveries was a breach by them of the contract, & pltfs. were entitled to judgment on their claim in the action.—MAPLE FLOCK CO., LTD. v. UNIVERSAL FURNITURE PRODUCTS (WEMBLEY), LTD., [1934] 1 K. 1812a. —— —— Shipment of goods before contract—Ship visiting other ports before issue of bill of lading.]—A contract, dated July 2, provided for the sale of frozen rabbits & their shipment from Sydney c.i.f. Liverpool by a named steamer to sail during Aug. The bill of lading, which was dated Aug. 17, stated that the goods had been shipped by the steamer, then lying in Sydney. The steamer shipped the goods, or the bulk of them, at Sydney on June 25, when she proceeded to Queensland ports, thereafter returning to Sydney, & finally sailing from that port for Liverpool on Aug. 17. The buyers declined to take delivery of the goods, & the sellers claimed damages from them for breach of contract:—Held: the sellers were not entitled to recover, inasmuch as they had themselves committed breaches of the contract, by supplying goods the shipment of which had already taken place before the date of the contract of sale, & by tendering a bill of lading the issue of which had been delayed for so long as seven weeks after the shipment, the steamer having in the meantime visited other ports several hundred miles from the port of shipment.—FOREMAN & ELLAMS, LTD. v. BLACKBURN, [1928] 2 K. 1814a. —— —— Date of shipment incorrectly stated.]—The seller under a c.i.f. contract tendered to the buyer a bill of lading which stated, not fraudulently, but contrary to the fact, that the shipment had taken place in the contract month. Being unaware of this fact at the time of the tender, the buyer accepted the shipment, & entered into sub-contracts for the sale of a portion of the goods, those sub-contracts containing a clause that "the bill or bills of lading shall be conclusive evidence of the date of shipment." The sub-purchasers refused to take delivery, alleging that the shipment had not been made during the contract month. The buyer under the original contract having then ascertained that the goods had not been shipped during the contract month:—Held: (1) he was entitled to damages for the breach by the seller of his obligation to deliver a bill of lading stating the date of shipment correctly, the measure of damages being the difference between the market price & the contract price of the goods; (2) the buyer was not bound to enforce, for the purpose of minimising the damages, the contracts with the sub-purchasers, as to do so, after he knew that the shipment date was incorrect, might seriously injure his commercial reputation.—FINLAY (JAMES) & CO. v. N. Under contracts made in 1929 they agreed to sell to resps. certain Russian redwood & whitewood staves of specified dimensions. Resps. alleged that the goods delivered did not satisfy the description as to measurement & the matter was referred to arbn. pursuant to the terms of the contract. The arbitrator found, in effect, that the staves which under the contract description were to be of the thickness of half an inch, when received, exceeded half an inch in thickness & were, at shipment, also in excess of that measure, though not to the same extent; but he held that the staves, when shipped, were commercially within & merchantable under the contract specification & that were not entitled to reject the goods. The award being in the form of a special case came before WRIGHT, J., who held that the difference in the sizes was not of such a trivial character as to justify it being disregarded by the ct., & the finding as to measurement showed that the goods were not those contracted to be sold, & it was those goods, & not their commercial equivalent, that resps. were entitled to demand. The Ct. of Appeal confirmed that view. Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 13, provides that where there is a contract for the sale of goods by description there is an implied condition that the goods shall correspond with the description:—Held: the fact that the goods were merchantable under the contracts was no test proper to be applied in determining whether the goods satisfied the contract description: the use of the word "commercially" itself showed that, while the goods did not in fact answer the description, they could, as a matter of commerce, be so dealt with, but the rights of resps. under the contracts were not so limited.—ARCOS, LTD. v. RONAASEN (E. About a quarter of the whole was shipped as deck cargo & suffered injury by being so carried, & the rest was carried under deck. The buyers rejected the whole shipment:—Held: the words "herein specified" did not refer merely to the part of the contract headed "Specification" but meant "herein described," & part of the description of the goods was that they were to be carried under deck, & as about a quarter of the goods was carried on deck the buyers had the right to reject the whole.—WHITE SEA TIMBER TRUST, LTD. v. W. When the cargo arrived the buyer found that, after allowing for the permitted variation, in some classes of the timber there had been overshipment, in some classes there had been short shipment, & in some classes there had been no shipment at all. The buyer thereupon rejected the whole of the timber on the ground that the sellers had failed to perform the contract:—Held: on a special case stated by an arbitrator, the clause as to rejection could not prevent rejection where the goods tendered were not the goods "specified," &, as the goods tendered were not, in respect of quantity, the goods speci-

The cash was paid, but the purchaser failed to deliver the lorries :—Held : this was an entire contract of sale, in which defts. had a right to discharge £225 of the purchase price by the delivery of the lorries within a month; but upon their failure to do so, pltfs. were entitled to sue for the remainder of the purchase price as a debt due. In case either party shall suspend payment, he shall be deemed to be in default, & the other party shall after giving notice by letter or telegram to the defaulting party, & notwithstanding any bkpcy. or liquidation, be entitled immediately to re-sell or re-purchase, as the case may be, & shall also be entitled to be paid, or to prove in any bkpcy., liquidation or otherwise, for the loss, if any, or shall account for the profit, if any, occasioned by such re-sale or repurchase." Before the arrival of the first of the ships which were carrying the parcels appropriated to the various contracts, the sellers suspended payment. The buyers becoming aware of this, proceeded to buy wheat of the description which they were expecting to get under their contracts with the sellers, in order to have wheat to deliver in fulfilment of the contracts which they had made. No notice of any kind was given to the sellers of such purchases. The liquidator of the sellers claimed against the buyers the difference between the price payable under the contracts between the sellers & the buyers & the price at which the buyers purchased the wheat of similar quality & quantity :—Held : in the event of suspension of payment by one party, the party not in default had an option either to wait until the time for fulfilment of the contract & exercise his common law rights in respect of the default of fulfilment or to proceed under clause 5, & re-sell or re-purchase as the case might be. In order to proceed under this clause, he must give the notice required by the clause & he would be under a liability to account; the buyers, having given no notice, had not proceeded under clause 5, & were not liable to account to the sellers.—SHIPTON, ANDERSON & Co. Pltfs. delivered a machine in pursuance of the contract, but it was not satisfactory ; & after pltfs. had made several unsuccessful efforts to remedy its defects defts. rejected it. Pltfs. contended that the failure of the machine to give satisfaction was owing to improper user by defts., & defts. contended that it was due to negligence or lack of skill on the part of pltfs. Defts. had paid £350 on account of the price of the machine, & pltfs. brought this action to recover the balance of the price ; defts. counterclaimed for the return of their £350 & for certain expenses incurred by them in obtaining other machinery & in respect of other matters. The contract contained a guarantee by pltfs. to replace defective parts or make good defective workmanship, & added : " We do not give any other guarantee & we do not accept responsibility for consequential damages " ; & pltfs. contended that by the latter clause they were relieved from liability for any damages caused to defts. by the fact that they had supplied a machine which was not in accordance with the contract :—Held : on the facts, the machine supplied by pltfs. was not in accordance with the contract & defts. were justified in rejecting it ; & upon a true construction of the guarantee clause pltfs. were not relieved from the obligation to pay damages arising directly & naturally from their breach of contract. S. paid the money, but defts., having doubts as to the bona fides of the transaction, refused either to deliver the cigarettes or return the purchase money. Pltf. thereupon brought the present action for the recovery of the money. MACNAGHTEN, J., by whom the action was tried, dismissed it on the ground that pltf. had been guilty of an attempt to obtain goods by false pretences & that the ct. would not assist him to recover the money. On appeal:—Held: to succeed in his action for money had & received pltf. must prove the exact circumstances in which the money was paid & the circumstances which he said entitled him on ground of justice to have an order for repayment; if he proceeded to that proof he could only establish his claim by proving facts which showed that he was engaged in a criminal attempt to obtain goods by false pretences; & the ct. on well-established principles would refuse to give its aid to any claim which could only be established by proving facts of that nature.—BERG v. SADLER & MOORE, [1937] 2 K. cargo, they broke their contract & refused to deliver the documents to their purchasers. The breach of contract was admitted, the only question being with regard to the measure of damages. The matter went to arbn., & the arbitrators stated that they were " unable to find that it was in the contemplation of the parties or ought to have been in the contemplation of Messrs. P. at that time (i.e. the date of the contract), that the cargo would be resold, or was likely to be resold before delivery; in fact, the chances of its being resold as a cargo & of its being taken delivery of by Messrs. H. were about equal." There was evidence before the arbitrators that Messrs. H., the purchasers, carried on a trade in which they used themselves about half of the cargoes which they bought & resold the remainder: —Held: (1) that the contract which was not merely for the sale of corn in bulk, but for the sale of the cargo of an individual ship was effectively made on Nov. 3, 1925. That contract & the conditions which it incorporated showed that it was contemplated that the cargo might be passed on by way of subsale if the buyer did not choose to keep it for himself, & that the seller, in such a case, contracted to put the buyer in a position to fulfil his sub-contracts if he entered into them. Whether the latter was likely to enter into such sub-contracts & pass the cargo down a chain of resales was not material. It was enough that the contract contemplated by its terms that he should have the right to do so if he chose; (2) a breach having been admitted, the measure of damages was not merely the amount of damage measured by loss in the market which arose in the ordinary course of business from the breach. It extended, whenever the special circumstances required this, to such possible damages as might reasonably be supposed to have been in the contemplation of both parties at the time they made the contract, as the probable result of the breach of it.—Re HALL (R. & H.), LTD. & PIM (W. Such insurance to cover the copra until delivered in the ordinary course of transit into warehouse at the port of destination." In policies taken out by the sellers the goods & the freight were valued separately, & there was a " freight contingency clause," as follows: " On freight payable at destination . . . being increased value of copra through payment of freight or from such time as freight becomes due at destination, this insurance being deemed to be part of the total amount insured on the copra valued at such total amount." By the bill of lading the freight was payable only if the vessel arrived at the place of destination. The vessel took fire on the voyage & with her cargo became a total loss. The insurance co. paid to the buyers the insurance on the goods, but refused to pay the insurance on the freight on the ground that it had never become covered. The buyers then claimed damages from the sellers on the ground that the policies did not comply with the contract:— LODERS & NUCOLINE, LTD. v. BANK OF NEW ZEALAND (1929), 45 T. L. R. 203.

2723a. ——.]—In June, 1930, resps., pltfs. in the action, made large purchases of Russian timber from applts. The purchases were made in reliance on terms contained in a price list issued by applts., one of the terms being that resps. should not resell the timber at less than certain specified prices. Subsequently resps. discovered that before the date of their purchases applts. had entered into a contract with another party to supply him with timber on terms which were much more favourable than those under which resps. were purchasing, the result being that owing to the competition of that other party in the market resps. were unable to resell their timber. They therefore brought this action claiming damages, firstly, on the ground that applts. had induced them to purchase the timber by falsely representing that they were not granting better terms to any other buyer; & secondly, on the ground that there was an implied term in applts.' contract with resps. that applts. had not previously to entering into that contract done anything which would render that contract ineffective, & that applts. had broken that implied term & had committed a breach of duty in not disclosing the fact to resps. :—Held : applts. had induced resps. to purchase the timber by fraudulent misrepresentations, & the appeal must therefore fail.—JEWSON & SONS, LTD. v. ARCOS, LTD. PART IX. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 2.

t (p. 687) i. —— —— ——.]—A contract for the sale of goods cannot be rescinded on the ground of an innocent misrepresentation inducing the contract, unless the misrepresentation was such that there is a complete difference in subject-matter between the thing bargained for & that obtained, so as to constitute a failure of consideration.—WATT v. WESTHOVEN, [1933] V. L. R. 458; Argus L. R. 448.—AUS.

PART X.

n (p. 688) i. —— —— ——.]—To come within the provisions of Bulk Sales Act, R. S. N. S., 1923, a sale must be a sale of an interest in a business or trade in which there is "a stock of goods, wares, & merchandise."—NORRIS v. MCKENZIE, [1933] 3 D. L. R. 713; 6 M. P. R. 556.—CAN.

e (p. 688) i. —— —— Sale in ordinary course of business of substantially whole stock-in-trade.]—A sale of 80 per cent. of the stock of one co. to another held to be a bulk sale.—COMMERCIAL MOTOR BODIES & CARRIAGES, LTD. v. PERTH, LTD., [1930] 4 D. L. R. 1010; 66 O. L. R. 209; affg., [1930] 3 D. L. R. 617; 65 O. L. R. 383.—CAN.

g (p. 689) i. —— —— —— ——.]—On an interpleader issue resulting from the seizure under execution of a motor truck, the claimant being the seller of the truck under a conditional sale agreement :—Held : the description of the chattel in the agreement was sufficient to satisfy the requirements of Conditional Sales Act, R. S. A., 1922, s. 2, although it did not state that the chattel was a motor truck.—O'HANLON v. COOKE & HUGHES, [1935] 2 W. W. R. 481; affd. [1936] 2 W. W. R. 373; 4 D. L. R. 58; 6 F. L. J. (Can.) 115.—CAN.

m (p. 689) i. —— —— —— Creditor —Who is.]—Pltf. was held not to be in a position to attach the bulk sale, as he was not a creditor as the result of any contractual relationship between them. The term cannot be extended to include persons who have contingent claims arising out of torts or transactions of a tortious character until the relationship has become really that of debtor & creditor by virtue of a judgment.—COMMERCIAL MOTOR BODIES & CARRIAGES, LTD. v. PERTH, LTD., [1930] 4 D. L. R. 1010; 66 O. L. R. 209; affg., [1930] 3 D. L. R. 617; 65 O. L. R. 383.—CAN.

q (p. 689) i. —— —— Landlord.]—A lease of shop premises contained a proviso that if the term should be taken in execution or attachment, or if the lease should make any assignment for the benefit of creditors or, becoming bkpt. or insolvent, should take the benefit of any Act in force for bkpt. or insolvent debtors, the then current month's rent & the rent for the three months following should immediately become due & payable & the term forfeited & void. During the term, the lessee made a bulk sale of the goods in the shop, & deft. co. was appointed trustee under Bulk Sales Act :—Held : the making of a bulk sale did not bring the proviso into operation. Bulk Sales Act, s. 4, makes the Assignments & Preferences Act applicable to the distribution of the bulk sale purchase-money; but the latter Act does not give a landlord a preferential lien for unearned rent.—MORTON v. CANADIAN CREDIT MEN'S ASSOCN., [1929] 1 D. q (p. 689) ii. —— —— On failure to comply with Act.]—The creation in the Bulk Sales Act of a presumption of fraud on the part of both purchaser & vendor as against the vendor's creditors, indicates a legislative intention to put a sale in bulk made without compliance with that Act in the same category as sales made with an intention to defraud the vendor's creditors. This presumption of fraud has the effect of bringing into play all other statutes passed for the protection of creditors against a fraudulent sale of his goods by a debtor to the prejudice of his creditors, & the right to recover from a fraudulent transferee the proceeds of goods coming into his possession by an invalid transfer, & resold by him, is given by Assignments Act, R. S. N. S., 1928, s. 21 (1).—GARSON v. CANADIAN CREDIT MEN'S TRUST ASSOCN., [1929] 3 D. L. R. 300; S. C. R. 282; 10 C. B. R. 504; affg., sub nom. Re CROUSE, [1928] 2 D. L. R. 985; 60 N. S. t (p. 689) i. —— —— Fees.]—A trustee under Bulk Sales Act, R. S. N. S., 1923, is entitled to a fee of 3 per cent. of the total proceeds of sale, which is to be deducted from the claims of general creditors.—Re CRYSTAL SPRINGS MANUFACTURING CO., [1935] 4 D. L. R. 331.—CAN.

g (p. 690) i. —— —— Sufficiency of.]—The fact that the name of the vendor of a motor car sold under a lien agreement appears on the covering over the spare tire carried at the rear of the car is not a sufficient compliance with sect. 9 of Conditional Sales Act, R. S. S., 1920 (c. 201), as amended by 1928 (c. 81), s. 3.—GLOEDEN v. HICKS MOTOR CO., LTD. (Sask.), [1929] 4 D. L. R. 245; 3 W. W. R. 126.—CAN.

k (p. 690) i. —— —— ——.]—Deft. & H. purchased from pltf. a team of horses, to be paid for in weekly instalments. The terms of the bargain were embodied in a document signed by deft. & H. in which they promised to pay at the times stated in a schedule endorsed on the document, & it was provided that "possession of the said property shall not pass until this note is paid in full," & pltf. "has full power to declare the note due & take possession of said property at any time he deems himself unsecure, even before the maturity of this note." Possession was in fact given to the purchasers :—Held : the parties did not really intend that possession should be retained by pltf.—HARRIS v. TONG, [1930] 3 D. L. R. 32; 65 O. L. m (p. 690) i. —— —— ——.]—A contract for the erection of a building is not one for the sale of goods but for work & labour, & the owner is not a "purchaser," within Conditional Sales Act, of materials, e.g. a refrigeration system, placed in accordance with the contract in the building; &, in any event if the materials are not bought by the contractor until after he has entered into the contract with the owner, the latter is not a "subsequent purchaser."—WELCH v. GENERAL REFRIGERATION, LTD., [1930] 2 D. n (p. 690) i. —— —— Document giving power to seize goods.]—A document purporting to be a lien note, but made payable to one who did not own the goods on which it was given & had not sold them to the maker of the note, is not a lien note within Conditional Sales Act, but merely an authority to seize & sell the goods in default of payment; &, for the same reasons that a chattel mtgee. cannot buy at the mtge. sale, the holder of the note is not entitled to buy at his sale under the note.—MCCORMICK v. HAWORTH (or HARWORTH), [1929] 2 D. L. R. 835; 1 W. W. R. 129; 23 S. L. R. 312.—CAN.

n (p. 690) ii. —— —— ——.]—An agreement for the sale of goods for valuable consideration which gives the seller the right to seize & sell the goods on default by the buyer in making his payments thereunder is not invalid between the immediate parties because of the fact that it is not a conditional sale agreement within Conditional Sales Act. Creditors of the buyer who have had notice of such an agreement are in equity bound by it & their rights are subject to the right of the seller to seize & sell the goods.—HUDSON'S BAY CO. v. CAMPBELL, [1933] 3 W. W. R. 289.—CAN.

n (p. 690) iii. —— —— Exchange between retail dealers.]—Two retail dealers in motor cars agreed upon an exchange of a certain car from the stock of one for a certain car from the stock of the other, the difference in value between the two cars to be paid for in cash. The cars were delivered & each gave the other a cheque for the full value of the respective cars:—Held: whether or not the transaction was a sale or a barter, it was not a sale "in the ordinary course of his business" within Conditional Sales Act, s. 4.—ALBUTT (W. J.) & CO., LTD. v. RIDDELL, [1930] 1 W. W. R. 555; 2 D. L. R. 166; 42 B. C. R. 344; revsd., [1930] 2 W. W. R. 623; 4 D. L. R. 111; 43 B. C. R. 74.—CAN.

p (p. 690) i. —— —— —— Notice of seizure—Whether necessary.]—There can be no seizure by a person of goods which are in his own possession & control. The word "seizure" in Extra-Judicial Seizures Act, R. S. A., 1922, has the ordinary meaning of the word, i.e. a forcible taking of possession. Since said Act applies only to cases where seizure is required, it does not apply to the case where goods sold under a conditional sale agreement have been voluntarily returned by a buyer in default to the seller & are in the latter's possession.—PACIFIC FINANCE CO. v. IRELAND, [1931] 2 W. W. R. 593; 4 D. L. R. 186; 25 Alta. L. R. 369.—CAN.

kk (p. 690) i. —— —— —— ——.]—The mere retaking of possession will not, without more, bring the contract to an end, if it is made clear that the seller's purpose in retaining possession is to hold the goods as security for the purchase-money, the contract will not be rescinded nor will the purchaser be released from his obligation to pay the purchase-price.—MAXWELL RADIO CO. v. DE WILDE, MAXWELL RADIO CO. v. BLONTROCK, [1931] 2 D. mm (p. 690) i. —— —— —— Authority to resell.]—E., a dealer in automobiles, sold, or went through the form of selling, an automobile to C. under a conditional sale agreement, taking a promissory note for a part of the price. This note he took to defts., an automobile financing co., & discounted it, at the same time transferring the agreement to defts. who duly filed it in accordance with Conditional Sales Act. The automobile was left in the possession of E. who dishonestly sold it to pltf.:—Held: the real owner of the car being E. or C. or both, E. had authority to dispose of his security, the conditional sale agreement, to defts., & defts. were thereafter the owners in law of the automobile.—BENDER v. NATIONAL ACCEPTANCE CORPN., LTD., [1929] 1 D. mm (p. 690) ii. Delivery of goods for purpose of resale—What amounts to.]—Deft. co. having a lien upon two houses being erected by F. obtained a judgment for its claim & afterwards, in satisfaction of the judgment, took from F. a quit-claim deed of the houses. Thereafter, the co. agreed to sell the houses to pltf. A furnace had been purchased by F. upon a conditional sale agreement with the vendor & placed in one of the houses:—Held: the furnace was not delivered to a purchaser "for the purpose of resale by him" within Conditional Sales Act, R. S. O., 1927, s. 2 (3); it was to be placed by him in the house he was building, of which it would become an integral part; a sale of the house would not be the sale of a chattel.—COLLIS v. CAREW LUMBER CO., LTD., [1930] 4 D. mm (p. 690) iii. —— —— —— Notwithstanding buyer's claim for breach of warranty.]—The fact that a buyer of goods under a conditional sale contract has asserted a claim for damages for breach of warranty does not prevent the seller from repossessing the car on the buyer defaulting in his payments.—LOVE v. MOTOR FINANCE CO., LTD., [1931] 3 W. mm (p. 690) iv. —— —— —— Effect of acceleration clause.]—In an action by the seller under a conditional sale contract the seller, who had retaken possession of the goods, set up an acceleration provision in the contract & claimed the whole of the unpaid balance of the purchase-price:—Held: although under the terms of the contract the seller had a right of action for said balance & the further right to take possession of the goods, yet the result of the bringing of the action for the balance was that the goods became the property of the buyer & the right which the seller had over them by virtue of its possession was equivalent to the unpaid seller's lien provided for by sect. 38 of Sale of Goods Act, R. S. S., 1930.—INDUSTRIAL ACCEPTANCE CORPN., LTD. v. DOUGHAN, [1932] 1 W. W. R. 619.—CAN.

nn (p. 690) i. —— —— —— ——.]—In order to hold a buyer under a conditional sale agreement who has defaulted thereunder liable for the deficiency on a resale of the goods by the seller the notice to the buyer of said resale must be in strict accordance with the requirements of Conditional Sales Act, R. S. B. C. 1924, c. 44, s. 10 (3), notwithstanding that the agreement provides that the seller can exercise the power of resale "by public or private sale with or without notice."—MARSH v. SIMPSON [1928] 1 W. nn (p. 690) ii. —— —— —— ——.]—So long as the buyer under a conditional sale agreement has five days' notice of the intended resale, whether he gets it as the result of personal service or because it is left at his place or sent to him by registered mail, the Conditional Sales Act, R. nn (p. 690) iii. —— —— —— ——.]—In an action by a vendor, under a conditional sale agreement for the balance of the purchase-price after he has repossessed & resold the goods, the defence is raised that the Act has not been complied with, the burden of proving compliance rests on the vendor.—THOMPSON v. SHOLINDER, [1928] 1 W. (p. 691) i. —— —— —— Request to retake.]—Under a conditional sale agreement which provided that on default in payment of any instalment the seller would have the right to re-enter & take possession of the goods & "to forthwith cancel this agreement," held that the retaking of possession of the goods did not in itself cancel the agreement, but that something more was required to be done in order to exercise the right of cancellation. A request by the buyer that the seller retake possession of the goods is not a waiver of the requirements of the Conditional Sales Act. In the absence of a provision in the agreement to the contrary, where a conditional sale agreement provides for the retaking possession & resale of the goods the resale contemplated must be take mentioned provisions, & a resale made without complying therewith rescinds the contract.—ADELKIND v. AMIES, [1930] 2 W. W. R. 702; [1931] 1 D. L. R. 181; 25 S. L. R. 87.—CAN.

S. A., 1922, before being resold, he cannot recover the balance remaining unpaid under said agreement if the buyer has not waived his right to the protection of said sect. The goods in question herein had been seized by pltf., the seller's assignee, under an execution issued on a judgment for the balance of the purchase-price, & were in the hands of the sheriff's bailee under said seizure when pltf. claimed & obtained possession from the sheriff in order that it might realise under its lien under the agreement:—Held: the 20 days prescribed by said sect. 10 ran from the date when possession was retaken under the agreement.—MUTUAL ACCEPTANCE CORPN. v. MCDERMID, [1930] 3 W. d (p. 692) ii.——— ——— Effect on transaction.]—Pltf. obtained judgment for the balance owing on a washing machine sold under a conditional sale contract. Pltf. had not registered the contract but relied on sect. 6a of Conditional Sales Act, R. S. A., 1922, having glued on the machine a piece of paper on which pltf.'s name was printed. Prior to pltf.'s recovery of judgment, the buyer had resold the ——— to deft., on the interpleader issue herein, who bought in good faith & for value. Before buying it said deft. asked at pltf.'s office where the original sale had been made & whether anything was owing on it. After searching its records pltf. informed deft. that nothing was owing. Pltf.'s office had through carelessness entered the account under a wrong name. The original contract provided that on default by the buyer pltf. might take the machine & treat the payments made as payments for hire or, at its option, & without demand or notice, the whole balance unpaid should become due & payable:—Held: in suing for & recovering judgment pltf. had elected said second alternative & thereby made the conditional sale an absolute one, so that it could not now insist that the property in the machine had not passed.—BEATTY BROS., LTD. v. JOHNSON & ARDLEY, [1937] 1 W. p (p. 692) i. ——— Against landlord selling goods under distress warrant.]—Goods purchased under a conditional sale agreement & not yet paid for in full were sold under a distress warrant issued by deft. co. for rent owing by assignees of the purchasers. Pltf., who had been employed by the tenants & had also become an assignee of the vendor's interest in said agreement, notified deft. co. before the distress sale of his interest in the goods. On the day of the sale he sued the tenants for wages, & in that action garnished deft. co. for the amount thereof. Out of the proceeds of the distress it paid amounts into ct. or directly to pltf. which nearly equalled his claim for wages. He then brought the present action for the balance remaining due under the conditional sale agreement: —Held: while pltf. had, it seemed, debarred himself from bringing an action for conversion, his present action was not in form one for conversion but one for money had & received for that part of the proceeds of the distress sale which he was entitled to as assignee of the original vendors; & it was, therefore, consistent with the garnishee proceedings which were directed to that part, if any, of the proceeds which the tenants were entitled to as purchasers of the goods.—CLEARWATER v. CHILDS CO. aa (p. 692) i. ——— ———.] —Pltf. co. sold a motor car, under a conditional sale agreement, to Pacific Motors, Ltd., retail dealers in cars, who sold it, also under a conditional sale agreement, to a buyer who defaulted in her payments. With pltf.'s consent, the car was taken back by Pacific Motors, Ltd., & then, with pltf.'s consent, resold to one F. under a conditional sale agreement which was assigned to pltf. F. defaulted & the car, without pltf.'s knowledge or consent, was taken back again & sold by Pacific Motors, Ltd., to deft. S. under a conditional sale agreement which the Pacific Motors, Ltd., discounted with deft. Guaranty Corpn. which took the assignment in good faith. All the agreements were duly registered. Pltf. sued for damages for conversion & also sought a declaration that it was the owner of the car & entitled to possession of it. Guaranty Corpn. disclaimed any interest in the car. The judge applying Conditional Sales Act, s. 4, & Sale of Goods Act, s. 60, held that S. had obtained title to the car & dismissed the action. hh (p. 692) i. ——— ——— Rights of joint purchaser.]—Pltfs. were the joint purchasers of a motor-car sold to them by one A. under a conditional sale agreement. Deft. became the assignee of A. The car was delivered to pltfs., but during the male pltf.'s absence from home, A. obtained possession of the car from the female pltf. & induced her to sign a bill of sale of the car from her to himself, her understanding being that he would sell the car for her for more than enough to pay the balance to be paid the deft. That balance was not then yet due.

A. then entered into another conditional sale agreement with one L. as purchaser; &, leading deft.'s manager to believe that pltfs. had given up their interest in the car, induced deft. to "finance" the L. agreement. The L. agreement fell into default, & deft. took possession thereunder of the car & resold it:—Held: male pltf. was entitled to recover from deft. the net value of his interest in the car. The co. did not construct the road within a reasonable time, or at all, & the purchaser brought an action claiming damages for breach of contract :—Held : a promise to construct a road, apart from any conveyance of the land over which it was intended to run, was not a "contract for the sale or other disposition of land or any interest in land" & consequently that an action would lie upon it, although it was oral, without infringing the provisions of Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 40 (1).—JAMESON v. KINMELL BAY LAND CO., LTD. Deft. executed the transfer prepared by pltf. & sent it to a bank for delivery to pltf. on payment of $600 & delivery of a mtge. for the $900 payable on deft.'s terms with interest at 7 per cent. Pltf. refused to agree to pay interest, & in a suit for specific performance contended that the whole contract as to interest was evidenced by the above telegram from deft. & pltf.'s reply to it. 567a. —— Waiver.]—The real estate of a testator was by his will subjected to a yearly perpetual rentcharge of £300. Upon the sale of part of the land, thirty years before the present proceedings, part of the purchase money had been paid into ct., & this money with certain securities formed a fund in ct. sufficient to provide for the annuity. Upon the former sale, the land then sold had been declared by the ct. to be free from the annuity, but no application & no declaration had been made in respect of testator's other real estate. The land now contracted to be sold remained, therefore, subject to the rentcharge, but could at any time be freed from it by an application to the ct. These lands were identified as the blue & the green land. The blue land was made the subject of a special condition, stating that it was "at one time subject to" the rentcharge, but that the purchaser should accept the fund in ct. as a full & sufficient indemnity. The green land was not stated to be subject to the rentcharge. In the course of the investigation of title, it was discovered that the green land was also subject to the rentcharge. The purchaser then objected that the blue & green lands were still subject to the rentcharge, & contended that the fund did not provide an indemnity. No objection was at this time taken to the fact that the green land had not been mentioned in the special condition. The vendor replied on May 19, 1936, that the position had been fully explained at the time the agreement for sale was entered into, & that the purchaser was bound by the special condition, which was the same as that under which the vendor had purchased. No reply to this answer of the vendor was made until July 14, when the purchaser stated that he had been advised by counsel that the special condition was a misleading one, & intended to take out the present summons. The present summons sought a declaration that the purchaser was entitled to compensation in respect of the fact that the blue land & the green land were still subject to the rentcharge, & that there was no such indemnity as the special condition represented. The vendor relied upon the incorporation of the Law Society's General Conditions, which required an answer to an objection within 7 days, & further contended that, although the rentcharge was still in fact in existence, the fund in ct. provided in effect a full indemnity, &, by a proper application to the ct., the land could at any time be freed from the rentcharge:—Held: as to the green land there was a misstatement within clause 31 of the Law Society's General Conditions; but, a complete abstract having been then delivered, the time for a further observation on the vendor's reply of May 19 was, under clause 9 (4) of the Conditions, 7 days after the delivery thereof, & the purchaser's reply on July 14 was out of time. The reply of May 19 must therefore be considered as satisfactory & barred a claim to compensation.—Re OSSEMSLEY ESTATES, LTD., [1937] 3 All E. R. 774; 81 Sol. Jo. 683, C. A.

576a. —— ——.]—Leasehold shops described in the particulars of sale as "Valuable business premises" were put up for sale by auction, subject to special conditions of sale & also to the National Conditions of Sale, by one of which, namely, the sixth, it was stipulated that the leases or copies thereof might be examined at the office of the vendors' solrs. before the sale & that the purchaser, whether or not he inspected the same, should be deemed to have bought with notice of the contents thereof. Deft. only became aware of the sale on the day when it was held &, having on that day been supplied by the auctioneers with the particulars & special conditions, but not with the National Conditions, & relying upon the truth of the description in the particulars, he bid at the sale & was declared to be the highest bidder thereat. He then signed the usual form of memorandum to the effect above stated & paid a deposit to the auctioneers. In the course of investigating the title it came to deft.'s knowledge for the first time that the leases under which the properties were held were subject to covenants which prohibited any other trade or business than that of a ladies' outfitter, fancy draper & manufacturer of ladies' clothing from being carried on upon the properties. In consequence of the existence of those restrictive covenants & the failure of the pltfs. to procure their removal or the licence of the lessors to use the properties for the purposes of any business, the deft. refused to complete the purchase. In an action by the vendors for specific performance in which deft. counterclaimed rescission of the contract & to recover his deposit:—Held: (1) a shop which could be used for one purpose only was not fairly described as "valuable business premises"; (2) such a misleading representation by pltfs. in their particulars of sale disentitled them, notwithstanding the sixth condition, to the assistance of the ct. to compel deft., who purchased in reliance upon the truth of such representation, to specifically perform his part of a contract for a consideration different from that which he was led to expect.—CHARLES HUNT, LTD. v. PALMER, [1931] 2 Ch. 287; 100 L. The particulars stated that the cottage was let to a tenant whose notice to quite had determined, but who had been allowed to remain in occupation on sufferance, & that the premises would be sold with vacant possession on completion. The statement was misleading, as the premises were in fact in the occupation of a sub-tenant, who claimed to be entitled to remain on as a statutory tenant under Increase of Rent & Mortgage Interest (Restriction) Acts, & refused to vacate them. The purchaser refused to complete without vacant possession, with which he could have resold the property at a profit, & sued the vendor for damages for breach of contract:—Held: the action

Defts. wrote to him that the length of the garden was 40 feet "approximately," but in fact, it was only 36 feet, & upon this footing the usual contract was entered into incorporating the National Conditions of Sale:—Held: this was an innocent material misrepresentation which had induced pltf. to enter into the contract; this was not an error, misstatement or omission within the National Conditions of Sale, clause 10; pltf. was entitled to rescind the contract & the return of the deposit; pltf. having alleged fraud which had not been proved, the judgment for him would be with the general costs of the action except so far as those costs had been increased by the allegation of fraud.—BELLOTTI v. CHEQUERS DEVELOPMENTS, LTD., [1936] 1 All E. 838a. —— —— ——.]—At an auction sale the purchaser bought freehold property sold subject to certain special conditions & to the General Conditions of Sale, 1925. The particulars & conditions of sale did not disclose the fact that two sewers, vested in the local authority & known by the vendors to exist, ran along the east side of the premises & along the yard at the back. Objection was taken on behalf of the purchaser. The vendors refused to release him from the contract, contending that the existence of the sewers did not prevent the use of the premises as a dwelling-house, for which the purchaser had bought them; but abatement of the purchase price was offered by way of compensation. The purchaser declined the offer, & by this summons asked for a declaration that the property was substantially different from that agreed to be sold, & for rescission, or, alternatively, a declaration that he was entitled to compensation:—Held: the failure to disclose the existence of the sewers, although materially affecting the description, did not force upon the purchaser property substantially different from that agreed to be sold; & the contract could be performed subject to compensation under Condition 35 of the General Conditions of Sale, 1925.—Re BELCHAM & GAWLEY'S CONTRACT, [1930] 1 Ch. 56; 99 L. 880a. Contract for completion "on or about" given date.]—By a contract dated Oct. 19, 1928, pltf. agreed to sell to deft. all her right, title & interest in a licensed house known as The Thorns, of which she was the licensee. The contract provided that the purchase money should be paid "on or about" Nov. 10, 1928, & that deft. should forfeit the deposit of £120 which he had paid if he should fail to fulfil his part of the contract; also that either party refusing to comply with or neglecting to perform any part of the agreement should pay to the other, on demand, the sum of £200. On Oct. 3, 1928, deft. had given to the brewers, who were the freeholders of The Thorns, references which they had accepted by Oct. 10. He went to the magistrates' clerk & signed the ordinary notices on reference to a request for a temporary transfer on Nov. 10, & for full transfer on Dec. 8. At least a week before Nov. 10 deft. knew that he would be unable to complete the purchase of The Thorns unless he could raise a loan. His brokers acting in the matter sent him a notice to attend on Nov. 10. He did so, & first saw the brewers, telling them that he could not complete, & that the notice of application for transfer would have to be withdrawn & another one given. He then arranged with pltf. that completion should take place on Dec. 8. Deft., however, did not attend to complete. On Dec. 22 deft. stated that he would complete on Jan. 30. The particulars of sale described Lot 2 as an unrestricted freehold, practically an island block, with four frontages to Little Orford Street & three other streets in Chelsea, the block forming an excellent building site, when the existing buildings came into hand. On examining the vendors' registered absolute title the purchaser found Entry 7 in the Charges Register stating in effect that on the transfer of Lot 2 & other property to the vendors on May 23, 1929, by mtgees. selling under their power of sale in a mtge, of Feb. 17, 1903, from Co. A., the former owners, the vendors by way of indemnity to the mtgees., but not further or otherwise covenanted to perform the obligations of Co. A. under a deed of Dec. 23, 1905, made between Co. A. & the Chelsea Borough Council & under a London County Council Order of Dec. 12, 1905. The deed of Dec. 23, 1905, made in pursuance of a large building scheme by Co. A. provided for the stopping up (inter alia) of Little Orford Street & for making certain new streets, including a new transverse street bisecting Lot 2. The Borough Council were to obtain the necessary Closing Orders, & Co. A. were to lay out the new streets at their own expense. By their order of Dec. 12, 1905, the London County Council on the application of Co. A. sanctioned the new streets subject to certain conditions including a condition that Co. A. should covenant to lay them out, & on Dec. 21, 1905, Co. A. covenanted accordingly. On July 10, 1906, on the Borough Council's application, the justices made a Closing Order for Little Orford Street. For financial & other reasons this part of Co. A.'s scheme had not yet been proceeded with. Little Orford Street was still open; it was in fact repaired by the Borough Council; & at the date of the contract neither the vendors nor the purchaser knew of the Closing Order's existence. On discovering Entry 7 the purchaser required the vendors to delete it from the Register & to obtain a release of the obligations, &, on their refusal, he issued a vendor & purchaser summons for a declaration that a good title was not shown. On subsequently discovering the Closing Order he discontinued the summons & brought this action claiming a declaration that he was entitled to repudiate the contract, damages for breach, & return of the deposit. The vendors denied any breach & counterclaimed for specific performance:—Held: (1) as the title of the vendors & their mtgee. predecessors was paramount to the 1905 documents, so that they were not bound by Co. A.'s obligations thereunder, & the vendors' covenant of indemnity was a mere personal covenant to indemnify the mtgees. against a non-existent liability, the purchaser was not entitled to require the removal of Entry 7 from the vendors' registered title, but must be satisfied with a clean transfer not referring to the indemnity, & it would be the Registrar's duty to omit any reference thereto in the purchaser's registered title; (2) the twenty-four years' old Closing Order did not affect the title, but, if & so far as it was inconsistent with the particulars, merely raised a case of innocent misrepresentation, on which the purchaser could neither repudiate the contract nor recover damages, his only remedy being to resist specific performance. Therefore, the purchaser's action failed on both points; (3) on the vendors' counterclaim for specific performance that there was in fact no misrepresentation in the particulars, as the word "street" even in London did not necessarily mean a public highway. There was therefore no ground for refusing specific performance.—BARNES v. CADOGAN DEVELOPMENTS, LTD., [1930] 1 Ch. 479; 99 L. J. Ch. 274; 142 L. T. 626.

1401a. Proof of ownership in fee simple—Statutory declaration of rent collector.]—The exors. of a testator, who died in 1931, entered into a contract for the sale of property described in the particulars as freehold. The sale was to be subject to the General Conditions of 1925. The vendors furnished the purchaser with an abstract of testator's will appointing them his exors., but not containing any reference to the property. The purchaser objected that this was no evidence of title, & the vendors offered to provide a statutory declaration by a person that he had collected the rents of the property & done repairs to it for the testator over a period to twenty years. The purchaser refused to accept the proposed statutory declaration :—Held : the proposed statutory declaration was insufficient to prove that testator had been seised in fee simple in possession free from incumbrances, & therefore the purchaser's objection prevailed.—Re GILBERT & FOSTER'S CONTRACT (1935), 52 T. n i. —— To knowledge of vendor—Effect of sale on action for purchase-money.]—Resp., representing the vendor, sued applt., representing the purchaser, for the balance of the price of sale of a certain parcel of land. The latter denied his liability on the ground that the property could not be transferred to him by the vendor as it had been sold for unpaid taxes ; but the vendor contended that the purchaser was still bound because the sale of the property for taxes was due to the failure by the purchaser to pay them as covenanted :—Held : resp.'s action should be dismissed. The vendor was aware that the taxes had not been paid & was looking to the purchaser for the money wherewith to pay them ; he had already collected some rent for the property which he was holding as a credit against the taxes, & it can be inferred that the vendor anticipated that payments on account of taxes, when made, would pass through his hands. When, therefore, the property was sold for taxes, it was not because the vendor was misled into a belief that the purchaser had paid or intended to pay the taxes ; the vendor had been notified, previously to the sale for taxes, that the purchaser repudiated the contract & was looking for a refund of his payments, & in withholding payment of the municipal claim the vendor acted deliberately, with a full knowledge of the facts.—ROYAL TRUST CO. v. KENNEDY, [1930] S. to the assignment of the lease &, if they failed to obtain such consent, that they would, at the option of the purchaser, procure a declaration of trust in her favour or otherwise deal with the same as she should direct. They failed to obtain the consent of the landlord. Pltf. did not ask for the declaration of trust, but commenced an action for the return of her deposit. At the trial it was held that the purchaser had failed to fulfil her part of the contract & was not entitled to the return of her deposit. Upon appeal it was contended for pltf. that the exercise of the option to take a declaration of trust would have caused a forfeiture of the lease, & her failure to exercise such option did not therefore amount to a breach of contract:—Held: the inability to obtain the landlord's consent was specially provided for in the contract, & those provisions were binding on both parties. There had therefore been a breach of contract by pltf. & the deposit must be forfeited.—PINCOTT v. MOORSTONS, LTD., [1937] 1 All E. R. 513; 156 L. T. 139; 81 Sol. Jo. 136, C. A.

The agreement between pltf. & deft. purported to entitle the latter to "possession" of definitely specified portions of the building on payment of the purchase-money:—Held: whether what pltf. agreed to sell & deft. to purchase was an interest in land, or a right in the nature of an easement, or a licence to use the compartments agreed to be sold, deft. was entitled to repudiate the contract, since pltf. under its agreement with the cemetery co., had not, & had no right to call for, such a title to or right in the compartments as would permit it to grant to deft. that unrestricted "possession" which the agreement with him called for. Moreover, the cemetery co., which held the land under an agreement for sale, had not, at the time of the repudiation, any such title to the land, the use of part of which it purported to agree to give in perpetuity to pltf., & through it to the purchasers of compartments, as could be forced upon an unwilling purchaser.—CANADIAN MAUSOLEUMS, LTD. v. IRWIN, [1933] 1 W. t i. —— Value of crop.]—In ascertaining whether an unfounded representation by a buyer or seller is open to redress in any form, the means of knowledge of the parties must be considered. If the misrepresentation is on a subject peculiarly within the knowledge of the party making it & be relied on by the other party it may be legally cognisable, but where the facts are not only available to the other party but also he applies or is able to apply unrestricted means of injury, & is not induced to withhold inquiry, the alleged misrepresentation is probably no more than "dealers' talk" in which each party from his own standpoint of buyer or seller usually indulges.
A purchaser of a farm sued for rescission of the contract of sale on the ground that he had been induced to buy by the vendor's statement that the crop, which was then cut & included in the sale but not yet threshed, was worth a certain amount which, after threshing, proved to be excessive, to the extent of about two & a half times its real value. The judge, who dealt with the representation as an innocent one, decreed rescission, & deft. appealed :—Held : because of the application of the above principle, & also because of the difficulty in finding that a representation of that kind was one which was really relied on by pltf. & went to the root of the contract, the appeal should be allowed.—RASCH v. HORNE, [1930] 1 W. These conditions contained one in the usual form enabling the vendor to rescind the contract if the purchaser made any objection or requisition which the vendor was unable or unwilling to remove or comply with. The sale broke down following the vendor's reply to a requisition of the purchaser, the vendor having added that if the purchaser insisted on the requisition he would rescind the contract, pursuant to the conditions of sale. This reply was, in the opinion of the ct., neither capricious nor unreasonable. The purchaser replied stating that he insisted on his objection, & that he required the vendor to return the deposit & the auctioneer's fees. The vendor returned the deposit, but not the auctioneer's fees, & the purchaser subsequently sued the vendor for the amount of them :—Held : as the only way in which the purchaser could recover these fees was as damages for breach of contract, & as there had been no breach of contract on the vendor's part, the claim failed.—M'MAHON v. GAFFNEY, [1930] I. sl. Fixtures—What are.]—On the question whether a certain thing is a fixture the position of an unpaid vendor with respect to a purchaser of the land, like that of a mtgee. with respect to a mtgor., is much stronger than that of a landlord where the thing is claimed by a tenant. Since the intention with which the thing was placed upon the land is one of the main factors in determining said question the inference that the real intention was that the thing should be a permanent improvement of the freehold is more readily to be drawn in the case of a purchaser who placed the thing on land which he has agreed to buy or found it already there than it is in the case where the thing is placed upon the land by a tenant. The thing in question in the present case was a two-storey building with an attached lean-to, the whole resting on stones laid on the ground, there being a dirt cellar under the main building.—PEIKOFF v. BRIGHTWELL (No. 2), [1932] 1 W. Pltf. co. agreed to purchase from deft. property of which deft. was under-lessee. Her underlease contained a covenant not to assign without the under-lessor's consent, not to be withheld in the case of a responsible assignee. The under-lessor refused a licence to assign to pltf. co., but deft.'s solrs. were informed that a licence would be granted to complete in favour of a specified nominee. The licence was in fact available, but deft. never formally applied for it; & ultimately her solrs. returned the deposit paid by pltf. co., who thereupon brought this action for specific performance:—Held: deft. could be compelled to complete in favour of the specified nominee.

LORD CAIRNS indeed seems to have considered that, if the phrase [subject to the title being approved by our solrs.] meant what the Ct. of Appeal thought it meant, it would follow that the purchaser was at liberty through the medium of his solr. to decline the title from mere caprice; but none of the judges accepted this extreme view. It is reasonable, they thought, to imply good faith as a necessary ingredient. On the other hand, it seems to be putting an undue strain on the words to construe them, when used by a layman, as connoting not the approval of his own solr., which is their plain, ordinary meaning, but the decision of a ct. of justice after an unknown delay & at an unascertainable cost (MAUGHAM, J.).—CURTIS MOFFAT, LTD. v. WHEELER, [1929] 2 Ch. 224; 98 L. 2633a. —— —— Covenant by purchaser with himself & others—Effect of Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 82.]—In 1904, three persons, B., H. & S., were the tenants in common in fee simple of certain land intended to be laid out in plots as a building estate. After several sales had taken place, the remainder of the land was in 1906 offered for sale by auction subject to certain stipulations, one of which was that every purchaser should covenant with the vendors, & so that every person for the time being entitled to any estate in the lands should have a right to the observance of such stipulations so far as they related to the covenantors' property or plot or plots as follows, namely (inter alia), that not more than two dwelling-houses should be erected on any one plot. No the property was sold at this auction, but in Feb. 1907, B., H. & S. (the vendors) sold to one of themselves, namely, B., Lots 23, 24 & 25, & 45 to 51 inclusive. These lots were conveyed by two separate conveyances each dated Feb. 20, 1907. The habendum in each conveyance to B. was in each case to be, "subject nevertheless to the . . . covenants by the purchaser (i.e., B.) hereinafter contained." These were in each case as follows: "The purchaser . . . doth hereby for himself . . . covenant with the vendors . . . (owners for the time being of any of the lands now or formerly part of the vendors' estate of which the said hereditaments form part & so that every person for the time being entitled to any estate in any such lands shall have a right to the observance & fulfilment of the stipulations in Part II. of the second schedule so far as they relate to the said hereditaments . . . hereby granted) that the stipulations last aforesaid shall be observed so far as they relate to the hereditaments last aforesaid." This Part II. contained (inter alia) the covenant referred to as one of the stipulations in the above-mentioned conditions of sale. In July, 1907, B., H. & S. sold to pltf. part of the property offered for sale by auction in 1906, namely, Lot 26 & part of Lot 27. Pltf. covenanted with the vendors to perform & observe certain stipulations therein set out which were (inter alia) similar to those in the particulars & conditions above referred to in the abortive sale by auction in 1906. Further lots were subsequently sold by B., H. & S. to various purchasers. In 1933, B. agreed to sell part of Lot 25 (the remainder having been previously disposed of) to deft., & the land was duly conveyed without any reference to the stipulations sought to be imposed by the conveyance to B. in Feb. 1907. Deft. having commenced to erect four houses on his plot of land, pltf. began an action for an injunction to prevent him from erecting more than two houses, & for damages:—Held: (1) on the question whether a building scheme existed when pltf. purchased his land in July, 1907, & if so, to what land it related; as regards the covenants contained in the conveyance by B., H. & S. to B. alone in Feb. 1907, although they were in form with B., H. & S. jointly, & although each of the covenantors had at that time a separate interest in the land retained, it was not possible to treat them as joint & several, & they were therefore void & unenforceable at the time they were entered into. It followed therefore that no restrictive covenants were in existence relating to any part of the land offered at the 1906 auction at the date when pltf. purchased his plots in July, 1907; & as no subsequent covenants were entered into, no building scheme ever therefore came into existence; (2) there was nothing in Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 82, which would enable the ct. to hold that what was insufficient to create a scheme in 1907 must by virtue of the sect. be deemed from Jan. 1, 1926, to have constituted a building scheme as from the earlier date or any intermediate date. 2658a. Separate covenant with assignees of vendor —Owners of adjacent land—Enforcement by successors.]—By a conveyance dated Apr. 21, 1887, & made between the Ecclesiastical Comrs. for England of the one part & one H. G. G. of the other part, a freehold house & land known as "W. H. House" were conveyed to H. G. G. By the conveyance H. G. G. for himself & his assigns & to the intent & so as to bind not only himself . . . but also all future owners & tenants of the said land thereby conveyed or any part thereof & so that the obligations, provisions & restrictions thereinafter expressed & contained might run with & bind the said land every part thereof into whosesoever hands the same might come covenanted with the Ecclesiastical Comrs. & their successors & also as a separate covenant with their assigns owners for the time being of the lands adjoining or adjacent to the said land thereby conveyed to observe & perform a number of restrictive covenants. There was no building scheme affecting W. H. House or the surrounding land. There were several other plots of freehold land & houses adjoining or near to W. H. House which had been conveyed by the original vendors, the Ecclesiastical Comrs., to various purchasers before the date of the conveyance of Apr. 21, 1887, & had subsequently been assigned by those purchasers. The estate owners of W. H. House & land took out an originating summons for a declaration that the said house & land were no longer subject to any of the restrictive covenants contained in the 1887 conveyance, or in the alternative that it might be determined whether the said restrictive covenants or any & which of them were enforceable, & if so by whom. Resps. included the successors in title to some of the houses & land which had been sold by the Ecclesiastical Comrs. before the date of the deed of Apr. 21, 1887. Some of these adjoined W. H. House & land & others were near but not actually adjoining thereto:—Held: on the true construction of the covenant, the land referred to as "adjacent" included certain plots of land near to but not adjoining W. H. House, & the original covenantees who were purchasers of the land so held to be adjoining or adjacent to W. H. House & the present owners of such land were entitled to enforce the covenants, although the original covenantees were not parties to the conveyance of Apr. 21, 1887.—Re ECCLESIASTICAL COMRS. One of the restrictions as set out in the sched. prohibited the erection on any plot of a house of less than a defined cubical content. Pltf. purchased a strip of one portion of the partitioned land, & deft. purchased a strip of another portion. Deft. having erected a house on the land purchased by her of less than the defined cubical content, pltf. claimed a declaration that he was entitled to enforce the restrictive covenant against her:—Held: the words "the owners or owner for the time being of the remaining hereditaments so agreed to be partitioned as aforesaid" showed a clear intention to annex the covenant to each & every portion of the partitioned land; the benefit of the covenant ran with each & every part of the land; & therefore pltf. was entitled to the declaration claimed & to an injunction restraining any further breach.—DRAKE v. GRAY, [1936] Ch. 451; [1936] 1 All E. In the Sched., which set out this stipulation, the term " vendor " was to include, where the context so admitted, his successors in title. Certain parts of the land so described were contiguous to the land sold & others more than a mile distant. In 1929, on the death of the vendor, pltf., his son, became entitled in possession as tenant in tail male to the unsold portions of the settled estates, & in 1936 he brought an action to restrain the then owner of the land sold, on which a shop had been erected, from selling fried fish there for consumption off the premises, being of opinion that this was detrimental to the neighbourhood & to his own property, though it was not sought to establish that it was a nuisance :—Held : (1) pltf. was not a person with whom the covenant was purported to be made &, therefore, could not enforce it by virtue of sect. 56 (1) of Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20) ; (2) a covenant could be made to run with land until it changed ownership on sale & thereafter only if there were an express assignment ; (3) inasmuch as the covenant did not touch or concern the whole of the land to which it was sought to annex it, the attempted annexation failed ; (4) accordingly, the covenant was not enforceable by pltf.—ZETLAND (MARQUESS) v. DRIVER, [1937] Ch. 651 ; [1937] 3 All E. In 1927 deft. built houses at prices exceeding these amounts, but these houses, owing to the great increase of building prices since 1876, were not of the type indicated by the prices of that date. Pltf. sued for an injunction :—Held : even if pltf. had been entitled to enforce the 1876 covenants against deft., failing allegation & proof of a building scheme at that date, he could not do so, deft. had not in fact broken those covenants, which, on construction, related to the building prices ruling at the time the houses were actually erected.—GRANT v. DERWENT, [1928] Ch. 902 ; 97 L. 2764a. Agreement for exclusive right to supply petrol—Whether in restraint of trade.]—By an agreement in writing pltf. agreed to sell & defts. to purchase a piece of land, adjoining other land belonging to pltf., which defts. intended to use for their business as motor coach proprietors. The sale was made subject to defts. entering into another agreement to purchase from pltf. all the petrol required for their said business. On the same date that second agreement, described as supplemental to the first, was executed, which, after reciting that pltf. was the proprietor of a petrol-filling station on the land retained by him, provided that defts. would purchase from him all the petrol required by them for the running of their said business, "at a price to be agreed by the parties in writing & from time to time" ; & further, that defts. would purchase no petrol from any other person so long as pltf. was able to supply them with quantities sufficient to satisfy their daily requirements. Clause 8 was in these terms : "If any dispute or difference shall arise on the subject-matter or construction of this agreement the same shall be submitted to arbitration in the usual way in accordance with the provisions of Arbn. Act, 1889." The land, the subject of the first agreement, was duly conveyed to defts., & for three years defts. obtained their petrol from pltf. Thereafter disputes arose between them, & thereupon defts. purported to repudiate the second agreement, alleging that it had no binding force because (a) no agreement in writing as to price had ever been made, & (b) the clause requiring defts. to take all their petrol supplies from pltf. was an unreasonable & unnecessary restraint of their trade. In an action by pltf. claiming a declaration that the petrol agreement was valid & binding, & an injunction to restrain defts. from purchasing petrol required for their said business from any person other than pltf. :—Held : (1) a term must be implied in the agreement that the petrol supplied by pltf. should be of reasonable quality & sold at a reasonable price, & that if any dispute arose as to what was a reasonable price it was to be determined by arbn. pursuant to clause 8 ; (2) inasmuch as defts. were only required to purchase petrol from pltf. for the purpose of the business carried on by them on the land purchased from pltf., & so long only as it was supplied of a reasonable quality & at a reasonable price, the obligation was not an unreasonable & unnecessary restraint of their trade ; & (3) the agreement therefore was valid & binding on defts.—FOLEY v. CLASSIQUE COACHES, LTD., [1934] 2 K. Bunsen gas burner. Above the kitchen was a bathroom. From a cupboard in the bathroom a linen chute ran down to a cupboard in the kitchen connected with the boiler by a pipe. There was no flue to carry gas or fumes from the burner to the outward air. C. B. with his wife & child went into occupation on Sept. 28. The C. Gas. Co.'s inspector examined the gas fittings & set the regulator fitted to the burner so that 45 cubic feet of gas & no more passed into burner per hour. On Oct. 26, C. B. & his wife were found dead in bathroom, poisoned by carbon monoxide gas. A few days afterwards the regulator was found so set that much more than 45 cubic feet could pass into the burner in an hour. The boiler with its burner & the linen chute were parts of the realty. The boiler with the burner properly regulated was not dangerous. It was the business of the Gas Co. & not that of the builders to regulate the flow of gas to the burner. In an action under the Fatal Accidents Act, 1846 (c. 93), by the administrators of C. B. & his wife against the builders :—Held : there was no evidence of a breach of any duty which the law cast upon defts. as vendors or lessors of the house towards C. 2922d. —— ——.]—The first pltf. contracted with defts. for the purchase of a newly-constructed house informing them that on account of the health & nervousness of the second deft. she desired to be assured that the house was well built. Defts. thereupon assured that the house was well built & the sale was completed. About a year later a large part of the ceiling in one of the bedrooms fell on the second pltf. & seriously injured her. Later there were further falls. Both pltfs. claimed damages :—Held : (1) the first pltf. was entitled to damages for breach of warranty ; (2) the claim of the second pltf. being in tort failed, as the builder of a house, even though he is building for the purpose of sale, is under no obligation towards persons who may come to live in it to take reasonable care in the building.

2922e. Action for breach of warranty—Innocent misrepresentation.]—In the particulars of an estate supplied to an intending purchaser it was stated that the estate included (inter alia) an inn & farm let at a rent of £193. The vendor intimated that he had had an offer of £250 a year, but had been unwilling to disturb the tenant. It was further stated that the estimated income from electric light supplied to the houses on the estate was £193. The electric light was generated from turbines, one of which had no meter. The vendor's agent had estimated the number of units generated, &, calculating at a flat rate, had arrived at the estimated income. In fact, the electric light was supplied at varying rates. It was further stated that there was a small revenue from water supplied to houses on the estate. No mention was made of the fact that the local authority supplied this water, & that it had to be paid for. In an action for damages for breach of warranty after completion of the sale of the estate, the purchaser relied on the facts (i) that the offer of £250 a year had been made some years previously, & not recently as the purchaser had supposed, (ii) that the electric plant did not generate as much electricity as estimated, & (iii) that no mention had been made of the outgoings in respect of water. There was no suggestion of fraudulent representation :—Held : apart from some special arrangement or some special evidence of intention, of which there was none here, a vendor does not guarantee or warrant the correctness of information given. The ct. would not allow damages for breach of an innocent misrepresentation under the guise of a breach of warranty.—TERRENE, LTD. v. NELSON, [1937] 3 All E. R. 739 ; 157 L. T. 254 ; 53 T. L. 146a. "Any husband who might survive her"—Whether applicable to divorced husband.]—A woman beneficiary under a settlement was given a power of appointment "for the benefit of any husband who might survive her." The beneficiary married, & she exercised the power of appointment in favour of her husband in the event of his surviving her. Afterwards she divorced her husband, & she died without having been remarried, leaving her divorced husband surviving her:—Held: the power could be exercised only in favour of a person who was the beneficiary's husband at the time of her death, & therefore the divorced husband did not take under the exercise of the power.—BOSWORTHICK v. CLEGG (1929), 45 T. The wife, having been divorced, remarried in 1908, & exercised the power in favour of her second husband. In 1923 the second marriage was dissolved upon the husband's petition, & the wife again remarried. She died in 1928, leaving her first, second & third husbands surviving her:—Held: the second husband, although he survived his former wife, was not entitled to any interest under the appointment of 1908, as he had ceased to be her husband on the dissolution of the marriage.—Re WILLIAMS' SETTLEMENT, GREENWELL v. HUMPHRIES, [1929] 2 Ch. 361; 98 L. 849a. Omission of power to appoint by deed.]—The pltf., by summons, asked for a compromise of an action. The action claimed rectification of the pltf.'s marriage settlement dated Sept. 29, 1910, by which, her husband having died & there being no children, the trust fund of £25,000 was held upon trust for her, & thereafter as she should by will appoint, & in default for her next-of-kin. There was no power to appoint by deed, nor any trust for the wife absolutely; but the pltf. offered to release her power over one-fifth of the trust fund of £25,000 for the benefit of her next-of-kin, upon terms that a general power, exercisable by deed or will, should be inserted :—Held : that the facts as to the making of the settlement precluded rectification, there being no evidence that the instructions given by the settlor had not been carried out. The action would have to be tried on oral evidence, but the evidence available did not justify the ct. in sanctioning the compromise.—CONSTANTINIDI v. RALLI, [1935] Ch. 427; 104 L. J. Her father died in 1869 & during the years 1871–1874 his exors. transferred the share of the settlor under her father's will to the trustees of the voluntary settlement. In 1935 the settlor requested the trustees to transfer the funds representing the above-mentioned property to her as her absolute property:—Held: the original trustees had received the settlor's share under a valid authority unrevoked, & it became impressed with the trusts contained in the settlement.—Re BOWDEN, HULBERT v. BOWDEN, [1936] Ch. 71; 105 L. 1003a. —— Equitable assignment—Covenant to pay portion of income to third party—Within three days of receipt.]—A marriage settlement provided that the wife, if she survived the husband, might appoint all or part of the income of the settled property to be paid to any subsequent husband who might survive her, until he should (inter alia) assign it. A second settlement comprised property subject to like trusts, & a third gave the wife power to appoint to any subsequent husband with or without restriction. An agreement between the wife's second husband, the wife, & a lender, for a loan to be applied by the second husband & the wife in paying certain debts, provided that, while money was owing under the agreement, the second husband & the wife should, within three days after receiving any income of the settled property, pay half of it into a specified account, that the money so paid should be used in paying the debts & repaying the loan, & that what remained should be handed to the second husband & the wife or the survivor as they should direct. A later agreement provided that the second husband & the wife, so long as any money then owing by them remained owing, would pay income into a specified account within three days after receiving it, & that when so paid it should be held in trust for payments to other parties to the agreement as well as to the second husband & the wife. The wife died, having by her will appointed, within the terms of the first settlement, an interest to the second husband in the income of the property comprised in the three settlements, until he should (inter alia) assign it:—Held: (1) the covenants in the for payment into specified accounts effected an equitable assignment of the income; (2) after the wife's death the second husband became a trustee of the income, as soon as he received it, for those intended to benefit under the agreements, although he was not obliged to pay it over immediately; (3) although no assignment was intended, the second husband, on the true construction of the agreements, had forfeited his interest.—Re GILLOTT'S SETTLEMENT, CHATTOCK v. REID, [1934] Ch. 97; 102 L. 1003b. —— Rentcharge in respect of improvements—Some improvements not authorised by statute.]—A tenant for life with a life interest defeasible on alienation carried out improvements in the principal mansion house. The Settled Land Act trustees agreed to discharge the cost out of capital moneys, & required him to execute, under Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18), s. 85, a deed creating a rentcharge to secure repayment of the cost to capital, which he did. On a summons to determine whether, if some of the improvements were not within the Act, so that more had been spent on improvements & a larger rentcharge created than the Act authorised, the defeasible interest of the tenant for life ceased on the execution of the deed:—Held: the trust giving to the tenant for life a life interest defeasible on alienation did not cease upon the execution of the deed.—Re LIBERTY'S WILL TRUSTS, BLACKMORE v. LIBERTY (STEWART), [1937] Ch. 176; [1937] 1 All E. 1008a. —— Order to raise capital money for benefit of tenant for life—Policy on tenant's life assigned to trustees—Premiums paid by tenant.]—The tenant for life of a settled legacy whose life interest was protected against any assignment or charge "whereby the income or some part thereof would if belonging absolutely to him become payable to some other person or a corpn.," with a gift over upon failure of such trust, applied to the ct. under the powers of Trustee Act, 1925 (c. 19), s. 57, for an order to authorise the trustees to raise £15,000 out of the capital of the settled legacy, which amounted to £150,000, & to apply the same in payment of his debts & generally for his benefit.

An order was made authorising the trustees to raise the money & to apply it accordingly, upon the terms that the tenant for life should effect a policy for £15,000 upon his own life & assign the same to the trustees to secure repayment of the capital raised, & that the trustees should pay the premiums on the policy out of the income unless pltf. should within seven days of each renewal date produce to the trustees a receipt for the amount of the premium paid to the insurance co. On a summons taken out to determine the question whether the tenant for life by applying for & obtaining this order had forfeited his life interest:—Held: so long as the tenant for life paid the premiums on the policy & produced the receipt for them to the trustees, so that the trustees were not called upon to apply any part of the income of the legacy in payment of the premiums, the order would not effect a forfeiture of the life interest.—Re SALTING, BAILLIE-HAMILTON v. MORGAN, [1932] 2 Ch. 57; 101 L. 1011a. —— ——.]—By the second clause of marriage articles, it was agreed, that a sum should be settled on the wife, not stating how, & the husband renounced his marital right over it during the coverture. The fourth clause provided that, in case of her death leaving issue, it should belong to the husband & children successively; the fifth gave her a power of appointment, if she died without issue; & the sixth provided that the income should, "in all cases," belong to the husband during his life. There was no express life estate given to the wife:—Held: the wife, by implication, took an immediate life estate to her separate use.—BYAM v. BYAM (1854), 19 Beav. 58; 24 L. J. Ch. 209; 1 Jur. The ultimate trust for the grandchildren was worded thus: "in trust for such of the grandchildren as being male shall have attained the age of 21 years or being female shall have married under that age":—Held: the ct. should give effect to the settlement considered as a whole & the provision for female grandchildren should be given effect to as if it read: "or being female shall have attained the age of 21 years or shall have married under that age."—Re HARGRAVES' TRUSTS, LEACH v. LEACH, [1937] 2 All E. 1059a. —— Application of accumulations during minority.]—Certain property was vested in the Public Trustee under a settlement, whereby the settlor directed him after her decease to pay the income to the tenants for life therein mentioned, & directed that after the death of any tenant for life the share of that tenant for life should be held in trust for the grandchildren of the settlor in manner therein mentioned. One of the tenants for life died in the lifetime of the settlor. A summons was taken out by the Public Trustee for the direction of the ct. as to the application of the accumulations of income of the share of the tenant for life who died in the lifetime of the settlor, having regard to the facts that (a) no grandchild of the settlor had attained the age of twenty-one years, or being female had married, at the death of the settlor; (b) one of the grandchildren of the settlor was born after the dates, when two of such grandchildren had attained the age of twenty-one years, & (c) a grandchild of the settlor, who survived the settlor, died under the age of twenty-one years:—Held: (1) the property from which the accumulated income arose must be regarded as the share to which the infant would become ultimately entitled, even though that share might be reduced by reason of other members of the class coming into existence; (2) the share of the grandchild, who had died under the age of twenty-one years, which had been provisionally assigned to that grandchild, ought to be treated as not having been properly assigned, & that portion of the money which had accrued while the infant was a member of the class, & which had not been applied in the maintenance & education of the infant, ought to be reassigned amongst the other persons who were at that time members of the class; (3) observations on the method of dealing with accumulations of income provisionally assigned to infant members of a class, having regard to Conveyancing Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 43, & Trustee Act, 1925 (c. 19), s. 31.—Re KING, PUBLIC TRUSTEE v. ALDRIDGE, [1928] Ch. 330; 97 L. 1094a. Absolute gift—Restrictions on enjoyment—Failure of trust.]—By a settlement it was provided that the trustees should stand possessed of the trust fund "in trust to divide it into seven equal shares & to appropriate one of such shares to each of the settlor's children," & it was further provided that: "The shares so directed to be appropriated to the settlor's said respective children shall not vest absolutely in them but shall be retained by the trustees & held upon the trusts" thereinafter declared. The income of each share was to be paid to the children during their respective lives, subject to determination on bkpcy., or assignment, & on the death of a life tenant the share was to be held in trust for the children of the life tenant as therein provided. In the event of a life tenant having no children a power of appointment by will was given to such life tenant of the share "given to such life tenant." The trustees were given power on the marriage of a life tenant to settle upon certain trusts all or any part of the trust fund given to such life tenant. One of the children died a bachelor & without having exercised his power of appointment by will. A summons was taken out to determine whether his share formed part of his estate, or whether being undisposed of, there was a resulting trust in favour of the settlor:—Held: upon a consideration of the settlor's intention as indicated in the settlement, there was an absolute gift in the first instance, & applying the rule in Lassence v. Tierney & Hancock v. Watson the share passed to the child's estate.—Re GATTI'S VOLUNTARY SETTLEMENT TRUSTS, DE VILLE v. GATTI, [1936] 2 All E. 1873a. —— —— ——.]—Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 28 (2), has not deprived the ct. of its inherent jurisdiction to decide, in a proper case, that the cost of certain repairs to settled land ought to be borne by capital.

The intestate died possessed of an estate which included freehold cottages in a bad state of repair. After the death the local authority served notices to carry out repairs, including re-roofing & pointing of chimney stacks. Some of these repairs, in view of the state of the property at the intestate's death, would have amounted to "permanent improvements"; & this summons, issued upon the application of the administrator of the estate, raised questions as to the incidence of their cost:—Held: (1) the cost of repairs which are "improvements" within Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18), Sched. III., Pts. I, II., may properly & primâ facie ought to be borne by capital; (2) works not being "improvements" within these parts of that Sched. may properly be so borne if they are shown to be works in the nature of permanent improvements; (3) ordinary current repairs & "casual repairs," i.e., those carried out in the ordinary course, generally at the cost of the tenant for life, cannot be treated as being "permanent improvements"; (4) Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 28 (2), does not compel Settled Land Act trustees to pay the costs of all repairs out of income, & does not deprive them of their discretion under Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18), s. 102.—Re SMITH, VINCENT v. SMITH, [1930] 1 Ch. 88; 99 L. 1956a. —— Damage to settled property in Ireland.]—A tenant for life unimpeachable for waste of an estate in Ireland & subject to Irish law was awarded £4,400 compensation for damage to the settled property. In 1869 the persons who had then become absolute owners subject to the lease settled the property in strict settlement, giving to a trustee ample powers of management, with powers to grant leases with or without covenants for renewal, & to perform any covenant for renewal previously entered into by any previous owner, or by the trustee for the time being, so that in every such appointment, lease or demise the best rent be reserved without taking any fine or premium. During the continuance of a tenancy for life under this settlement two lives dropped, & on each occasion a heriot was paid & the lease renewed by the trustee at a fine in pursuance of the covenant:—Held: the powers given to the trustee did not affect the question, & the fines & heriots were casual profits payable to the tenant for life.—BRIGSTOCKE v. BRIGSTOCKE (1878), 8 Ch. 1979a. Annuity charged on leaseholds—Compulsory sale.]—A settlement was made in 1892 of (inter alia) an annuity of £300 charged on & payable out of certain leasehold properties. The settlement provided that the trustees should pay the annuity of £300 to one H. during her life & after her death to her husband, & after the death of the survivor of those two to their three daughters during their lives with remainder to the daughters' children. H. & her husband having died, their three daughters were entitled to the income, & the children of the daughters were entitled to the capital. The settlement also provided that if & when H. & her husband or the survivor of them should so require, & after the death of the survivor of them if & when the trustees or trustee should in their or his uncontrolled discretion think it expedient, the trustees or trustee should sell the annuity of £300 & invest the proceeds in a manner specified in the settlement. The annuities in question were in fact redeemed by the owner of the leasehold properties under the provisions of sect. 191 of the Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 191:—Held: sect. 191 enabled a compulsory sale to be made, & the trustees could not be said to have exercised any discretion in the matter one way or the other. The capital money resulting from the compulsory sale must be treated as though the annuity were still subsisting so far as the relative rights of the tenants for life & the remaindermen were concerned. The trustees should sell in each year sufficient of the capital to produce with the income £300 a year, less income tax, which was to be paid to the tenants for life.—Re CARR'S SETTLEMENT, RIDDELL v. CARR, [1933] Ch. 928; 102 L. 1998a. Distribution of capital assets.] — A limited co. not in liquidation can make no payment by way of return of capital to its shareholders except as a step in an authorised reduction of capital. Any other distribution of money, whether called dividend or bonus or any other name, can only be made by way of dividing profits. Moneys so paid to a shareholder who is a trustee consequently will belong primâ facie to the person beneficially entitled to the income of the trust estate. If the moneys or any part of them are to be treated as corpus, there must be some provision of the trust deed which brings about that result; no statement by the co. or its officers can affect the rights of the beneficiaries in the matter.

In 1925 a pastoral co. in New South Wales sold substantially the whole of its lands, live stock & other assets, & ceased to carry on its business. In 1926 a dividend was declared & paid as "a distribution of capital assets in advance of the winding up." No question arose in the appeal as to that dividend. In Nov. 1927, the co. declared & paid a dividend, stating that it was paid out of the sale of the breeding stock. Upon an originating summons issued by trustees, who held over two-thirds of the shares issued, the Supreme Ct. held that the dividend should be treated as capital of the trust estate. Upon appeal to the Privy Council resps., while supporting that decision, contended alternatively that the dividend could not have been paid but for a breach of duty by the trustees in not opposing resolutions passed in 1926 altering one of

For some years the co. was unable to pay the dividend on the preference shares, & ultimately an arrangement was made by the co. with the sanction of the ct. that the preference shareholders should receive two-thirds of the ordinary shares in satisfaction of all outstanding dividends. The trustees of the will were not entitled by their holdings of shares to control the action of the co. in this respect. 2026a. ——.]—Subject to certain bequests & dispositions, a testator who died in May, 1931, by his will gave the residue of his estate to his trustees for conversion & investment & directed that the investments representing such residue should be held upon trust as to certain parts for his children therein named, such parts to be settled upon certain trusts. Testator's residuary estate consisted (inter alia) of £100 preference shares & £100 ordinary shares in B. B., Ltd. By the articles of B. B., Ltd., it was provided that "the profits of the co. which it shall from time to time be determined to divide in respect of any year or other period shall be applied first in paying the fixed cumulative preference dividend on the capital paid up on the preference shares to the close of such year or other period & subject thereto in paying a dividend for such year or other period on the capital paid up on the ordinary shares." At the date of testator's death £1 per share had been paid up on the ordinary shares, but nothing on the preference shares. No dividend had been declared before Mar. 1931. By legislation in the Union of South Africa, B. B., Ltd., would become liable, in the event of its not distributing in each year dividends amounting to 75 per cent. of its profits in the Union, to a special super-tax. By an arrangement with the inland revenue, B. B., Ltd., which owed a large sum in respect of income tax, super tax & sur tax, was not to make any distribution by way of dividend until such sum should be discharged. In 1932 an interim dividend was declared on the ordinary shares " out of the profits of the co. for the year 1931." In 1933 an interim dividend was declared which was to be paid " first out of the accumulated profits of the year to Dec. 31, 1924, & if these should not suffice then recourse to be had to the profits of the year to Dec. 31, 1925." Interim dividends were declared in 1934, & 1935, payable similarly out of undistributed profits for the years 1925, 1926 & 1927. When these dividends were declared calls were made upon the ordinary shares which were satisfied out of the dividends declared. A summons was taken out to determine whether the dividends were income or capital of testator's residuary estate or fell to be apportioned between income & capital, & if so on what basis :—Held : the interim dividends were for the years in which they were respectively declared ; upon the evidence the intention of the co. was a distribution of profits & not the capitalisation of the amount of the dividends & the dividends declared after testator's death must be treated as income.—Re JOEL, JOHNSON v. JOEL, [1936] 2 All E. 2131a. Repayment of income tax.] — Testator directed that his residuary estate should be held in trust for such of his sons as should attain the age of twenty-one years & such of his daughters as should attain that age or marry. He further directed his trustees to hold the share of a daughter in trust to pay her the income thereof during her life, & after her death in trust for such persons as she should by will appoint, & in default of appointment in trust for all her children in equal shares, & in default of any issue of a daughter in trust for his other sons or daughters as part of their shares. Testator died in 1906, leaving one son & one daughter. The daughter attained the age of twenty-one years in 1926, & married in 1927. There was issue of that marriage one son. In 1927 the daughter claimed, under Income Tax Act, 1918 (c. 40), s. 25), repayment of moneys paid or deducted on account of tax in respect of the income of her share accumulated under the will during her minority. In 1928 the Board of Inland Revenue admitted her claim in this respect to the amount of £7,770 19*s.* 4*d.*, & that amount had been paid to her. A question was then raised whether that sum should be treated as an accretion to the capital of the daughter's share, or whether she was entitled to it absolutely :—Held : the daughter was entitled absolutely to the sum of £7,770 19*s.* 4*d.* —Re FULFORD, FULFORD v. HYSLOP, [1930] 1 Ch. 71 ; 99 L. One of the tenants for life having died, in order to pay the death duties then payable the trustees sold certain securities. At the time of the sale dividends were accruing, part of which had accrued in the lifetime of the deceased tenant for life. The dividends were subsequently received by the purchasers. The personal representatives contended that the rights of the tenant for life could not be affected by the trustees dealing with the shares before the dividends were paid & asked for an apportioned part of the dividends to be paid to them out of the purchase price. There was no difficulty in ascertaining the amount of the apportioned part of the dividends :—Held : the dividends ought to be so apportioned & the personal representatives of the tenant for life were entitled to receive the sum representing the proportion of the dividends which accrued up to the date of the death of the tenant for life on the securities so sold.—Re WINTERSTOKE'S WILL TRUSTS, GUNN v. RICHARDSON, [1937] 4 All E. 2243b. —— —— Opposition to Bill in Parliament.]—An estate was settled by the will of a testator, his widow being the first, & his nephew the second tenant for life. During the lifetime of the widow she expended out of her own moneys various sums in making improvements upon the estate. Some of these sums were expended before, & some after the commencement of Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38). With regard to those which were expended after the commencement of the Act, no scheme was, prior to the execution of the works, submitted for approval, either to the trustees of the settlement or to the ct., in accordance with sect. 26 of the Act. The widow also, prior to the commencement of the Act, paid out of her own moneys the costs of the successful opposition of the trustees to some bills in Parliament, which contained provisions injuriously affecting the estate. The repayment to the widow of all the sums thus expended by her was secured by four bonds given to her by the nephew. After the death of the widow the nephew, being then tenant for life in possession of the estate, applied to the ct. of a direction to the trustees to apply capital money in their hands in payment of the amounts due upon the bonds :—Held : independently of Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 36, the ct., under its general jurisdiction, had power to direct the payment of the costs of the Parliamentary opposition out of the capital money, & payment was directed accordingly.—Re ORMROD'S SETTLED ESTATE, [1892] 2 Ch. 318; 61 L. In three successive years the rents & profits received were insufficient to pay in full the jointure & the interest on the portions, & the co. voluntarily & without any arrangement with or notice to other persons interested in the estates made up the deficiency :—Held : (1) the jointure & the interest on portions were a continuing charge on the settled estates; (2) during the lifetime of the tenant for life, or so long as the settled estates remained unsold, it could not be shown that when the final account of the life tenancy was taken there would be a deficiency in the total rents & profits; (3) accordingly, during that period no claim for recoupment of a deficiency in one or more years could be sustained.—Re WARWICK'S SETTLEMENT TRUSTS, GREVILLE TRUST CO. v. GREY, [1937] Ch. 561; [1937] 2 All E. In 1925 there was a resettlement by a disentailing deed under which a jointure rentcharge was created & certain charges by way of legal mtge. were made for raising jointures & portions. In 1932 appct., who was beyond dispute the tenant for life of the 1925 resettlement, by a voluntary settlement appointed & granted the settled estates to trustees in fee simple subject to the mtges. & all equitable incumbrances affecting the same upon trust that the trustees should, as soon as they lawfully could, for the purpose of giving effect to the trust for sale thereby given them in respect thereof, obtain a grant of the legal estate in the estates. By a further clause it was declared that the powers of a tenant for life under Settled Land Act were conferred upon the appct. during his life & after his death upon the trustees of the 1932 settlement :—Held : as Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18), s. 23 (1), vests the powers of a tenant for life in the person of full age on whom such powers are conferred by the settlement, appct. was, by virtue of the clause in the settlement of 1932, the tenant for life of the compound settlement.—Re BEAUMONT SETTLED ESTATES, [1937] 2 All E. 2738a. Restriction on power of letting.]—Testator by his will, dated Nov. 22, 1927, directed his trustees to retain £3,000 & to apply the interest yearly in payment of the taxes, rates & repairs of his freehold house, & he desired that his aunt should "have the use of it & my furniture free of cost for her occupation during her life or so long as she may require them, but without the power to sub-let the same or any part thereof. On the termination of her occupation the house is to be sold," & from the proceeds, added to the above £3,000, certain specific legacies were given. He also directed that when the house had been sold, his nephew, G. P., should have the furniture:—Held: (1) the provision forbidding the tenant for life to sub-let was void under Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18), s. 106 (1), & the provision requiring the house to be sold & the gift over of the proceeds of sale upon the termination of her occupation was also avoided by that sub-sect., so far as that provision would operate in the event of her exercising any of her powers as tenant for life; (2) the gift over of the £3,000 was a provision which tended to induce her to abstain from exercising her powers of leasing as a tenant for life, & was void, therefore, in so far as it had that tendency; & that it should be read to take effect only upon her ceasing to reside for any reason other than the exercise of her powers of leasing as a tenant for life; (3) in the event of her selling the house she would not be entitled to be paid any part of the income of the £3,000; (4) she was entitled to the furniture during her life or until she ceased to occupy the house for any reason other than the exercise of her powers as tenant for life.—Re Patten, Westminster Bank v. Carlyon, [1929] 2 Ch. 276; 98 L. 2739a. —— —— ——.]—By this will dated Jan. 4, 1918, the testator bequeathed his leasehold house, garden & grounds, W. Ct., together with the fixtures & fittings & all his furniture, pictures (except some), china, plate, linen, grand piano, & all chattels & other effects therein, to his trustees upon trust to permit his sister, E., to reside there after his death, if she should wish to do so, & to have the use & enjoyment thereof during her life free of rent or other payment, & he gave to his sister the use & enjoyment of his said house, garden, & grounds, & everything contained therein, for her life accordingly, & he directed his trustees after her death or during her life if she should not wish to reside or continue to reside there to sell the same (except certain articles therein), with power to postpone such sale as they might think proper, & divide the proceeds between certain charities. He died on June 26, 1918, & the lady entered into possession thereof immediately. In 1925 she went abroad temporarily for the benefit of her health, the place being left in charge of servants, & she paid the Sched. A. tax. In 1926, owing to severe illness, she was prevented from returning to England, & the house was let by her from time to time, & she still paid Sched. A. tax thereon. In 1927 she sold the house as tenant for life or a person having the powers of a tenant for life, & shortly after the contents, other than the excepted articles, were sold by the trustees. On a summons taken out by the trustees asking whether she had any, &, if any, what interest in the proceeds of sale of the leasehold property & the income thereof:—Held: on the evidence, it must be deemed that those powers were properly exercised by her. The power of sale in the trustees never arose, nor did they purport to exercise it. She had not therefore forfeited her interest in the proceeds of sale of the leasehold property or the income thereof.—Re Acklom, Oakeshott v. Hawkins, [1929] 1 Ch. 195; 98 L. J. Ch. 44; 140 L. 2739b. —— —— ——.]—Under the will of a testator who died in 1879, the C. Estate stood limited to the use of his grandson O. for an estate in tail, with remainder to the use of testator's daughter V. W., her heirs & assigns. V. W., who died in 1919, by her will devised the estate to which she was so entitled in remainder, to the use of certain persons successively in strict settlement subject to a condition that if the person who should so become entitled to that estate as tenant for life or tenant in tail should fail to reside at C. House for a certain part of every year, the estate of such person therein should cease & determine. Testatrix then bequeathed her residuary estate upon trust for her nephew O. for life & directed that, after his death, in case the C. Estate or the greater part in value thereof should not then devolve upon the limitations of her will, a sum of £10,000 should be raised out of her residuary estate & held upon trust for certain charitable purposes, & that the remainder should be upon trust for the persons therein named. The main question was whether, in the event of O. (who was tenant in tail in possession & also the heir at law & sole next of kin of testatrix & had no intention of disentailing the estate) exercising his power of sale over the estate under Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18), the residuary estate of testatrix would fall to be administered under the trusts declared by her will concerning the same:—Held: (1) in the event aforesaid, upon the proper construction of testatrix's will, the C. Estate would not on the death of O. devolve upon the limitations of the will, with the result that the condition upon which the disposition of her residuary estate depended would be fulfilled; (2) as the effect of that disposition would be to prevent the residuary estate from passing, as upon an intestacy, to O. as sole next of kin of the testatrix, it would necessarily tend to induce him to abstain from exercising his power of sale under Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18), within sect. 106 of that Act; &, accordingly, the residuary estate would, subject to O.'s life interest therein, pass to him as upon an intestacy, by reason of the invalidity of the disposition thereof contained in testatrix's will.—Re ORLEBAR, ORLEBAR v. ORLEBAR, [1936] Ch. 147; 105 L. The judge in Chambers refused the application, holding that he had no jurisdiction, as the scheme was not for the benefit of the settled land:—Held: on appeal, the ct. had jurisdiction, inasmuch as the sect. was wide in its terms & applied not only to the settled land but also to persons interested under the settlement. The scheme being for the benefit of persons interested under the settlement, the appeal must be allowed & effect given to the scheme.—Re WHITE-POPHAM SETTLED ESTATES, [1936] Ch. 725; [1936] 2 All E. 2889a. Power to vary leases—Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18), s. 59—Construction of section.]—It is apparent, in my opinion, that Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18), s. 59 (1), is dealing only with a question of form, because it is clear from the final words of sect. 59 (1) that no more is being authorised than what might have been done under Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18), s. 52 (1). The provision in question is that "every such lease or grant shall, after such variation, release, waiver or modification as aforesaid, be such a lease or grant as might then have been" granted after a surrender, etc. In my opinion sect. 59 (1) is not limited to cases where the result of the variation, release, waiver or modification will at common law effect a surrender & regrant. This section is conferring a power on the tenant for life to execute documents in a particular form which he could have executed in another form as the result of the surrender or the surrender & regrant of the land previously dealt with. It relates to the widest possible release, variation, waiver or modification, including cases in which only part of the land comprised in the old lease or grant is the subject of those alterations (MAUGHAM, J.).—Re SAVILE SETTLED ESTATES, SAVILE v. SAVILE, [1931] 2 Ch. 210, 216; 100 L. 3049a. —— Private Act & three conveyances.]—On the death intestate of the tenant in tail in possession of an estate settled by a private Act & three conveyances, it was held that the Act & conveyances together constituted one settlement & the ct. appointed two trustees for the purposes of the Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18), & gave them liberty to apply for a grant of administration limited to the settled lands.—Re HEREFORD'S SETTLED ESTATES, HEREFORD v. DEVEREUX, [1932] W. 3074b. Contents—Vesting deed on resettlement—Compound settlement.]—X. & Y., the trustees of an indenture of resettlement dated Aug. 26, 1915, by which certain property was settled subject to a jointure, executed on May 1, 1926, a vesting deed reciting the resettlement & purporting to vest the property in the tenant for life. On Dec. 31, 1925, X. was the sole surviving trustee for the purposes of the Settled Land Acts of an indenture of settlement dated July 12, 1882, which together with the resettlement & two other documents formed the compound settlement of the property. On July 5, 1926, the tenant for life entered into four contracts for the sale of a portion of the property to a purchaser. The purchaser raised objections to the title on the ground that the vesting deed was not framed in accordance with the provisions of the Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18): (a) as it only dealt with the resettlement & not with the compound settlement; (b) as it was not executed by the trustees of the compound settlement; & (c) as it did not contain the names of the persons who were the trustees of the compound settlement. The tenant for life took out a summons for a declaration that a good title the vesting deed did not comply with the requirements of the 1925 Act with reference to the compound settlement & the tenant for life was not able to exercise his statutory powers as tenant for life in respect of the disposal of his property; & the summons must be dismissed.—Re CAYLEY & EVANS' CONTRACT, [1930] 2 Ch. 143; 99 L. 3074c. —— Description of trustees as trustees of principal settlement—Sufficiency.]—A vesting deed, executed with the intended object of giving effect to the provisions of Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18), with regard to the vesting of settled land in a tenant for life, contained a statement that the trustees, who were executing the deed, were trustees of the principal settlement, but it contained no reference to the fact that they were trustees of a compound settlement, consisting of the principal settlement & other documents :—Held : the trustees were sufficiently described, & the vesting deed was a valid & effectual principal vesting deed, made pursuant to Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18), in respect of the land comprised in the compound settlement, constituted by the various documents.—Re CURWEN, CURWEN v. GRAHAM, [1931] 2 Ch. 341; 100 L. 3138. For the existing paragraph substitute the following paragraph :—

—— —— Settled land.]—By the will of testator, who died in 1884, his real estate was devised to trustees upon trust to permit his widow to receive the rents thereof during her life, & after her decease upon trust to pay same to or for the benefit of such of his two daughters, E. & M., as should be then living & should for the time being be single & unmarried in equal shares if more than one, & when both should be married upon trust as to both capital as well as income for all testator's children in equal shares. Testator's widow died in 1889, & on the death of E., in 1927, questions arose as to the respective interests of E. & M. & testator's children in the income & capital of the real estate. The ct. having decided that E. & M. were entitled to the income of the real estate during their joint lives in equal shares, & upon the death of E. her sister M. became entitled to the whole of the income during her spinsterhood, & upon her marriage or death the whole estate would become divisible in equal shares between the children of testator, the further question arose whether, on Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), coming into force, the devised real estate vested in the then surviving trustee of the will upon the statutory trusts under Sched. I., Part IV., par. 1 (1), or in her or the Public Trustee under par. 1 (3) :—Held : (1) as the purposes of the trusts of testator's will were such as might continue beyond the life of his widow, the real estate devised by the will was, at the date of Law of Property Act, 1925, coming into force, by the effect of Wills Act, 1837 (c. 26), s. 31, vested in the then surviving trustee of the will in fee simple in trust for E. & M., who were then beneficially interested in equity until one of them should marry or die in undivided shares vested in possession ; (2) although their interests were not absolute interests, the case fell within Sched. I., Part IV., par. 1 (1), & the real estate thereupon vested in the trustee of the will upon the statutory trusts ; (3) when a case fell within par. 1 (1) it did not become necessary to consider whether it fell within any of the subsequent sub-paragraphs.—Re DAWSON'S SETTLED ESTATES, [1928] Ch. 421 ; 97 L. 3138a. —— —— ——.]—Testator, who died on June 16, 1881, leaving a widow & eight children, by his will gave all his estate to his wife & four children, whom he appointed exors. & trustees, upon trust to pay his debts, etc., & bequeathed the remainder of his personal effects to his wife & the income of his freeholds & leaseholds, subject to certain payments, & after her decease to pay such income to his four sons & daughters in certain shares, which were to cease at death, with a proviso as to four quarterly payments to widows of sons, &, subject thereto, gave his estate to the longest liver of his children absolutely. The widow died in 1900, & on the coming into force of the Law of Property Act, 1925, the deft. & daughter, who had since died, were the surviving trustees. All parties interested in the estate now desired a sale, & the question raised by this summons was first, whether pltf. & deft. R., the surviving trustee, were together tenant for life for the purposes of the Settled Land Act. Secondly, if it be not settled land, whether the entirety was now vested in the surviving trustee, or in the Public Trustee on the statutory trusts :—Held : Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), Sch. I., Pt. IV., para. 4, added by the amending Act of 1926, was not applicable to the case; &, secondly, having regard to Wills Act, 1837 (c. 26), s. 31, & following Re Dawson's Settled Estates, No. 3138, the entirety was now vested in the surviving trustee under para. 1 (1), upon the statutory trusts.—Re BARRAT, BODY v. BARRAT, [1929] 1 Ch. 336 ; 98 L. 3143a. —— Only one trustee—Vesting of land in Public Trustee.]—Under & by virtue of the will of a testator who died in 1921, & of subsequent dispositions, acts in the law & events, the legal estate in certain freehold land was, immediately before the commencement of the Law of Property Act, 1925, vested in two persons for their lives share & share alike, the legal estate in remainder expectant upon the lives of those persons & the life of the survivor of them being vested in a single trustee upon trust after the death of the surviving tenant for life to sell the land & divide the proceeds between the testator's nephews & nieces. Upon a summons by the tenants for life, who were desirous of selling the land, to have it determined in whom, upon the coming into force of the Law of Property Act, 1925, the land was vested: — Held: (1) as immediately before the commencement of that Act the land was held at law & in equity in undivided shares, vested in possession, & the entirety thereof was settled land, Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), Sched. I., Part IV., para. 1, sub-para. 3, would apply, if there were more than one trustee of the settlement constituted by the will, in whom the land could vest as joint tenants; but that, as there was only one trustee, the land vested, under clause (i) of the proviso to that sub-para., in the Public Trustee upon the statutory trusts; (2) if, before the Public Trustee accepted the trust, the present trustee (who before the commencement of the Law of Property Act, 1925, was the trustee of the settlement constituted by the will for the purposes of the Settled Land Acts then in force) appointed an additional trustee or trustees of that settlement, the land would vest in the trustees of the settlement as joint tenants upon the statutory trusts.—Re PRICE, PRICE v. PRICE, [1929] 2 Ch. 400; 98 L. 3143c. ——.]—Immediately before the commencement of the Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), the legal estate in land was outstanding in the personal representatives of the settlor & held upon the trusts of a marriage settlement which, in the events which had then happened, were for two daughters of the settlor in undivided shares absolutely:—Held: as the personal representatives then held the land in trust for the daughters in undivided shares vested in possession, they held it, after the Act came into force, upon the statutory trusts, by virtue of Sched. I., Part IV., sub-para. 1 (b) of the Act, with the result that the settlement trustees were not entitled, as, but for Part IV., they would be to call for a conveyance of the legal estate; but the personal representatives held the land on trust for sale & were entitled to sell the same, unless the daughters elected to call for a conveyance.—Re FORSTER, SOMERVILLE v. OLDHAM, [1929] 1 Ch. 146; 98 L.
